PREDICTION COMES TRUE

Maureen Lovelady Pennyfeather, who is the keeper of the horoscopes for this newspaper, likes to talk with young people who she thinks have promise. She likes, as well, to forsee their future. She takes her forecasts to a notary public, has them signed and sealed, then files them away. When we told her that Alice Faye would be coming again to Broadway, this time on stage instead of on screen, this is what she sent us: 'Alice Faye, who has grown up right in our own back yard, on the West Side of New York City, is only a dozen years old, but already I can see that she is really going to be Somebody, and that what she does will be in the world of entertainment.

The first man I see in her future is George White, and the horoscope says that he will put her in the dancing chorus of his next stage extravaganza, 'George White's Scandals.' I believe that Ethel Merman and Rudy Vallee will be in the cast, and that after 'Scandals' has run its course Rudy Vallee will take her along as the soprano in his band. Anyway, she is sure to turn up in Hollywood, and at just the right time, because Hollywood will be going nuts about movie musicals, and Alice Faye can sing. Irving Berlin will hear about her, and he will write for her songs like 'This Year's Crop of Kisses,' and she will sing them in a chiahtly sad but also slightly wonderful way that people will never forget.

But to get back to Hollywood. The new men I see in her future will be almost anyone the movie buffs ever heard of, because she will be making pictures for a long, long time. One of these films will be 'Scandals,' in which she will be not a girl in the chorus, kicking up her pretty legs, but the leading female. That shows how fast she will go onward and upward. In this film the men in her life will be Jimmy Durante, Rudy Vallee and Cliff Edwards, the famous Ukelele Man. In 'Now I'll Tell' she will have Spencer Tracy for herself in 'She Learned About Sailors' she will have Lew Ayres; in '365 Nights in Hollywood' it will be James Dunn; in 'Every Night at Eight' it will be George Raft, and her girl friends will be Frances Langford and Patsy Kelly; in 'King of Burlesque' it will be Warner Baxter and Jack Oakie; in 'Poor Little Rich Girl' she will have Jack Haley, and Shirley Temple will creep into her life; in 'Sing, Baby, Sing' it will be Adolphe Menjou.

Then, in 'Stowaway' she'll get around to Robert Young; then Dick Powell will enter her life in 'On the Avenue,' and that's when she'll get to knock us all out forever with 'This Year's Kisses.' Shall I go on? Well, why not, because we haven't even mentioned Walter Winchell and Ben Bernie, who get to meet her in 'Wake Up and Live' and listen ta her sing—like all the rest of us—'There's a Lull in My Life.' And shouldn't I say something about 'You Can't Have Everything'? After all, the Ritz Brothers and Don Ameche will be there, and Tony Martin and Louis Prima.

And when Alice Faye gets around to making 'Rose of Washington Square,' in which everyone will, with good reason, think that she is playing the life of Fanny Brice, she will have Tyrone Power and Al Jolson in tow. Don Ameche will show up to help her make 'Hollywood Cavalcade,' and Fred MacMurray and Andy Devine will join up with her for 'Little Old New York.' She will be a stunning Lillian Russell, later on, and her newest gentlemen friends will be Edward Arnold, Warren William, Weber & Fields and Eddie Foy, Jr. Have I forgotten anybody in the more than thirty—I do see more than thirty pictures she will make?

Frances Longford, Alice Faye and Patsy Kelly in Every Night At Eight—1935.

Yes, I see that I have forgotten 'Tin Pan Alley,' which I believe will offer us not only Fabulous Faye but Betty Grable and Jack Oakie and John Payne—John Payne in a pin-striped suit, a neatly figured tie, a modest stickpin in that tie, and a gentle, amused smile. Of all the men in her life, we are going to love John Payne the most, I think. But Alice Faye is not going to marry him, even though we will so much want her to. No, I say that she is going to marry Phil Harris, a band leader very much in the public eye, and the public ear, and that she is going to produce two nice little girls for him. But she is not going to leave Hollywood, for I see 'The Great American Broadcast,' where we will find Cesar Romero and the Four Ink Spots paying careful attention to her.

John Payne, his necktie and his Arrow collar and his smile as neat as ever, will be there, too. Mr. Payne will graduate to a bow tie for 'Weekend in Havana,' but he will still be faithful to Our Alice, and Carmen Miranda will join in the fun. And then 'Hello, Frisco, Hello' for which John Payne will graduate into white tie and tails when he goes about at night with Our Alice.

Then—oh, dear—I see a rift. Yes, Our Alice is withdrawing from the films to become a proper housewife. Is it forever? Yes? No! Quite a gap, and suddenly there she is, in 'State Fair,' with Pat Boone and Bobby Darin and Tom Ewell and Wally Cox. Now the horoscope clouds over, and I can see nothing. Then the light shines once more, and I see that Harry Rigby, who my forecast tells me will revive 'No, No, Nanette' and 'Irene' on Broadway, is talking to Our Alice. But she is shaking her head. Then she is nodding it, and then she is coming East to begin rehearsals in Mr. Rigby's revival of 'Good News.' Oh, that is Good News indeed.'

Well, thank you, Maureen Lovelady Pennyfeather. Nice to hear from you. We have checked up on what you have told us, and we find that it has all come true. How about that?

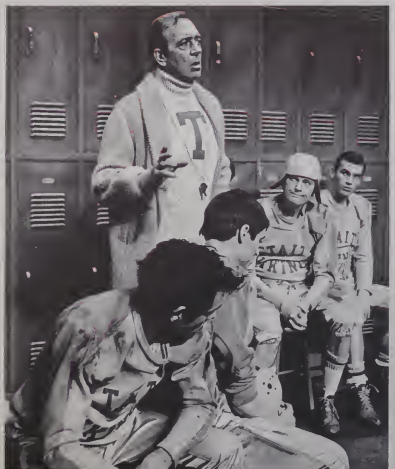
JOHN PAYNE

Stage Role For Screen Favorite

John Payne had been quietly minding his own business (real-estate business, mostly) for quite a number of years, and was doing nothing more energetic than sitting in his living room, staring at a television set on which, he recalls, the Oakland Raiders and the Kansas City Chiefs were putting on a pretty good game of football, when his telephone rang. When he realized what the call was all about, he motioned to his wife to keep an eye on the set until his conversation was over, and took the rest of the call in the next room. By the time the conversation was over, the game was over, too, and although his wife had dutifully noted down what details of it she thought would be of interest to him, he still has no idea of how the game came out.

PEP TALK!



Payne as Tait Coach Johnson gives the team an encouraging word.

The call was from New York, and the notion in back of it was that he should think about getting back into harness for a return to Broadway—a place he hadn't visited since the nineteen-thirties. He had, the man on the other end of the telephone wire was saying, been taking it easy too long—resting on the rim of his swimming pool in the sun and resting indoors on his laurels, so many laurels, in fact, that he had had to enlarge his living room. After all, John Payne had—since he had left Broadway for Hollywood—made no fewer than eighty-four movies. And the four movies in that lot that had interested his caller were the famous ones he had made with Alice Faye—"Tin Pan Alley," "The Great American Broadcast," "Weekend in Havana," and "Hello, Frisco, Hello." The caller was Harry Rigby, who had already been responsible for bringing back to Broadway two well-loved musical comedies—"No, No, Nanette" and "Irene" and who was getting ready to bring back "Good News." John Payne had been only once on Broadway, but he had oppeared that once in one of the best-remembered revues of all time—"At Home Abroad," in which Beatrice Lillie had charmed the ears off everyone within listenina distance.

John Payne began his career in this happening as an understudy to one of Miss Lillie's most distinguished co-workers, Reginold Gardiner, a neat and nimble Englishman—and a handsome one, too—who was skillful enough to be a perfect foil for the star of the evening in a few rapid-fire sketches of matchless merriment. Asking Mr. Payne to fill in, now and then, for such a performer was indeed a compliment, and when the time came he stood up to the test so well that someone in the audience who had dropped in from Hollywood liked what he saw, so Mr. P was soon on his way out there. He will be well remembered for his first picture, "Dodsworth," an adaptation of the celebrated novel by Sinclair Lewis, and a rather "serious" film; and he will be well remembered for his much later "Miracle on 34th Street," a notable success. But it is the four films in which he was co-partner with Alice Faye—films in which a spirit of prankishness and of never-a-care-in-the-world prevailed—that he won his true fame. These were movies in a spirit that doesn't seem to be around much anymore—whether in real life or on film—and in them this good-looking, debonair, easygoing young man was as fine a foil out on the Coast for Alice Faye as he had been in New York for Beatrice Lillie.

Today, on-stage, this pair of lovers are back together again—bickering, scuffling, almost fighting at times, but nevertheless a pair of lovers. As we watch the two of them waltzing through their nightly battle of wits and words, we get the feeling that it will be a long time before John Payne gets back to minding his real-estate empire and looking at the next meeting of the Oakland Raiders and the Kansas City Chiefs. And when he does, he will have a new laurel to add to the stack of eighty-four that already decorate his living room.

STUBBY KAYE

FUNNY-MAN Back on Boards

There is a story going around about Stubby Kaye, and it would be fun to believe that it is true. Here is how it goes:

Stubby Kaye is only a stage name. The man's true name is Stubby Kaye, a name he gave himself soon after he was born, several years after the death of both his parents. The clever young man so named himself after his uncle, Porfirio Mithradates Diaz, dictator of the Central American republic of Costa Rica.

Stubby Kaye's native land. He took this name in the hope that his uncle would adopt him as a son, and this is exactly what happened. All went well for a time. The young man was a popular figure at all the embassy parties, and quickly picked up a smattering of several languages. "Nom de Dieu, nom d'un chien; now what could they mean?" he could be heard saying to himself upon his return, late at night, to the dictatorial palace. "Now, son,' said his adopted father one day, "what do you want to be when you grow up?" "A dictator like you, Daddy," Kaye piped in his childish treble. "Damnation and all!" Mithradates Diaz shouted in reply. "Costa Rica is not big enough for two dictators. Get out of here."

For a considerable time thereafter, Kaye picked up a modest income by selling matchbooks outside the grand opera house as he stood there deep in snow. Costa Rica is close to the Equator, and snow is therefore almost unknown. To arouse the proper sympathy for his plight, the plucky lad had to manufacture his own snow. It is reported, on the authority of the Weather Editor of El Telegrafico, the leading local journal that Kaye did a most creditable snow job. During the week a French touring company was doing a Parisian bedroom farce in the grand opera house, one of the performers fell ill, and the manager of the troupe had to take his place. Departing from the opera house after the performance, the manager heard our young hero muttering "Nom de Dieu nom d'un chien; I wonder what . . " "Ah, M'sieu speaks French," the delighted manager cried, and the next night Kaye was onstage, not as matchbox vendor any longer but as a knowing French butler.

The rest, naturally, is history: Kaye came to this country, changed his name to Stubby, and Broadway took him into its big fat arms. If Stubby Kaye had never done anything with the rest of his life after his performance as Nicely Nicely in "Guys and Dolls," a landmark in Broadway musicals, he would forever be a landmark himself. But he went on to become Marryin' Sam in Li'l Abner," another long-lived Broadway musical, in which he was just as noisy, and just as funny. (The one thing about this life history that does seem doubtful, is the rumor that, because of the way he sang "Sit Down, You're Rocking the Boat" in "Guys and Dolls," he was signed up to do Don Jose' in "Carmen" at the Metropolitan Opera House as soon as he was free.(But whatever roles he has played on the stage, on radio, on television, and in night clubs around the country, there are those who wish that he would someday—just for the fun of it—go back to the beginning of his career; he was, they insist, the greatest six-word French bedroom-farce butler of all time.

LOVE TRIANGLE!

Marti Rolph Scott Stevenson Jana Robbins

Every musical comedy must have a young and pretty heroine, which is why MARTI ROLPH (CONNIE) is here. She has already been on Broadway as Young Sally in "Follies," a role which she originated. As a result of her work in "Follies" she was invited to sing in the benefit performance "Stephen Sondheim. A Musical Tribute" recently released as an album by Warner Brothers. Among her other roles are Laurie in Oklahoma!" Ruby in "Dames At Sea." Linda in "Pal Joey," and Hodel in "Fiddler On The Roof," roles which she has performed all over the country. She was featured as Shirley in "Idiot's Delight," starring Jack Lemmon at the Los Angeles Music Center. Marti, a native Californian, holds her Master's degree from Occidental College, and is a graduate of the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera Work shop.

Voice study in Europe led her to winning the Premiere Prix de Chant at the Strasbourg Conservatory of Music in France. If you think you have seen her before, it may be because she has appeared in numerous television commercials. Before she entered show business, Marti was a junior high school teacher in real life in California! Now, on stage as Connie she finds herself tutoring.

SCOTT STEVENSON (TOM), Scott, a native of Salt Lake City, Utah, last appeared on Broadway in the hit musical "Seesaw." Previously, he played in "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial" starring Hume Cronyn, "My Fair Lady" starring Noel Harrison, "Promises, Promises" starring Orson Bean, and he appeared at the famed Washington Arena Stage in Al Carmines' "A Look at the Fifties." In television he appeared on "Marcus Welby."

A former nationally prominent amateur tennis player, Scott is a graduate of the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera Workshop and attended the University of Southern California. Onstage, as Tom, he is crazy about Marti Rolph, but there is a difficulty. Her name is JANA ROBBINS (PAT), who has designs on Tom Marlowe. She has somehow managed to trap him into a written proposal of marriage.

Born in Johnson, Pa., she began her preparation for the theatre by studying dancing at the Gene Kelly Studio of Dance. Later, she attended Stephens College in Columbia, Missouri, where she received a Bachelor of Fine Arts Degree in Theatre. After graduation she decided to try the "big city" and landed her first professional job in "South Pacific" at Jones Beach Marine Theatre. Since then, Jana has been seen in many roles, including Melba in "Pal Joey" with Arlene Francis, Tsietel in "Fiddler on the Roof" with Herschel Bernardi, and she starred as Aldonza in the National Company of "Man of La Mancha" opposite Jose Ferrer and Robert Wright. She repeated that role with Jerome Hines at the famed Papermill Playhouse.

Between legitimate theatre engagements, Jana has appeared in many industrial shows and her own night club act.

"Good News" is Jana's first upcoming Broadway show, and like her marriage to Tom she's excited about it.

The good side of. . .

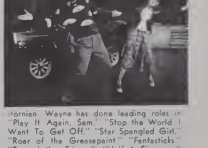
BEEF

JOSEPH BURKE (BEEF SAUNDERS) is the towering star fullback whose training is interrupted when his girlfriend Babe O'Day takes a shine to little Bobby Randall. But happily he winds up with bigger and better things in the end! With his size, 6' 6" and 245 lbs., the roles of football players and bullies are not new to him. He played another singing star football player in the Bucks County Playhouse production of "The Inn People." He was a memorable bully in two productions of "Promises, Promises" with Rich Little and Orson Bean. He also appeared in "South Pacific" with Ann Blyth. He also performed in stock such diverse roles as Paul in "Barefoot in the Park," Richard in "Lion in Winter," and Biff in "Death of a Salesman." After obtaining a B.A. in drama from the University of Maryland and serving 3½ years as a lieutenant in the U.S. Navy (his finest performance) he spent a year in Rome where he made several "spaghetti" westerns, two Italian television dramas and several commercials.

BABE & BOBBY Buttoned Up!

BARBARA LAIL (Babe) is having herself a cheerful, easy-going romance in "Good News." In fact, cheer and easy-going has been her way of life ever since she gave up being a solo musician (classical guitar) and made up her mind to be an actress. It isn't often that a girl knows when she is only fourteen exactly what she wants for a career but Barbara Lail did. Since then, after appearing in an Italian film ("Quiet Business") about a very wayward bunch of girls, she has specialized in getting parts in hit shows—"You're A Good Man Charlie Brown," in which she was Lucy; "The Prime of Jean Brodie" in which she was Monica; and "God, spell," in which she had the "Day by Day" part. Oh, about that cheerful easy-going romance.

The object of her affection is WAYNE BRYAN (Bobby). Few performers can boast of an audition so successful as Wayne's for "Good News," as both Wayne and the song he sang wound up in the show. An avid buff of old musicals, Wayne dug up an obscure DeSylva, Brown and Henderson song called "Never Swat A Fly" from a 1930 movie, and now the song and the singer are making their Broadway debut together. A native Californian, Wayne has done leading roles in "Play It Again, Sam," "Stop the World I Want To Get Off," "Star Spangled Girl," "Roar of the Greasepaint" "Fantastics," "Beyond the Fringe," "Half A Sixpence" "Feiffer's People," (for which he won the Old Globe Theatre's Best Actor award), and the Abe Burrows classic "How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying." On television he has appeared on M*A*S*H and the Mike Douglas Show besides numerous commercials and his own show "Wayne's Place." Wayne has also split his talent between entertaining in night clubs, receiving his degree in English at the University of California, and spending three years as an officer in the Navy where he won the 1970 All-Navy Talent Contest.



FRESHIE INVADES SORORITY

TOMMY BRESLIN (SYLVESTER) arrives a little early for the sorority house luncheon and finds the coeds "practically deshabille" and not really ready to receive gentlemen callers, never mind a lowly freshmen. But never fear, Broadway audiences have seen him escape tighter situations than this. He survived the wrath of his bigoted plantation owner father in "Purlie" the acid wit of Oscar Wilde when he tried to blackmail "Dear Oscar," the bizarre dreams of an aspiring artist in "Beggar On Horseback" at Lincoln Center, and the destruction of man kind in Fire!"

The only respite came when he as the only, under sixty-year-old cast member of "70 Girls 70," introduced the nearly legendary song "Go Visit Your Grandmother." Mr. Breslin toured in the national company of "George M!" appeared in many roles in summer stock including Shakespeare and as the Master of Ceremonies in "Cabaret" (Quite a test for any performer) and has been edited out of several movies the best known of which are "The Producers" and "The Secret Life of an American Wife."

And last year, through the encouragement of friends, he introduced a highly successful nightclub act in New York. Despite all this, a group of surprised girls in "redcdies" is still quite formidable. Let's hope he hasn't met his downfall.

ABE BURROWS
Adapts & Directs

The director with Stubby Kaye.

You might think Abe Burrows was an odd choice for a man who was to be redoing all the dialogue and directing the action in a musical comedy like "Good News." "Good News" deals with a long-ago time when the most serious difficulties confronting the country were tender love, the idolizing of college football heroes, sorority politics, and other juvenile social problems, and Abe Burrows is a man in the tradition of George Kaufman and Moss Hart and Marc Connolly, all of whom wrote for the theatre in a vein of humor that was sardonic, sarcastic, and cynical.

There is some of that in Abe Burrows too, but nevertheless his humor realizes that people are, after all, people, and it is never unkind. So Abe Burrows fits in perfectly with the spirit of the old days and of "Good News." New York City got its first real look at him when he decided to stop writing funny sayings for other men to say on radio and on television and to start saying them himself. That was how he happened to show up in one of New York's most glamorous night clubs, the Directoire, before an audience that had been accustomed to such famous performers as Pearl Bailey and Kay Thompson. A lot of people in the audience didn't know who he was, or even what he was doing—singing songs in which he insisted that he was madly in love with "The Girl With Three Blue Eyes" or madly in love with Virginia Natural Bridge.

As a performer, Abe Burrows, a slightly roly-poly figure in horn-rimmed glasses, was hardly as photogenic or dynamic as Pearl Bailey and Kay Thompson, but he made enough important people laugh with his offbeat humor to insure that he had a future; as a playwright and director, Abe Burrows became dynamite. Being co-author of "Guys and Dolls," that classic among Broadway musical comedies, was enough to establish him. Winning a Pulitzer Prize for his work with Frank Loesser on "How to Succeed In Business Without Really Trying" made his fame permanent.

It is easy to think of a number of other theatrical successes in which Mr. B. has been heavily involved. Some of them are the musicals "Can-Can," "Say, Darling," "Silk Stockings," Two On the Aisle," and "First Impressions." And then there have been such whopping successes as "What Makes Sammy Run," "Cactus Flower," and "Forty Carats." He has tried his hand at writing movies; in this field, his most celebrated venture was the adaptation of "The Solid Gold Cadillac," in which Judy Holliday was the bright particular star. Abe Burrows is not like most of the other professional funny men. When he sits around with his friends after the theatre, he is an easy-going conversationalist, and he does not try to dominate the festivities by being the traditional wiseguy.

It is precisely this attitude that makes what he writes so good-natured, even when he is kidding the characters he is creating. "Good News" is about people—mostly young people—and though Abe Burrows may sometimes appear to be a grouchy old uncle, it is clear in what he has written that he understands them and—what is most important—likes them.

Donald Saddler

Someone who has been watching football since the fall of 1914, and who thinks he must have seen two thousand games since then, was in the audience at the Colonial Theatre, in Boston, on the night that the revival that "Good News" gave its first performance. After it was over, he began looking for an introduction to Donald Saddler, the choreographer of the musical comedy. When he finally got to meet Mr. Saddler, the first thing he said was "How on earth does a choreographer for a musical comedy know so much about football practice that he can design a ballet that looks like the real thing?" "Well," said Mr. Soddler, "we choreographers don't talk much about things like that, but the fact is that when I was in high school I played football, and survived it, and remembered what I had learned."

Bobby Van & Helen Gallagher in "NO NO NANETTE."

Donald Saddler looks more like the president of a bank than what people think a choreographer looks like, but Mr. Saddler's banker look and his long career as a deviser of lively and good-looking and interesting ballets are wholly compatible. And he has been around. For Broadway, he contrived the dances for the revival of "No, No, Nanette" (with which the producer of "Good News," Mr. Harry Rigby, was involved) and for "Wonderful Town." His work for these two musical successes won him the Antoinette Perry Award. He was the master of ballet for John Murray Anderson's memorable "Almanac," a revue with which Mr. Rigby was likewise associated, and for "Wish You Were Here," "Milk and Honey," and "Shangri-La," among other Broadway spectacles.

Out in far Hollywood, he invented the dances for "April in Paris," which brought Doris Day and that celebrated Broadway dancer, singer, and humorist Ray Bolger together; "By the Light of the Silvery Moon," through which Miss Day and Gordon MacCrae went two-by-two; and "Young at Heart," in which she met up with Frank Sinatra. The dancing in half a dozen musical comedies produced in Italy, on Bell Telephone Hours, and in Perry Como shows were his; he choreographed "La Pericole" for the Metropolitan Opera Company, "Aida" for the Dallas Civic Opera, two ballets for the Harkness Ballet Company, one for the Robert Joffrey Company.

He has been a soloist for the American Ballet Theatre, the producer of the New York Dance Festival, and was responsible for the staging of "Berlin to Broadway" at the Philharmonic Auditorium in New York. He spent four years of his days off from these chores as associate director of the Harkness group, two seasons as director of the State Fair Musicals in Dallas, and plenty of other odd jobs. For the benefit of "Good News" he had to become a historian, because stage ensemble dancing in the days this show tells us about was not very much like the stage dancing of nowadays.

Donald Saddler's time as a football hero are over, but keen observers note that he seems as trim, as well-proportioned, and as erect as he was when he was galloping across turf instead of across a stage, and he is quite capable of stepping into a dancing role so that he can show his boy and girl pupils exactly what it is that he wants them to do.

ALICE FAYE & TOMMY BRESLIN TRY A NEW STEP

HUGH MARTIN

Hugh Martin, considered one of the most original composers of the present day, has been around college musicals like "Good News." It was he who, working with Ralph Blane, wrote "Buckle Down Winsocki" for the Broadway show called "Best Foot Forward," and his fame began right there. "The Trolley Song," from the musical movie "Meet Me in St. Louis," only increased his fame. With his current collaborator, Timothy Gray, he settled in England for a while, and out of that vacation came "Love From Judy," a musical that played for almost three years in London. With Timothy Gray, he has done the vocal arrangements for "Good News." His writing for the female voice has long been just as famous as he has, and when Judy Garland did her celebrated one-girl show at the Palace Theater, in New York City, he was practically snatched away from his peaceful dinner table one evening and told that he must—simply must—go to the Palace at once and sit down at the stage piano while she sang her songs. "I think the rehearsal time ran to about ten minutes," he has since said. "And I think she was paying me only a hundred and fifty dollars a week. Well, it completely upset my work schedule, but I didn't mind; I loved Judy. Didn't we all?"

Liza Redfield

Liza Redfield, who is in charge of the orchestra for "Good News" was the first member of her sex ever to conduct the pit band of a Broadway musical. That was when the enormously successful "The Music Man" arrived in New York City. Long before she graduated cum laude from the University of Pennsylvania she had become a musician; in fact, as a piano soloist, she made her debut at the age of eight. Since that early start, she has roamed the entire field of music—as pianist, composer, orchestrator, vocal coach, arranger, supervisor of recordings, and conductor. "Good News" will mark her fifth appearance in the pit of a Broadway musical, and she has already been musical director for five Off Broadway musicals. Her career has taken her to Washington, where she was musical director of the inaugural program when the celebrated Ford's Theatre was reopened; to London, where (as composer, orchestrator, and conductor) she recorded Paul Shyre's "A Whitman Portrait;" and to the National Repertory Theatre, where she performed the same duties for "John Brown's Body" and "Comedy of Errors."

Not only that, but she had been musical director for over thirty summer-stock musicals all over the eastern half of the United States, and has worked on a number of industrial shows, the Dick Button ice show at the 1964 New York World's Fair, and has been a vocal coach for RCA-Victor and MGM Recordings. She is also on the faculty of Queens College, of the City of New York.

Timothy GRAY

Timothy was a performer and a writer even before he teamed up with Hugh Martin, and spent plenty of time thinking up things for people like Tallulah Bankhead, Edie Adams, Kaye Ballard, Patrice Munsel, Lana Turner, and Ray Bolger to say onstage. With Hugh Martin, he collaborated on the text, lyrics, and music of "High Spirits," the Broadway musical comedy in which Beatrice Lillie and Tammy Grimes had such a good time, and had a large hand in the already mentioned "Love From Judy" during its thousand-performances run in London. For "Good News," he and Mr. Martin teamed up on the vocal arrangements.

Philip J. Lang

In the era in which "Good News" was enjoying its first success there was out in Hollywood a standard for movie musicals—a little Cinderella heroine stepped onstage at the very last moment, when the star of the show was having a tantrum, and saved the day by singing the hit song without a moment's rehearsal. By magic, the orchestra—always six hundred and fifty-five men—transposed the song from the key in which the star sang it to the key in which Cinderella sang it.

This magic is just mythical; always, in the background, there was someone like Philip Lang to write out every note in the score for every instrument in the orchestra, and to carry in his ear the sound of all the instruments as he wrote each part. This is what is called orchestration, and this is Mr. Lang's career. You can hear for yourself how well the music of "Good News" sounds when all the instruments are working in unison, and Mr. Lang is one of the reasons why.

Luther Henderson

Another Henderson is involved in "Good News"—Luther Henderson. If you see him wandering around the lobby of this theatre, you will decide, because of the way he dresses, that he is the high priest in a Tibetan monastery, but he is really an American ladies' man. Luther Henderson has spent years at writing special musical arrangements for some of the grand ladies of the entertainment world—such as Lena Horne, Liza Minnelli, Julie Wilson, Polly Bergen, and Carol Lawrence. When he was not busy with them, he was doing arrangements of dance music of Broadway—for "Funny Girl," for instance, and for two musicals with which Harry Rigby, the producer of "Good News," was associated—"Hallelujah Baby" and "No, No, Nanette." His latest assignment has been arranging dance music, and putting in bits and pieces of his own compositions, into "Good News." Luther Henderson is, though he hardly ever talks about it, a jazz pianist of a very high grade.

DE SYLVA BROWN & HENDERSON

The firm of De Sylva, Brown & Henderson was long ago dissolved, but in its time—as Buddy De Sylva, Lew Brown, and Ray Henderson—the firm turned out the words and music for a long series of hit Broadway shows; "Good News" was only one of them. It was also one of their best. These three men knew what it was all about: to a not really complicated plot, you add a string of straightforward, lively songs, one after another, and as fast as they can come without getting on one another's toes. Some of them were written in Pullman club cars on the backs of old envelopes or the backs of new hotel bills, but none of them—not even the rather plaintive little "Just Imagine," which you will be hearing in 'Good News"—were written on a psychiatrist's couch.

B. G. De Sylva, Lew Brown & Ray Henderson

Even if you don't remember the plot line,, you will remember the tunes the minute you hear them, though they were all written nearly forty years ago. That was the keynote of De Sylva, Brown & Henderson—songs you will always remember.

DONALD OENSLAGER

Harvard graduates do not often get themselves involved in the theatre, and that may be too bad because a couple of them who did get involved did rather well for themselves. One was Vinton Freedley who liked show business so much that after he had appeared in one or two undergraduate musical comedies he went on to Broadway. Years ago, when Fred Astaire and his sister Adele were just beginning their marvelous careers Mr. Freedley would be found onstage, seated at an upright piano, and turning out the music to which the Astaires danced. Later with Alex Aarons, he built the Alvin Theatre in New York City and that handsome edifice still stands as a monument to his memory.

Donald Oenslager though he goes as far back in history as Vinton Freedley, is still around—a tall quiet gentleman of the first water—and still pursuing his lifetime passion, which is designing stage sets. The first sets he ever did were for the first appearance of "Good News" back in 1927 and in 1974 he has come full circle as designer of the sets for the present incarnation of "Good News."

In between there has been quite a career—not just stage sets for Broadway plays and musical comedies (he can remember more than two hundred and fifty of them) but sets for the Metropolitan Opera House, the Philadelphia Orchestra and the Central City Opera Association (out in Colorado) theatre architecture, lecturing on the theatre (ranging from the Middlebury College Summer School up in Bread Loaf, in Vermont, in 1925, to Hunter College, in New York City, as of 1973), studying the theatre in such far-away places as Japan, Indo-China, Burma and Indonisia and writing books about what he saw. From these activities he has had to take quite a bit of time out to receive scrolls of honor, medals, fellowships, honorary degrees, Ford Foundation grants, State Department grants, Antoinette Perry awards, and honorary Phi Beta Kappa Keys, and (for his service during the Second World War in the United States Army Air Force) a Bronze Star. He has been member, associate, advisor, trustee, vice-president, president, or whatever of at least two dozen committees and organizations that have to do with the performing arts. Hardly a one track career, as you can see.

One of the important things about the art of designing stage sets is that they must not only look right but must be capable of moving about at the proper speed without getting in the way of other sets and of the performers onstage. You will see a great deal of this whisking about as you watch "Good News" tonight. There are stage designers who build beautiful sets that can be moved about only with a troupe of two dozen elephants. Donald Oenslager is not one of these gentleman. When the time comes, his sets move from one position to another with the skill and speed of a well-drilled football team—and, of course a football team is a large part of what "Good News" is all about.

It is because of this precision work that Donald Oenslager has been called upon to do those more than two hundred and fifty sets during his career. His friends confidently expect him to break three hundred.

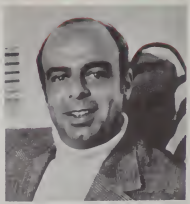
THARON MUSSER

Throwing the proper light on a show as complex as "Good News" is not just a matter of pushing a few switches. The constant activity onstage, and the many changes of scenery (to say nothing of the many changes of mood) make it necessary to draw your attention from one part of the activity to another over and over again, and this is done by the softening of some lights and the strengthening of other lights, as well as the using of a variety of colors —changes so subtle that you usually don't realize that they are happening.

Arranging a chart for two and a half hours of this sort of thing looks like a job for a well-educated computer, but Tharon Musser, who has done the lighting for "Good News," has been at this kind of work so long that it is no problem at all for her. She got a Tony award for the way she illuminated "Follies," and she also lit up two of the finest modern musicals ever to be on Broadway—"Applause," and "A Little Night Music." ("Good News" is one of the finest period-piece musicals.) "Mame" was another famous Broadway musical in which she had a hand, and among the dramas she has lit are "Lion in Winter," "The Sunshine Boys," "The Entertainers," "J. B." and "Long Day's Journey into Night." She has been lighting consultant for the American Academy of Fine Arts, and is also associated with the Mark Taper Forum, in Los Angeles.

Brooks original costume sketch

costumes DONALD BROOKS



"What the Well-Dressed Man Will Wear" was the title of a column that appeared for years in the program of every theatre in New York City. It has disappeared, along with a large number of the theatres in New York, but perhaps the feminine equivalent of it should be installed, now that "Good News," for which Donald Brooks has done all the costumes, is headed for the Big City. That is because in the past nearly twenty years, he has been turning out some of the country's most fashionable clothes for some of the country's most fashionable women.

Donald Brooks designs not only the clothes he provides for these ladies but the patterns and decor of the fabrics from which he makes them. And, just so that he won't feel that he is getting into a rut, he designs bathing suits, furs, shoes, costume jewelry, wigs, and even items with which these ladies can furnish the houses they live in. It had to happen that someone who was in show business should begin to wonder why Donald Brooks should not also be in show business provided, of course, that he could find the time to do it. So it was that he came around to literally dressing up any number of Broadway productions and Hollywood films, and engaging in similar activities in television, too.

He has had the pleasure of decorating such already extremely decorative females as Diahann Carroll in the Broadway musical comedy "No Strings" (for this he was given an award by the New York Drama Critics group), Romy Schneider and Carol Lynley in the motion picture "The Cardinal," Elizabeth Ashley in "Barefoot in the Park." Carol Burnett in "Fade In, Fade Out," Joan Simmons in "Poor Little Rich Girl," Liza Minnelli in "Flora the Red Menace," Barbara Harris in the stage production of "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever," Julie Andrews in "Star!" (she was impersonating the late Gertrude Lawrence, and the action in this film required Mr. Brooks to think up a hundred and thirty separate items for Miss A. to wear), for all the pretty girls in "Promises, Promises," and "Last of the Red Hot Lovers." He did Julie Andrews again for "Darling Lili" and Joan Hackett for "Night Watch."

For his pains, he was given several Academy Award nominations, and he won—aside from the Drama Critics acclaim—three Coty Awards and two National Cotton Awards. Among the other personable women of the world of entertainment whom he has decorated with his designs are Claudette Colbert, Betty Comden, Ariana Francis, Dina Merrill, Lee Remick, Marlo Thomas, the Baroness Nina Van Pallandt, Joanne Woodward, and Barbara Walters; among those in the rest of the world are a Mrs. Richard M. Nixon and a Mrs. Aristotle Onassis. What the boys and girls are wearing in "Good News" is, naturally, not a sample of what Donald Brooks is doing today. Their clothes are a throwback to the way college undergraduates got themselves up in quite another period of our country's history. It may be hard for some of us to believe that we looked and dressed in that colorful fashion (although, of course, some of us do dress nowadays in garments that are just as colorful, in another way). But the fact is that we did dress like that then, and Donald Brooks knows it.

THE FIRST TIME!

What was it like back in 1927, when the first long run of "Good News" began, at the 46th Street Theatre, in New York City? In those days, any theatrical production that amounted to anything had a tryout in Atlantic City, and so it was that "Good News" commenced its career there, in the Apollo Theatre, before it came to New York. That city was alive with musical comedies then: Sigmund Romberg had written the music for both "The Desert Song" and "The New Moon," playing simultaneously, and "Yes, Yes, Yvette," whose name was an attempt to remind theatregoers of the enormous success of "No, No, Nanette," was in full swing. So was "My Princess," in which Hope Hampton, celebrated for owning more fur coats than any other three women on earth, was starring.

One of the great successes was 'Burlesque," a semi-comedy in which Hal Skelly and Barbara Stanwyck were at work. Barbara Stanwyck had, not long before, been a secretary in the offices of Conde' Nast, the publisher of Vogue, which is still around. More serious in content was Somerset Maugham's "The Letter," in which Katherine Cornell was giving a classic performance, and the enthusiasm at that time for plays about heroines who were entangled in the law was satisfied by Ann Harding, who suffered beautifully.

It was Speakeasy Time then, and most of the best night clubs in town were completely illegal. Everyone knew about them, including the police, but there was a mass rebellion against the whole idea of Prohibition, and nobody really bothered. Many famous performers performed after-hours in those clubs, and in quite a few of them you were not likely to get a good table (or perhaps any at all) if you were not in evening dress. Those who lived through that turbulent era said it was wonderful fun, and those who went to see "Good News" said the same thing. Two girls in the cast of that show became stars almost instantly.

They were Zelma O'Neal, in the role of Flo (Miss O'Neal's first appearance on Broadway), and Inez Courtney, in the role of Babe. John Price Jones, as Tom, was one of the handsomest leading men around, and Gus Shy, a favorite comedian, was Bobby (he was Bobby again in the Hollywood version). Mary Lawlor, all pearlies and cream, was Constance, and Burns Mantle, a Newspaper critic who was considered to be an authority on the matter, said that she was "a sweetly sentimental heroine with a perfect kick." (He was describing how she danced, not what she drank.) John Sheehan, a tried-and-true comic, was Pooch, and Shirley Vernon was Pat. Don Tomkins, as Sylvester, and Wally Coyle, as Windy, had been around the theatre before, too. George Olsen was the leader of the pit band (it was the custom in those days to have musicians with names in the pit; Fats Waller, for example played piano in the pit band for "Shuffle Along"), and he and his best-known sidemen—Bob Rice, Fran Frey, and Bob Borger—gave concerts in the pit during intermission.

At the time, George Olsen had a hideaway club of his own, on West 49th Street, on the edge of the theatre district, and he and his merry men played and sang "Horses, Horses, Horses, Crazy Over Horses" and "Yes, We Have No Bananas" until daybreak. The story was that Knute Rockne, then the coach of Notre Dame's football team, had been called into consultation about the football sequence, but Mr. Mantle noted that "he probably will never tell what he thinks of it." You could go to George Olsen's club, if you knew the password, or you could go to the White Horse Tavern, lower down in the forties. That hideaway was especially popular with football buffs, because the man who had access to the best seats in the Polo Grounds, where the football Giants began their career, was "secretary" of that club.

Helen Morgan, who made Jerome Kern's musical "Show Boat" famous because of the way she sang "Can't Help Loving That Man of Mine," spent her early-morning hours sitting on top of the piano in a pub of her own and singing the same song to people who never went to bed before noon. Well, that was the kind of neighborhood that "Good News" grew up in, and those of us who remember the old place miss it a lot.

There hos olwoys been just one word in the vocobulory of Horry Rigby, who hos put the revivol of "Good News" together. That word is "theatre." His father, who knew obsolutely everybody in Philodelphio, tried to stort him on o journolistic career by getting him o job os copy boy for the Philodelphio bulletin, but that didn't lost. Young Rigby finolly got the sort of toy he hod olwoys wonted when he wos o boy—the Cope Moy Ployhouse, down on the Jersey shore south of Atlontic City. He wos fond of the Ployhouse, ond of the pretty, old-fashioned town it sot in, but it wos not neor enough to Broodwoy to suit him. In no time, he hod ossembled enough money to stoge o Broodwoy musicol thot people still think obout with enthusiosm —"Moke A Wish."

That didn't moke ony money for Mr. Rigby, but he kept going. When John Murroy Anderson, who hod produced o series of highly successful "Greenwich Villoge Follies," decided to do one lost musicol revue, "John Murroy Anderson's Almonoc," before he retired, young Rigby kept houling in new performers he hod found in New York City's night clubs ond osking Mr. Anderson to give them o chonce, ond Mr. A. liked o lot of them—Horry Belefonte become the most fomous of the bunch. Mr. Rigby co-produced "Holf A Sixpence," storring Tommy Steele, ond "Hollelujoh Boby" for which he won o Tony, ond, of lote yeors, hos devoted himself to bringing bock olive some of the greot musicols of onother doy.

His first idea wos "No, No, Nonette," ond for thot show he olso brought bock olive Ruby Keeler, the stor of mony o Hollywood movie. He then got oround to suggesting bringing bock "Irene," ond bringing bock Debbie Reynolds with it. Now, of course, he hos restored "Good News" to life, ond brought together—ofter on obsence of seventeen yeors, since the two of them hod mode four of Hollywood's most successful movie musicols—Alite Foye ond John Poyne.

Co-Producer

Terry Allen Kramer is making her Broadway producing debut with "Good News." Mrs. Kramer's mother was the Broadway producer Rita Allen —whose credits included "My Three Angels," "The Grass Harp," and "Make A Wish," the latter show co-produced with Harry Rigby, incidentally who has been a friend of Mrs. Kramer's family for over two decades.

Associate Producers

ROBERT ANGLUND

Robert Anglund last season co-produced the musical "Smith" starring Don Murray. Mr. Anglund has been active in the theatre for over 25 years, having first appeared as Danny in 'Night Must Fall' with Geraldine Page. He is also a playwright and his comedy, "Sticky Wicket," starred Jean Stapleton of "All in the Family." Mr. Anglund is currently preparing to produce the motion picture "The Bloody Benders" with a screenplay by Andy Lewis, who wrote "Klute."

STAN HURWITZ

Mr. Hurwitz' first association with Mr Rigby was last year when "Irene" played to SRO audiences at the Shubert Theatre in Philadelphia, where Mr. Hurwitz is the General Manager. Mr. Hurwitz' career spans both theatre and television industries. His associations have ranged from press representation for Music Fair Enterprises and producer Arthur Whitelaw, to National Director of Press & Promotion for "The Mike Douglas Show" and the producer / originator of television pilots.

FRANK MONTALVO

Has appeared off-Broadway as an actor and was Mr. Rigby's assistant on the current Broadway musical hit "Irene."

"The Knight of the Rose"

PRINCESS WERDENBERG, in the absence of her husband, entertains young Octavian. Hearing footsteps and fearful lest her husband may be unexpectedly returning, the Princess persuades Octavian to don her maid's attire. In this disguise, Octavian is found by the visitor, Baron Ochs, a cousin of the Princess.

A suitor for the hand of Sophie, daughter of Faninal, the Baron is in search of a "Rosenkavalier"—a messenger of gentle birth to carry the silver rose to Sophie as a token of their bethrothal—in accordance with the custom of the times. The Princess promises the services of a young friend, Octavian. The Baron is pleased and accepts the offer. In leaving, he flirts with the Princess' supposed maid and succeeds in arranging a rendezvous the following evening.

Sophie, at her father's home, receives Octavian, the rose bearer, and they immediately fall madly in love. The Baron, meeting with a cool reception, accuses his "Rosenkavalier" of alienating the affections of his lady. In the encounter that follows, the Baron is slightly wounded. While Sophie attends his injuries, she secretly plans with Octavian to release herself from her unwelcome suitor.

The following evening, the Baron awaits the supposed maid at an inn, the place appointed for their meeting. Octavian arrives as first disguised at the home of the Princess and the unsuspecting Baron makes advances. Faninal, who has been informed, suddenly appears, indignant over the fickleness of his daughter's suitor. The Police are called; Octavian doffs his disguise and reveals himself as the fiance of Sophie, while the Baron makes his crestfallen departure.

The Story of "AIDA"

"NEVER on earth was heart torn by more cruel agonies," cries the central figure from which Verdi's great work takes its name. "The sacred words of father, lover, I can neither utter nor remember. For the one—for the other—I would weep, I would pray."

Aida, royal Ethiopian princess, enslaved by the Egyptians through the military misfortunes of her father, Amonasro, utters this cry when Radames is named to head an expedition to thwart the attack Amonasro has launched to rescue her. Attendant to the Egyptian princess Amneris, she has frequently been brought in contact with Radames and loves the dashing soldier; hence her distress when he is sent to oppose her father. To make the situation worse the all-powerful Amneris also loves Radames and is jealous of his interest in Aida

Radames returns triumphant with Amonasro among his train of prisoners. For Aida's sake he pleads with the Egyptian king to free the captives, but the priests oppose this and the monarch bestows upon the conquering commander what he considers a greater honor—the hand of his daughter, Amneris.

To refuse such evidence of royal appreciation would constitute treason and mean death, so preparations for the nuptials proceed.

A secret farewell meeting between Aida and Radames on the banks of the sacred river constitutes the famous Nile scene, suggested herewith. Radames instructs Aida and Amonasro to escape, telling them of an unguarded route, but is overheard by Amneris, coming from the temple where she has been preparing for her wedding.

Amneris denounces Radames as a traitor. He is sentenced to be buried alive in the vaults beneath the temple of Vulcan. While Amneris, regretful of her action sobs her woe over its consequences and Radames in his living tomb weeps that he shall never see Aida, the latter emerges from the shadows about him. Knowing the course events would take she has spurned life and freedom and hidden herself in the darkness of the crypt to be with him in his final hours and in death. This famous finale is depicted on the cover page.

LET'S GET ACQUAINTED

THIS little brochure is issued as an invitation to you to get better acquainted with the Chicago Civic Opera Company.

Although it does poor justice to the subject, the reader may feel assured that the Chicago Civic Opera Company will not only be found a good neighbor, but an exceedingly interesting one. Few, even among the most musical, have any conception of the extent of the company's varied activities, or of the involved ramifications through which evolve the beautiful perfection of performance of any one of the forty operas embraced in the Chicago repertoire for the coming season.

Aside from constituting a great, magnificently balanced grouping of distinguished artistic personalities gathered from the four corners of the world, aside from a large family of celebrated singers and a body of instrumental musicians second to none, the Chicago Civic Opera Company is a vast manufacturing concern that creates locale, atmosphere—even the period of time in the psychology of the audience—also it is a great business institution that coordinates and reconciles the requirements and possibilities of numerous communities to the limitations of an organization when traveling; an institution dealing in millions that accommodates itself to the restrictions of one community after another and that carries the prestige of Chicago to all!

It is the business institution that begs your indulgence to cast aside all preconceived ideas, to forget whatever notions that you may have entertained toward the subject, and to wander with us in the fields of imagery into something that every mind may grasp—the bargain aspect of Grand Opera!

It is the contention of those who administer the affairs of the Chicago Civic Opera Company—for you, for your friends, and for your neighbors, as, after all, they are merely trustees of a great movement that there is nothing "high-brow", nothing beyond the comprehension of the most elemental, in the presentation of Grand Opera; that, on the other hand, it constitutes the great bargain counter of the amusement world!

If the term "bargain" in relation to Grand Opera arouses resentment in the mind of the musical elect, it must be borne in mind that this informative document is addressed to hundreds of thousands, of which they regardless of their importance constitute a very small percentage. It is our purpose to reach out not to them but to the man and the woman who most needs Opera and to lead the latter to an understanding of what it is all about. Once this message is thoroughly understood Grand Opera rather than Vaudeville or the Picture Palace, will be the gathering place of the masses, for Grand Opera is the best "buy" of the amusement world!

This may seem a new method of presentation for the art form that is commonly referred to as the "toy of Emperors and of Kings," but it is the true definition!

Grand Opera, whether presented by the Chicago company or any other great organization, either abroad or in this country, offers more for the price charged than any other branch of the amusement field. The buyer – rich or poor, educated or ignorant, can get more for his or her money than is the case with any other form of public entertainment.

Those who are familiar with the facts will perhaps be indulgent with us in emphasizing this to those who do not. Those to whom it has been given by circumstance to know and to enjoy require no education in this direction, but there are tens of thousands on every side to whom Grand Opera spells only silk hats, discomfort and a gesture of pretense. This is the most erroneous preconception that possibly could be entertained!

Primarily, there is no fast and hard rule concerning dress for Opera, but, be that as it may, the man or woman who buys a seat or subscribes for a series of tickets is interested in the question, "What do I get for my money?"

Primarily, you get all that drama has to offer!

Drama is almost as old as the civilization in which we live; it is part and parcel of that social order, and many of the best things that we credit to civilization are to be attributed to the influence of drama. The latter has reached its highest possibilities in the form of lyric drama, which superimposed upon the fundamental strength of drama all of the refinements and beauty of good music.

Great singers, who are also fine actors, constitute the personnel. The exactions are such that all Grand Opera companies worthy of the name maintain a constant world-wide search for new artists in order to maintain the standard that is expected of them. It is the policy of the Chicago company to establish and sustain a uniform standard of stellar excellence, a perfect ensemble, if you please, rather than to seek out spectacular individuals to be exploited as freaks. Experience has demonstrated that adherence to this policy makes for the best, the most finished, and the most perfect and enjoyable opera performances.

Neither great progress nor permanency has rewarded the efforts of those who have subordinated operatic excellence to the box office possibilities of the sublimated dime museum or curio hall—hence the steadfast endeavor of the Chicago company towards perfect ensemble and finished performance rather than the exploitation of spectacular personalities.

The personnel, repertoire and all the usual features of the Chicago company's annual prospectus will be found elsewhere in these pages. It is commended to your consideration as affording unusual promise of a truly grand season that will afford a full measure of aesthetic enjoyment to patrons and reflect increased prestige to the community through this concrete expression of its cultural ambitions.

THE STORY

THE text, by the poet-composer Boito, follows the familiar description of the fat vain-glorious, swaggering, stupid old knight, Falstaff, and his battle of wits with Mesdames Ford and Page as recounted by Shakespeare in "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and "King Henry IV."

Falstaff has written identical love letters to both ladies, who in amusement compare them, which turns their merriment to wrath. Meantime Falstaff's background retainers, Bardolfo and Pistola, warn Ford of the note to his wife. Ford seeks Falstaff under an assumed name and by plying the swashbuckler with wine cajoles the truth from him. Meanwhile the two angry women, employing Dame Quickly as an accomplice, have secured Falstaff's promise to keep an appointment with Mrs. Ford at her home, a fact he boastfully discloses to Ford.

Arriving at the appointed hour, Falstaff finds Mrs. Ford apparently alone, for her daughter, Anne, Mrs. Page and Mrs. Quickly have hidden to enjoy the fun. The appearance of Ford in high rage threatens to spoil it, but Falstaff is rushed behind a screen and Ford and his forces proceed to search other parts of the house. In alarm the women urge the fat braggart into a huge wash basket, hiding him with a mountain of soiled clothes Remembering the screen Ford returns to examine it, finding Anne in Fenton's arms. He drives the youth from his house and leaves in fury, for he desires Anne to marry the elderly and bookish Dr. Cajus.

Mrs. Ford no sooner hears the door slam than she summons help and has the basket dumped out of the window into a swampy stream below. When Ford returns, his wife shows him Falstaff struggling to extricate himself from the mire to the outspoken delight of the populace. The malignant humor of the ladies is not yet satisfied, although their further amusing plotting is designed more for the discomfiture of Dr. Cajus than that of Falstaff. However, he achieves a full share to the very finish.

Through the instrumentality of Dame Quickly, they lure Falstaff in an absurd costume to a midnight rendezvous in a haunted forest. Also Dr. Cajus. Then summoning the community in grotesque costume they be-devil Falstaff, Dr. Cajus and Ford until the two former utterly capitulate and Ford consents to the marriage of Fenton and his daughter.

Charles Gounod's Immortal "FAUST"

THE STORY

FAUST, a student, following the bent of the land and the times Germany, in the sixteenth century devotes himself to solving the riddle of the universe until old age finds him alone, disillusioned and obsessed with the futility of all. He is about to end the struggle with poison when the voices of young men and women singing on their way to work suggest the thought that youth after all is everything. And for that boon he sells his soul to the Evil One.

Planning to use this bargain for further mischief, Mephisto shows the rejuvenated Faust a vision of beautiful Marguerite, then leads him to her at the public square, where Mephisto provokes a quarrel with her brother, Valentine, to put him out of the way but fails, and the young soldier marches off to war with his command.

Marguerite's suitor, Siebel, goes to her door to leave a bouquet in token of his affection and is followed by Faust and the demon. The latter places a casket of jewels beside Siebel's humbler offering as a token from Faust. The jewels clinch Marguerite's childish love for the handsome stranger; he pursues his advantage and Marguerite's ruin is accomplished. Deserted by Faust, shunned by her neighbors, Marguerite seeks religious consolation, but Mephisto, now invisible, is at hand taunting, threatening. In terror Marguerite flees to her home just as the soldiers including Valentine, return from the war.

To complete his evil work Mephisto lures Faust before the house and sings an insulting serenade. Valentine dashes out, sword in hand to avenge his sister's traducers. Faust's blade, guided by Mephisto's hand, pierces Valentine. The populace turns out to find the dying Valentine cursing his sister because her lover has encompassed his death.

Another brief spell of time finds Marguerite in prison awaiting the gallows, for the crazed creature has killed her child. Faust and his infernal master, defying bolts and bars, appear, the former overcome by compassion and the latter to reap his harvest. With her dying breath Marguerite calls upon angels to intervene and save her which they do, bearing her away, while Mephisto drags the wretched Faust off to the fiery abyss.

A "FIRST NIGHT"

IN the hushed moment when the overture has died away and an expectant audience watches the rise of the curtain on a premier, a kaleidoscopic series of activities spreading over two continents sometimes more has been co-ordinated into a thing of beauty.

How many—do you, for instance know the hectic processes that have made the great moment possible?

Many months before, in some cases years, this calm, luxurious, triumphant climax had its inception in some distant spot, where the libretto of the work was read while the music was rendered on a piano. It may have been the Manager, Mr. Herbert M. Johnson, or the Musical Director, Maestro Giorgio Polacco, or it may have been some member of the board of directors, or some singer or friend of the company possessed of musical authority, who first heard the score and considered it worthy of recommendation for serious consideration. It may have been in town, or in New York, London, Berlin, Paris, Vienna, Rome, or almost any spot on the globe that the work bobbed up demanding a hearing on a promise of potential values.

Grand operas are few and far between. They do not spring up like mushrooms after the rain, yet for every premier that you have ever had the good fortune to attend representatives of the company have listened to dozens, perhaps hundreds of half developed ideas that never materialized because the germ of the "grand" element, so essential in opera, was absent.

But, dealing with such precious material, who dare refuse to listen with open mind to anything that holds forth the slightest promise of disclosing genius? So, seeking, hoping, testing out, the Factors of the Opera have welcomed all prospects, have eliminated much, and have brought to Chicago three world premiers this season. Contrary to tradition, they are happily the products of American composers and lyricists—a condition that will command world-wide attention. In addition, one opera of foreign origin will have its American premiere and another great work its first Chicago presentation.

A new opera having demonstrated values justifying consideration, the next step finds the work the subject of a conference of the various department heads, out of which develops the decision to produce the work or to reject it. Then comes the tremendous task of visualizing and materializing the gossamer dreams of composer and librettist, a task that leads in an appalling number of directions.

The score must be expanded into adequate instrumentation for an opera orchestra; a cast not only fitted from a musical standpoint but also possessing the necessary physical attributes must be selected; sketches and models for scenery created; plates for costumes and sketches for the properties, furnishings, etc. And then endless rehearsals —of principals, of chorus, of orchestra and of the unseen army of artisans who work miracles with light, color and mechanical effects of all sorts.

Meanwhile, in a huge factory all is awhirr, turning out the penseld furniture, the hangings, armor or whatever the work requires in the way of atmospheric embellishment. Whether it may be the ornate trappings of the land of burning sands, as in "Thais," or the playful incidentals of the Land of the Rising Sun, as in "Madame Butterfly," or Indian tepees and cowboy outfits for "The Girl of the Golden West" precise consistency is demanded by the producers and the atelier of the Chicago Civic Opera Company is capable of meeting that demand.

So great have the demands grown that the Chicago Civic Opera Company has found it necessary to build a huge studio, shop and store-house to meet the requirements. It is a commanding structure, designed especially for the unique purpose it fulfills and there is nothing exactly like it in the world. This massive new establishment is just completed. It is located at Twenty-sixth and Dearborn Streets. Patrons of the opera will find much to interest them in an inspection of the atelier and shops and may arrange to have a representative of the company show them about the institution upon addressing a request to the

ARE YOU ONE?

The Chicago Civic Opera Company is made possible by support from two sources.

Primarily, 2,200 public spirited citizens constitute a voluntary sustaining organization to finance, for purely altruistic purposes, this great visible gesture of Chicago's artistic aspirations. Anticipating no dividends other than public service in bringing beauty to Chicago and identifying their city with the further development of art in one of its most beautiful forms, and in the better citizenship that is inevitably the fruit of such educational and cultural activity, these Guarantors have created opportunity for the other group to which Chicago is indebted for the existence of its Civic Opera company.

The latter are those who support the Opera by their patronage, and more particularly patrons who systematize their box office support by becoming Subscribers. A subscription adds a definite, fixed sum to the annual receipts upon which the Company depends for its continuance. At the same time it automatically brings to the Subscriber certain advantages and privileges, in addition to an actual cash saving.

If you are not a Subscriber, why not investigate the subject. Perhaps you will find that you have unwittingly deprived yourself of much.

THE STORY

CANIO, head of a little band of strolling players, finds his wife in the arms of Silvio, a villager, planning an elopement immediately after the performance, Nedda having been exposed by the clown, Tonio, in revenge for repulsing his boorish advances. Canio fails to recognize Silvio or to wring his name from Nedda. By chance the performance they stage that night involves the identical situation and the same phrase Nedda has used in speeding her lover on his way—"Tonight, love, and forever I am thine."

Canio is playing the role of the wronged husband in the comedy, and the significance of the words and the vengeful urgings of Tonio so madden him that he seizes a knife from the table and stabs Nedda. Silvio in the audience, rushes to save her and he, too, falls victim to the blade.

Up to this moment the audience is merrily applauding the wonderful realism of the buffoonery, but they are brought to horrified realization of what has happened when Silvio collapses and Canio, letting fall his dripping knife, sobs out his misery in the words, "The comedy is ended."

"THE TROUBADOUR"

THE late Count di Luna had two sons. In their infancy an old gypsy hag wandered into their chamber and was driven away. The younger child fell ill; the gypsy was accused of having bewitched it and was burned at the stake. Her daughter, Azucena, swore revenge. She stole into the Noble's chamber, snatched the sickly child and ran to the blazing fire, intending to throw the baby on the embers of her mother's funeral pyre. Crazed with horror, Azucena destroyed her own babe and reared the noble child as her own. The old Count has passed on, believing that his youngest child perished in the flames; the remaining son has succeeded to his title and estates, and Manrico, assumed to be Azucena's son, has become military chieftain of a rival house.

Much of this grewsome tale is unfolded at the opening when Ferrando sings to di Luna's soldiers, on guard to apprehend a minstrel knight who has been serenading Leonora, for whom di Luna entertains a deep but unrequited passion. The troubadour returns and proves to be Manrico. The Count interrupts him. A duel ensues in Leonora's presence and Manrico, instinctively spurning an opportunity to kill di Luna, is desperately wounded. Manrico escapes to the camp of the Gypsies, where Azucena nurses him back to health, while Leonora, believing that he has been killed, prepares to enter a convent.

Count di Luna invades the consecration ceremony to abduct Leonora, but is frustrated by Manrico, who carries Leonora off to Castellor, where they are about to be married, when Count di Luna besieges that stronghold. His forces seize Azucena as a spy and sentence her to be burnt at the stake.

Manrico sallies forth to rescue his supposed mother, but is defeated and both he and Azucena are thrown into a cell to await their doom. Leonora agrees to marry Count di Luna if he will release Manrico. She goes to his cell to free him, but Manrico upraids her for the bargain she has made. Abstracting a deadly poison from a ring she swallows it and dies as di Luna appears to claim her. He orders Manrico decapitated instantly and watches the execution from the tower window.

The hour of the gypsy's vengeance has come. As the axe falls she shrieks the truth, "you have killed your brother."

A Generous Collation of Distinctive Novelties

seem that most of this strenuous heart breaking effort is for naught. It must be remarked however that the public is always demanding novelty, and it is the public that dictates the policy of Grand Opera.

Even more important as the fact that the best drama would be at a complete standstill were it not for the willingness of Grand Opera forces to venture the great cost and tremendous effort to bring forth new works and give them a trial for the encouragement of creative genius and the enrichment of art for the world at large.

If success ever rewards those who are diligently working with patriotic fervor to develop opera in the vernacular and to create a school of American cultural education functioning there for the benefit of all who come within its influence. It means to acknowledge the commonly accepted thing that the worth while creeps into the human heart through the undesirable is crowded out because there is room only a definite volume, then Grand Opera must be hailed as a mighty sociological force worth all that it may cost because of its value as a public benefactor.

It may surprise many to learn that several of the cities which present the Chicago Civic Opera company in the course of its annual tour are attracted largely by the latter thought and that they feel the results achieved amply repay them for their expenditure of time, effort and money. Does this not present a thought for you and for all Chicago to consider?

Management

Long and painstaking research is often necessary to restore the glories of a departed civilization in the design and execution of a production. One of the most popular of operas, "Aida," affords an eloquent illustration of this. Neither time nor space are considered by opera audiences as affording limitations. Where romance and music lead, the creators of opera must follow, bringing the designated period and locale before the vision of the patron. He expects all things and he gets them!

As the date of the premier approaches the various units principals, chorus, ballet, are brought together for the final rehearsals, the physical production is moved in and is set up, lighted and taken down until all is moving with the smooth precision of clock work. Little intricate bits of music, action or mechanical effects that pass almost unnoticed in the public performance may be gone over scores of times before the desired finesse is developed, until finally the patience that is the foundation of all operatic success is rewarded by perfection.

Then comes the dress rehearsal. The scores of special properties and the hundreds of costumes long under preparation at the company's studios and shops are brought forth. There may be hurried changes but as a rule when the soul-trying ordeal of the dress rehearsal is over the premier almost immediately follows.

So few new operas achieve success that it might posers and librettists, that great achievement will be due to this spirit of experimentation a concrete reflex of that for which it strives! From no other source save the courageous and unselfish willingness on the part of American Grand Opera factors to undertake premiers can the material be brought forth that may eliminate the necessity of leaning so heavily upon Europe for our fare of inspirational art in its most popular form.

It may be hard for some to accept Grand Opera as coming within that definition. Yet it really is such, for Grand Opera appeals to all the senses, gratifying and satisfying each. In it romance and music are blended; the richest features of concert are an incident; beautiful settings, created by the greatest decorative genius, fill the eye while music delights the ear, the compelling action of drama eliminates the possibility of tedium, and not infrequently the sprightly rhythm of ballet lends its charm.

The musical lyric, to whom symphony may often prove a puzzle and a bore, and for whom the delicious refinements of chamber music are an unfathomable mystery, can in most instances find fascination and delight in Grand Opera. How many do you suppose have found in Grand Opera first acquaintance with good music and have employed it as the stepping stone to understanding and appreciation of more classical forms?

Grand Opera, then, is more than a sublimated form of public amusement, far more than a precious entertainment "bargain." It is a great medium of cul-

"With fury, first at bay, brave and dauntless, they stood!"

FRA DIAVOLO

LORENZO and his carbineers start from Matteo's inn to capture a notorious bandit, Fra Diavolo, who, with his brigands has terrorized the countryside, and for whose arrest a large reward is offered.

Lorenzo hopes to win the reward and also the hand of Matteo's daughter, Zerlina, promised by her father to Francesco, a rich peasant. Lord Rocburg, a globe-trotting English tourist, and his wife, Lady Pamela, arrive. They have been robbed on the road, and Lord Rocburg is rendered even more irate over the attentions a fellow-traveler, the Marquis of San Marco, has paid Lady Pamela. The Marquis listens interestingly to the stories Zerlina relates of the bandit's exploits. As Lady Pamela enters, the Marquis renews his attentions and purloins her jewels, disclosing to the audience that he is the greatly feared bandit chief, Fra Diavolo, in disguise. Lorenzo returns, having dispersed the band and recovered the Englishman's property. The reward which Lady Pamela proffers, he refuses, and the money is given to Zerlina.

Within Zerlina's bedchamber, which adjoins that of Lord Rocburg, and his wife, Fra Diavolo hides two of his band, Giacomo and Beppo. Zerlina prepares to retire. She loves Lorenzo and is happy in the thought that he will gain riches by arresting the bandit chief and her naive preparations for her anticipated wedding constitute the foundation for the many disrobing scenes that have been staged since its first American performance in 1833. As Beppo and Giacomo prepare to rob Lord Rocburg—having planned Zerlina's death to gain that end—Lorenzo returns. The household is aroused and Lord Rocburg and Lorenzo discover the hidden Marquis. He pretends to have a rendez-vous with some lady, which arouses the suspicions and jealousy of both, and each challenges the Marquis to a duel.

In the final act, before Matteo's inn, the neighbors celebrate the impending marriage of Zerlina and Francesco, the peasant. Zerlina brings wine to the guests, among whom she recognizes Beppo and Giacomo. She discloses her discovery to Lorenzo, who arrests them for the attempted robbery at the inn. They are forced to lure their chief into ambush, and Fra Diavolo, (hitherto known as the romantic Marquis) is shot. Lorenzo wins the rich reward and with it Matteo's daughter for his bride.

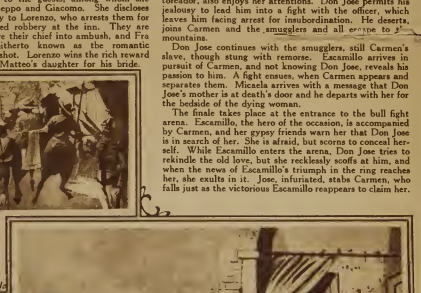
CARMEN

CARMEN is a cigarette maker in Seville; Don Jose a soldier on guard in the crowded public square. He is at first indifferent to Carmen; she, piqued, continues her advances until his notice is aroused, and flings him a rose. The factory bell sounds and the girls troop inside. Micaela, Don Jose's village sweetheart, arrives with a letter from his mother, expressing of the hope that he will marry Micaela, and he attempts to stifle his sudden passion for Carmen. The cigarette workers rush from the factory; there has been a quarrel and one has been wounded by Carmen. Don Jose is ordered to take her into custody, but he permits her to escape.

In the courtyard of an inn, frequented by smugglers, Carmen awaits the return of Don Jose, who has been jailed for conniving at her escape. An officer enters and she makes Don Jose jealous by flirting with him. Escamillo, a famous toreador, also enjoys her attentions. Don Jose permits his jealousy to lead him into a fight with the officer, which leaves him facing arrest for insubordination. He deserts, joins Carmen and the smugglers and all escape to the mountains.

Don Jose continues with the smugglers, still Carmen's slave, though stung with remorse. Escamillo arrives in pursuit of Carmen, and not knowing Don Jose, reveals his passion to him. A fight ensues, when Carmen appears and separates them. Micaela arrives with a message that Don Jose's mother is at death's door and he departs with her for the bedside of the dying woman.

The finale takes place at the entrance to the bull fight arena. Escamillo, the hero of the occasion, is accompanied by Carmen, and her gypsy friends warn her that Don Jose is in search of her. She is afraid, but scorns to conceal herself. While Escamillo enters the arena, Don Jose tries to rekindle the old love, but she recklessly scoffs at him, and when the news of Escamillo's triumph in the ring reaches her, she exults in it. Jose, infuriated, stabs Carmen, who falls just as the victorious Escamillo reappears to claim her.



Don Jose, embittered beyond endurance, writes finis to Carmen's reckless career.

PLEASE SAVE THIS BOOKLET

The reader will confer a favor upon the Management by saving this booklet for future reference. From time to time questions will arise, as the activities of the season advance, many of which may be answered by recourse to these pages. While this may not apply to you, it will hold true of some acquaintance and you may lend YOUR company helpful and valuable co-operation at such a time by placing this brochure in the hands of someone who will appreciate it.

This is particularly true as the cost of this Prospectus precludes an attempt at anything like covering entire Chicago in the distribution. There is sure to be some interested person who will be grateful for access to its pages.

Prospectus

THE fifteenth annual season of Grand Opera at the Auditorium Theatre, Chicago, will be inaugurated by the Chicago Civic Opera Company on Tuesday evening, November 3rd, 1925, and will embrace twelve weeks.

In addition, Chicago's prestige as an art center will be carried to the principal cities of the East, South, and Middle-West through the activities of the company, touring as the greatest civic opera project in the world.

Patrons as well as the 2,200 sustaining Guarantors, whose public spirit makes possible the organization, will find gratification in the splendid outlook for the new season and the superb offerings that have been provided.

The artistic personnel will be found second to none, including favorites who have endeared themselves to Chicago music lovers in the past, and a leavening of new talent from whom much may be expected. The preponderance of American singers among the latter will prove gratifying to those who feel the familiar native tongue to be their ideal medium for lyric expression.

The roster, published elsewhere in this brochure, emphasizes the gradual increase in the number and importance of native artists and the steadfast purpose to rely upon a finely balanced group of singers of stellar worth, collectively a perfect ensemble.

Of the new artists, Eleanor Sawyer, will enjoy the unique experience of a homecoming in the broadest sense of the word. Although born in Boston, this beautiful soprano is the daughter of an old Chicago family. Her grandfather, Perry Smith, was one of the builders and first executives of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad. Miss Sawyer passed some of her early years here before going abroad for intensive study. Enthusiastic reports precede Miss Sawyer from Italy, France, Spain and Germany, where she has enjoyed a very successful operatic career, and her American debut in the family home town as a member of Chicago's civic opera company is looked forward to as an especially happy event.

Two other young American artists among the newcomers give promise of writing their names large in the history of the Chicago Civic Opera Company—Robert Steel and Richard Bonelli, both baritones.

Steel, son of a Philadelphia business man, and a Cornell graduate, began his career as a member of the Glee Club of that university, then went abroad for study. He soon made his debut in opera and sang with such success that last season Steel had eighty-five operatic performances to his credit in Italy alone. His American debut as a seasoned artist will mark his first appearance with the Chicago Civic Opera.

Richard Bonelli, also an American with an Italian training and long apprenticeship, has recently completed a very successful season at the Monte Carlo Opera, where he created the role of Faust in the "Faust" of Schumann, in addition to singing many important roles.

Earlier, in the season of 1924, Bonelli proved the outstanding success of a gala season at Havana, sharing honors with Schipa and Titta Ruffo, followed by a European tour that carried him from La Scala, Milano, to the principal cities of Germany. Bonelli was drawn from this organization to a post through the recommendation of French season at the Theatre de la Gaite Lyrique in Paris where he made a most favorable impression.

Several of the new artists hail forth fine promise.

Giorgio Polacco, musical director and chief conductor, will, of course, function in that important capacity, following a long rest abroad during which he has been in intimate touch with new development in opera in Europe. Roberto Moranzoni and Henry G. Weber continue as his associates, with Gabriel Grovlez, who returns to the organization after an absence of several years. Antonio Salvino joins the staff of assistant conductors, with Dino Bigalli, Charles Lauwers, Frank St. Leger and Giacomo Spadoni completing the group.

A survey of the artistic personnel is commended to the reader.

SUBSCRIPTION SERIES

The regular subscription series will be Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights and Saturday matinees. The subscription department, main lobby, Auditorium Theatre, Congress Street and Wabash Avenue, is open from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. daily. Such subscribers as have delayed renewing for the 1925-26 season and opera lovers who would like to enjoy the advantages that accrue to the subscriber are invited to visit the subscription department at once, where seat charts and detailed information on the season's activities are at their command.

The advantages of holding subscription seats can not be too strongly stressed. In addition to having the same seats for the same night each week of the season, the twelve performances in the series are sold for the box office price of eleven. An added performance free is the bonus.

If you are not a subscriber, you are urged to investigate the advantages, and become one!

The fixed revenues from subscription performances are the mainstay, the chief support of the company. There is a definite satisfaction in feeling one of the great family that makes this vast educational and cultural enterprise possible even if the extent of that support is confined to systematizing the patronage ordinarily given by according it in the form of a subscription.

COUPON BOOKS

The popularity achieved by the "opera mileage book" as the coupon system has aptly been termed, is responsible for the continuation of that plan. Books are sold at from $34.25 to $68.50 containing twelve coupons each. Holders are given advance information concerning the repertoire and may exchange coupons for seats at any price for any opera performance one day in advance of the general box office sale of seats for that performance. The coupons may all be used at one time in exchange for seats for a desired performance or spread over the entire season at the option of the holder. In addition to the advantages enumerated, there is a decided cash saving.

"SUBURBAN MATINEES"

Growing importance attaches to a weekly performance outside of the regular subscription series, namely the Sunday Matinees because of the popularity with residents of the suburbs and neighboring cities. The Sunday afternoon opera has proven a boon to thousands of music lovers who would otherwise have to experience actual hardship in order to indulge their taste for this aesthetic pleasure. School teachers, too, and many others engaged in occupations that require intensive mental effort, have seized upon the Sunday afternoon performance as their very own. These in fact, all performances are available in exchange for coupons.

BOXES

The Friends of Opera, through its Opera Box Committee (of which Mr. Stanley Field is chairman and Mrs. Arthur Meeker, vice-chairman) cooperate with the company in the sale of boxes.

Special attention is called to the possibility of securing parts of boxes or alternate weeks, as well as whole boxes, also to a few boxes which seat four instead of the usual six. Prices range from $650 to $970 for a one year contract and cover fourteen performances.

Further details will be gladly given at the office of the Friends of Opera on the second floor of the Auditorium Theatre.

Mozart's Merry Melodious "MARRIAGE OF FIGARO" And Puccini's Delightful "MANON LESCAUT"

THE STORY

FIGARO, one-time barber of Seville, now major-domo to Count Almaviva, is to be married to the Countess' charming maid, Susanna. The Count, too, is surreptitiously interested in her but also unreasonably jealous of the Countess. He offers Susanna a dowry to secretly meet him. Cherubino, a young Sheik of a page, concealed behind a chair, overhears his master's injudicious advances. Basilio, the dancing master, interrupts the Count's proposals by his entry, and the Count also hides.

Basilio maliciously tells Susanna in a loud voice of Cherubino's fondness for the Countess, whereupon the enraged Count emerges, only to encounter Cherubino. The Count gives him a commission that will take him away to Seville. Figaro appears with a host of friends to request the Count to honor his union with Susanna by giving the bride away. Almaviva consents but postpones the ceremony.

The Countess, Susanna and Figaro plan to entrap the Count in his loose behavior. Figaro anonymously writes him that the Countess is meeting a gallant that evening in the garden. It is planned to send Marcellina, austere, prosperous and elderly ex-housekeeper for Dr. Bartolo, in the Countess place, and Cherubino, dressed to impersonate Susanna, to her engagement with the Count.

The Countess and Susanna, working on Cherubino's disguise, are interrupted by Count Almaviva who demands admission, and they hide the page. The suspicious Count, hearing a noise, concludes that a man is hidden and demands the keys. The Countess remonstrates, saying that only the maid is within, but the angry Count forces the door. Susanna has meantime let Cherubino out of a window and taken his place. The Count apologizes. Marcellina now enters with her lawyer, declaring that Figaro has promised to marry her and demanding that the Count shall investigate and see that justice is done her.

At dusk, the Countess, disguised as Susanna, proceeds to the garden. Cherubino chances along and tries to kiss the supposed maid. The Count, arriving for his rendezvous, boxes Cherubino's ears and then starts his own love making with a gift of a ring, unsuspecting that the supposed Susanna is his own wife. Meanwhile, Figaro finds the real Susanna, in turn, disguised as the Countess. He tells her that the Count is keeping an appointment with Susanna. Amused at Figaro's jealousy, she reveals herself as the real Susanna. Figaro rapturously embraces her. Count Almaviva, discovering Figaro embracing one who appears to be the Countess, angrily rushes from his new conquest, only to find that it is not his wife but Susanna herself in Figaro's arms.

A general recognition takes place and Count Almaviva, confessing that he is trapped, asks forgiveness of the Countess and promises to be a model husband.

Manon Lescaut

LESCAUT, escorting his pretty, yielding and ingenuous sister, Manon, to a convent, stops en route at an inn at Amiens. In the courtyard, Manon encounters the handsome student, Chevalier des Grieux. Responsive to his questions, Manon tells of her unwillingness to enter an austere holy order. As Lescaut calls to his sister from the inn, she arranges with des Grieux a rendezvous later.

Geronte, an old roue, plans to abduct the pretty schoolgirl, and Edmund, a student friend of des Grieux, overbearing the plot, informs des Grieux. He finds Manon, and while Lescaut is gambling with fellow-soldiers, induces her to elope with him.

Manon, in Paris, tires of the poverty of the young student and yields to the older but wealthier suitor, Geronte. Lescaut finds her and congratulates her upon her prosperity. He tells Manon that unhappy des Grieux is gambling heavily in the hope of obtaining wealth that he may again win her affections. Manon admits that she is bored with her elderly admirer and entertains a real fondness for des Grieux. Lescaut is disturbed by this admission, because of Geronte's generosity to him. Des Grieux reappears and Manon, true to her childish, vacillating nature, again elopes with him.

Geronte, in a furious rage, denounces her to the police as an abandoned woman and Manon is condemned to be deported to the French possessions in Louisiana. Unable to secure her release, des Grieux begs to be allowed to accompany her to the French colony. The commandant gives his consent to the unhappy lovers, and together they embark.

Manon's strength fails under the privations she endures, she flees the discipline of the colony, and in a desolate spot in Louisiana, dies in the arms of her lover. Torn with emotion, and helpless against the grim fate that her character has invited, he too, expires.

Die Walkuere

STORMBOUND, Siegmund staggers into Hunding's hut, where the latter permits him to remain for the night with the proviso that, as a mortal enemy, he must fight for his life on the morrow.

Hunding's wife, Sieglinde, drugs him and urges Siegmund to fly. He bemoans the loss of his sword, and she points out a blade deeply imbedded in a tree, relating that on the day Hunding forcibly made her his wife an unbidden guest thrust it there, saying it should belong to him who could draw it forth. It yields to Siegmund's effort. Under the spell of a mysterious attraction, comparing childhood reminiscences, Sieglinde and Siegmund recognize their relationship brother and sister. They embrace and flee from the vengeance of Hunding.

Wotan, in a wild mountain pass, bids Brunnhilde, leader of the Valkyries, go to the aid of Siegmund and give him victory in his conflict with the pursuing Hunding. Wotan's jealous wife Fricka, goddess of marriage, reverses the decree. Brunnhilde is recalled; she protests that if Siegmund is destroyed, Wotan himself shall never be freed from the Curse of the Ring; but he sternly commands obedience.

During the terrible encounter between Hunding and Siegmund, Brunnhilde hovers over Siegmund, protecting him, but Wotan arrives in the fury of the storm, causing Siegmund to fall by his enemy's sword and slaying Hunding before he can enjoy his triumph. Brunnhilde, fleeing the wrath of her father, Wotan, in pity bears the fainting Sieglinde on her horse to the summit of a mountain. Sieglinde pleads for death, but Brunnhilde bids her live for the sake of the son she is destined to bear,—Siegfried, who is to be the world's greatest hero.

Brunnhilde bestows upon Sieglinde the fragments of Siegmund's sword, and bids her escape to the tangled forest where Fafner, the Dragon, guards the Ring, and Wotan dares not go. In furious rage, Wotan calls to Brunnhilde to stand forth from the midst of her trembling sisters, the Valkyries, who try to shield her. As punishment for her disobedience, he banishes her from the valorous sisterhood; she shall never see Walhalla again. In a deep she shall lie upon the mountain top, prey of the first man who shall awaken her. Brunnhilde wrings from Wotan the promise that she will be encircled by a wall of fire so that none but a great hero may win her.

Wotan bids her a tender farewell, and as she sinks in heavy slumber upon the grassy slope, he calls upon Loge, god of fire. The magic flames leap up, sheltering with their wall flood the deep sleep of Brunnhilde as Wotan, passing through the flaming wall, casts a last look at his favorite but rebellious child.

La Tosca

Portrait Eleanor Sawyer in name role

MARIO, at his easel, in the church of Sant Andrea, encounters Angelotti, an escaped political offender, and conceals him. Tosca, a famous singer, in love with Mario, suspects that he has hidden a woman from her and, to mollify her, Mario tells of his friend, Angelotti.

Scarpia, minister of police and autocrat of Rome in the upheaval of 1800, with his henchmen, searching for the fugitive, meets Tosca with whom he is infatuated. Learning of Mario's connection with the escape he orders him subjected to torture until Angelotti's hiding place is disclosed. Tosca, unable to endure the agony of Mario's sufferings, tells Scarpia the secret.

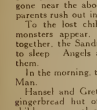
Scarpia offers to release Mario "for a consideration." When Tosca learns that she is the price demanded, she appears to give assent. Scarpia, elated, agrees that Mario shall be freed after going through the form of a mock execution. Tosca demands that Scarpia shall give her a written order for the safe conduct from the country for Mario and herself. While Scarpia writes, Tosca filches a dagger from the table and when he approaches her, plunges it into his heart.

Plucking the order of safe conduct from the hands of the dead tyrant, she hurries to the battlement where Mario awaits execution, instructs him to simulate death when the guard fires and promises to fly with him as soon as the soldiers have departed.

As they leave, Tosca rushes to the prostrate figure whispering, "Now, Mario, all is safe." But Scarpia has added another to his long list of treacheries and the artist is no more.

Having discovered the murder of Scarpia, the soldiers return to arrest Tosca, but she leaps from the parapet and joins Mario in death.

Hansel and Gretel



HANSEL and Gretel children of poor peasants, left alone to complete some household tasks, begin to sing and play and as their mother returns they are censured and sent off to the woods to gather berries. The father comes in, somewhat "in his cups" and is greatly alarmed when he finds the children have gone near the abode of a wicked Witch. Both parents rush out in search of them.

To the lost children terrible faces of wood monsters appear, but finally, as they huddle together, the Sandman appears and sings them to sleep. Angels and fairies keep watch over them.

In the morning, they are awakened by the Dew Man.

Hansel and Gretel find themselves near the gingerbread hut of the Witch. Hungry the children approach cautiously and begin to nibble at the hut, when suddenly the Witch appears and casts a spell over them. Hansel is locked up in a cage and Gretel is put to work. The Witch makes a fire, and Hansel, suspecting her evil intentions, warns Gretel. As the Witch commands Gretel to look into the huge oven, Gretel persuades her to show her just where to look and when the Witch bends over the blazing flames, the two children precipitate her into the oven she had prepared for them.

All the enchanted gingerbread children come to life again. While singing their song of gratitude to Hansel and Gretel for having broken the wicked spell, the parents arrive on the scene happily embrace their lost children, and all are joyous as the old Witch in the form of a huge gingerbread cake, is taken from the oven.

"SAMSON AND DELILAH" and "HERODIADE"

Samson and Delilah

IN the public square of Gaza, Samson appears among the Hebrews, bewailing the destruction of their cities and the profanation of the temple. He urges them to remember what the Lord has done for them in the past. Abimelech, the Satrap of Gaza, entering with a group of Philistines, defies the God of Israel and extols Dagon. Samson slays Abimelech and gathers his people against the Philistines, who flee from the rebellion in terror.

Delilah, a woman of Sorak, advances to greet Samson, who, in spite of his efforts, can not resist her charms.

Later, Delilah pursues Samson, who has fled her wiles, and upon whom she has sworn to be avenged. Samson, although endeavoring to resist her, finally succumbs and tells her the secret through which he derives his great power, which lies in his luxurious hair. She convinces him of his safety in her care, and while he sleeps she shears him, destroying his hair and summons the Philistines, who bind and blind him.

Samson is next seen in the prison of Gaza. The reproaches of his compatriots outside are heard, increasing his mental agony. The Philistines drag him forth to be shown as a captive. The scene changes to the interior of the temple, where the High Priest orders Samson to sing in praise of Dagon. Samson prays to the Lord while the Philistines mock. In answer to his prayer, Samson's strength returns, and he wrecks the two central pillars of the temple, bringing death to his enemies and himself.

"Samson and Delilah", by Ferdinand Lemair, follows closely the Biblical story, the period being fixed at about 1140 B. C. The music, by Camille Saint-Saens, is noble and flowing and distinguished particularly by the vivid contrast between the Hebrew chants and the sensuous strains of the pagan Orient. Saint-Saens doubtless felt the urge of racial appeal in composing the opera.

A French work, "Samson and Delilah" had its initial public hearing December 2, 1877, at Weimar, due to the friendly interest of Franz Liszt—else it might have been lost to the world through the factional disturbances in musical Paris, due to Richard Wagner's "arrival."

Vivid moments from "Samson and Delilah"

Herodiade

DAY dawns in the court of Herod's palace in Jerusalem. Salome comes forward and greets Phanuel, a soothsayer who is endeavoring to allay the quarrel of the Pharisees and Samaritans. She tells him of the kindness of the prophet. As they leave, the King enters to review the dancers and slaves, and notes that Salome is not among them. Herodias declares that John the Baptist has insulted her and demands his head. Realizing that John is a mighty man among the Jews, Herod refuses. Meanwhile, John appears and denounces Herod and his evil queen. They flee in terror. Salome appears and tells John of her mad love for him. He bids her turn her thoughts to heaven.

King Herod in his sleep sees the beautiful Salome as in a vision and becomes enamored of her. The slaves depart, as Phanuel enters, and Herod, awakening, begs Phanuel for a remedy to cure his love for Salome. Phanuel bids him to activity by making war against the Romans. In the Grand Square of Jerusalem the crowds hail Herod, declaring that the Jews should wage a sacred war against the Romans. A fanfare of trumpets is heard; Vitellius marches in; the Romans have arrived. John and Salome appear, and Vitellius is surprised at the honor shown the prophet. Herodias discovers the interest Herod takes in Salome. John denounces Vitellius and the power of Rome.

Herodias seeks Phanuel who tells her that her star is to be eclipsed by another. Salome seeks the prophet, bound in chains, in prison. Herod finds her weeping there. She spurns his love. He threatens her and leaves. The High Priest in the tabernacle offers up prayer before the altar as a sacred dance is given. Vitellius, Herod, Herodias and Phanuel enter. The death of John is demanded by the priests and he is brought before the King. The crowd also demands John's head. The King plans to free him, when Salome enters and throwing herself at John's feet, begs to be allowed to die with him. Infuriated, in jealous rage, Herod orders the death of both.

In the great hall of the Proconsul's Palace, the Romans, Herod, Herodias, Vitellius and the court assemble. Salome pleads for John's life. She tells Herodias of her life and of her vain search for the mother who has deserted her. Herodias is about to yield to her supplications and admit parentage of Salome, when the executioner, his sword dripping with blood, appears. Salome in despair attacks Herodias. The Queen, begging for mercy, declares she is Salome's mother. Salome curses her and thrusts a dagger into her own heart, dying as the curtain falls.

Pelleas and Melisande

GOLAUD, grandson of King Arkel of Allemonde, lost in a forest while hunting, comes upon Melisande at a fountain weeping over a crown lost in the waters. She will not permit Golaud to recover it, nor will she tell him whence she comes. Won by her pathetic beauty, Golaud persuades Melisande to go with him. Thus opens the mystic and pathetic love tragedy by Maurice Maeterlinck, which Debussy has lifted to the greatest heights of Grand Opera by his music.

In the next scene, Geneviève, mother of Golaud, reads his letter to his half-brother, Pelleas. It reveals that Melisande has been Golaud's wife for six months but that he still remains ignorant of her past. Fearing the anger of King Arkel, he hesitates to bring home his bride and asks Pelleas to signal his approaching ship in case the King is reconciled to receive Melisande.

Golaud and Melisande are welcomed to the household and soon after Pelleas announces that he must leave for the bedside of a sick friend. There is significance in Melisande's mild protest against his departure.

Together, at the Fountain of the Blind, Melisande playing with her wedding ring, tosses it into the air and it is lost in the water. Alarmed, she asks Pelleas what to say to Golaud. "The truth," is his reply.

Melisande, ministering to Golaud who has been wounded while hunting, tells him that she lost her wedding ring while visiting a grotto near the seashore. He admonishes her to search for it, and, if she fears the place, to take Pelleas with her. Pelleas and Melisande, much disturbed, visit the dark and mystic grotto to the end that Pelleas may be able to describe it to Golaud, if questioned. The moon reveals three white-haired beggars, huddled in sleep. Melisande urges that they leave.

Melisande leans from her tower window combing her long hair, and Pelleas, bouncing by, allows it to fall over him like a shower of gold, kissing it rapturously. Golaud surprises him. He cautions Melisande against leaning out too far. "You are a pair of chi'dren," he adds.

Later, Golaud takes his younger brother to the castle vaults and bidding the horrified Pelleas smell the death odor of its stagnant pools, warns him not to repeat the "child's play of last night."

Golaud, playing beneath the tower window with little Yniold, son of a former marriage, questions the child about Melisande and his uncle Pelleas. When little Yniold says, "Yes, they kiss each other sometimes," he lifts him up to Melisande's window, and in answer to his question, the child says that his uncle Pelleas is now with Melisande; they are looking at the distant lights, but say nothing. Beginning to cry, fearful, Yniold begs to be lifted down.

Pelleas urges Melisande to meet him at the Fountain again before he leaves. Old King Arkel has observed Melisande's melancholy. He kisses her tenderly. Golaud enters and Melisande approaches to wipe his forehead, but her husband repulses her and calls for his sword. Her eyes, which old Arkel designates as "Innocence," infuriate him and in a frenzy, he seizes her and savagely dashes her to the ground. Arkel pleads for Melisande. Golaud releases her with affected calm and mutters his suspicions.

At the meeting at the Fountain, Pelleas admits to Melisande that the reason for his going is because he loves her. Melisande, with gentle frankness tells Pelleas that she, too, loves him. As they embrace, Golaud suddenly rushes upon them, sword in hand. Pelleas receives a deadly stroke, while Melisande, pursued by her husband, flees in terror.

The closing scene is in the apartment of the dying Melisande. She has been found wounded, Golaud, his gory sword in hand, lying unconscious beside her. Golaud has regained his senses and come to a realization that his own words were true, childish folly had been the only offense of Pelleas and Melisande. With death hovering close Melisande protests this, while calmly declaring her love for Pelleas. She reaches out feebly for her babe, untimely born.

Golaud, crying in anguish for forgiveness, begs Melisande to speak to him.

"Annoy her no more," commands the gentle and understanding old King, "the human soul likes to go away alone."

Andrea Chenier

THE curtain rises on a beautiful hall in the Castle of Coigny where the servants are preparing for an elaborate ball. Conspicuous among them is Charles Gerard, embittered by the strenuous labor imposed upon his aged father and destined through circumstance to become a leader of the impending French revolution.

Among the arriving guests is Andrea Chenier, a handsome young poet. Madeleine, daughter of Countess de Coigny, coquettishly asks him to improvise upon the theme of love. Chenier, responding, criticises the aristocracy in no uncertain terms and describes the effect produced on the poor by the arrogance of the rich.

His boldness displeases the fashionable guests, but Chenier cares nothing for this. Presently, Gerard enters with a crowd of ragged men and women, protesting against conditions. They are ordered from the castle and Chenier leaves with them.

In the next scene, five years later, at the height of the Reign of Terror, Madeleine's maid, Bersi, is dining with a spy in a Cafe on the Seine. Chenier nearby is informed by Roucher that he is under observation and is in danger. Roucher gives him a pass that will enable him to escape in case of arrest.

Bersi detains Chenier for the purpose of meeting a mysterious woman, who proves to be Madeleine. As she talks with Chenier, she is recognized by the spy, who hurries off to report to Gerard.

Madeleine begs Chenier to save her. Avowing their love, they leave together, but are intercepted by Gerard. Chenier and Gerard draw swords and Roucher spirits Madeleine away to her home. Gerard is wounded and Chenier flees. Gerard declares himself unable to tell his forces the identity of his assailant.

Later, as Gerard harangues the crowd, a spy informs him that Chenier has been arrested and asks him to denounce the latter.

Hesitating to show the friendship and respect he really feels toward Chenier, Gerard finally gives the necessary papers to the spy.

Madeleine interposes and offers herself in exchange for Chenier's life. Gerard, touched, promises to do what he can for both in view of the temper of his unruly horde.

Before judge and "jury", Chenier is denounced as a traitor to the cause. Gerard, regretting that he signed the papers, is impelled to defend him. The mob, however, demanding more victims and thirsty for blood, insist on the death sentence.

In the prison of St. Lazare, Chenier writes verses by lamplight while awaiting his doom. Madeleine, impersonating a recently pardoned prisoner, contrives to enter the jail and Gerard conducts her to Chenier's cell. As they cling in a fast embrace, the death tumbril comes and the lovers go to the guillotine together.

Opera Parties

Opera parties are becoming a popular feature of Chicago life.

This tendency has gone far beyond its origin, a delightful medium for the hostess to entertain a group of guests.

Clubs, social and fraternal organizations, student bodies and all manner of groups find pleasure and profit in "a night at the opera."

This is particularly true of suburban and out-of-town groups, eager for distinctive entertainment impossible of attainment at home.

From this, opera parties range in size to the special performances arranged by business and manufacturing houses for the annual entertainment of their employes, in which many thousands unite in an evening of aesthetic enjoyment.

A department is maintained to assist Committees in arranging such parties, and this service is at your command without charge. Call or address the Manager, Special Parties Activity, Chicago Civic Opera Company, Auditorium Theatre, Chicago.

A Novel Christmas Gift

Opera tickets constitute most unique and highly appreciated Christmas gifts. These are in the form of an ornate certificate, exchangeable at the box office for any performance or performances to the value of the price paid, or in the form of a coupon book. The latter, frequently designated the opera "mileage book," is sold at a discount and has proven very popular with business houses as a convenience in entertaining visiting buyers. The coupon value may be had in tickets for any performance, or spread over the season at the option of the holder. This coupon book, more fully described on page 8, also serves as a happy thought for a birthday remembrance. Either the certificate or the opera "mileage book" may prove a happy suggestion to solve one or more of your Christmas gift problems.

For public accommodation, coupon books are also on sale at Marshall Field & Co.; Carson Pierie Scott & Co.; Charles A. Stevens & Brothers, and Mandel Brothers.

LAST ROSE of SUMMER", alone, makes "Martha" Imperishable

Martha

LADY HARRIET, attendant to Queen Anne, seeks novelty in a visit to the Richmond fair, disguised as a peasant and accompanied only by her personal attendant, Nancy, and Sir Tristan. The latter, cajoled into the adventure, greatly regrets it when they find themselves jostled about by farmers and servants in the market place.

Two bashful young farmers, Lionel and Plunkett, select Lady Harriet and Nancy for servants. The girls consent as a prank, accepting a small sum, which proves a big matter indeed when they find they are legally bound to service.

They prevent Sir Tristan's interference fearing to make themselves ridiculous, and to conceal her identity for the same reason Lady Harriet assumes the name of Martha.

Plunkett's farm is shared by Lionel, who was taken in by Plunkett's parents years before, a mysterious homeless youth. The young farmers are perplexed by the seeming stupidity of the maids, who can neither spin nor churn. "Martha" says that she can sing, however, and at Lionel's request sings "The Last Rose of Summer." Lionel falls in love with the servant, and "Martha" begins to take interest in the stalwart young fellow.

Sir Tristan who has followed them to the farmhouse, forces a window and lifts the girls out. His departing carriage arouses the countryside and when the disappearance of the girls is discovered Plunkett offers a reward for their return.

Soon after, Queen Anne and her court hunt nearby. Plunkett, at an inn at the edge of the wood, gaping at the gay party, encounters Nancy. He seizes her, but is driven off by members of the party. Lionel, pale and dejected, still bemoaning the departed "Martha" and humming her song, meets Lady Harriet. She coldly repudiates him, and Lionel, angered by her attitude tells her he is the master and commands her to follow. Her cries bring Sir Tristan, who orders Lionel's arrest. Lionel gives Plunkett his ring to present as a homage to the Queen in the hope that he may be spared imprisonment.

Back at the farmhouse Plunkett bemoans the fate of Lionel and dreams of Nancy. The girls re-appear, due to Lady Harriet's desire to see more of Lionel. Hoping to lure him back she sings the song he loved, and, sure enough, he returns. But it is in high anger. Lady Harriet vainly begs forgiveness and tells him of her love. Also she explains that the ring he sent the Queen has solved the mystery of his identity and that he is the rightful Earl of Derby. Lionel refuses to accept as sincere any statement from her.

Plunkett and Nancy undertake to reconcile the estranged lovers, but he will have no part in the project until she pledges him her heart and hand. Their scheme works out through Lady Harriet giving a fete, a reproduction of the Richmond fair. Her friends of the court are dressed as peasants and she and Nancy are among the servants. As Lady Harriet sings again "The Last Rose of Summer" Plunkett leads in the disconsolate Lionel and she steps forward and offers her services. As one coming out of a trance, Lionel awakens to his opportunity and folds her in his arms.

Rigoletto

RIGOLETTO, hunchback jester to the gay and unprincipled Duke of Mantua, incurs the displeasure of the courtiers through his villainous mockery of the father of one of the Duke's victims, Count Monterone. The latter pronounces a curse on Rigoletto, who, too, has a young and beautiful daughter, Gilda, concealed from the world with jealous care. The Duke, in the guise of a student, has already met Gilda. Deeply attracted, he inspires in her reciprocal sentiments.

Courtiers, aware of the existence of a lovely young woman in the dwelling of Rigoletto, plot to abduct her. Under pretense of carrying off the wife of Count Ceprano, they induce the Jester to assist, and the bewildered Gilda is carried to the Ducal Palace.

Rigoletto, discovering the ruse, hastens to the Palace in terrible rage to demand his daughter. He meets with contempt and derision. The curse of Monterone already takes effect.

Resolved to revenge himself upon the Duke, Rigoletto hires Sparafucile, a professional assassin, to lure the Duke to a lonely inn through the blandishments of Maddalena, his sister.

Florence Macbeth as Gilda

Gilda, disguised in male attire, is made an eye-witness by her father of the inconstancy of her unprincipled seducer. Maddalena, who has taken a fancy to the Duke, pleads with her brother for his life. Sparafucile consents to spare him, provided a substitute can be found, so that he may deliver the body to Rigoletto as that of the murdered Duke.

Gilda, resolving to sacrifice herself to save the life of the Duke, knocks at the door, is admitted and instantly stabbed by the cold blooded assassin. Rigoletto pays the assassin, is given the sack, and is about to throw it into the river when the voice of the living Duke is heard, nonchalantly singing "Woman is Fickle." Rigoletto tears open the sack and in horrified anguish discovers the dying form of his beloved daughter. Overwhelmed with terror at the fulfilment of the dreaded malediction of Monterone, he collapses beside the body.

The Fatal Curse invoked on Rigoletto

Mignon

MIGNON, daughter of noble parents, kidnapped by Gypsies in childhood, is forced by Giarno, the brutal chief of the band, to dance beyond her endurance in the courtyard of an inn. Lothario, whose mind has been affected by the abduction of his daughter years before, enters in the role of a wandering minstrel. He does not know that the loved one he has so long sought is Mignon, the dancing girl. Wilhelm Meister, a young student, intervenes when Giarno threatens the weary dancer. He questions her as to her parentage and touched with pity, Wilhelm offers the Gypsy chief money to release her. While they enter the inn to complete the bargain, Lothario wanders on in hazy search of his daughter.

Filina, an actress, invites the handsome Wilhelm to the castle of Prince Tieffenbach where she is visiting with her troupe of players. Mignon asks permission to accompany Wilhelm as a servant, and he consents.

Mignon loves Wilhelm. To win his affections, she dons one of Filina's gowns, rouges her face, and is ridiculed by the great actress. Mignon tears off her borrowed finery, dons her gypsy garments, and in jealous despair rushes out to drown herself.

Lothario saves her. Consumed with envy she, expresses the angry hope that fire will destroy the castle in which Filina won Wilhelm's love. Puzzled and muttering, Lothario drops out of sight. Presently the castle bursts into flames, for which the half-witted Lothario is responsible, due to Mignon's jealous wish. The latter is rescued from the flames by Wilhelm.

Instinct leads Lothario to his ancestral castle, the sight of which restores his wandering mind. Mignon, dangerously ill, and Wilhelm are with him. The latter now realizes his love for his beautiful ward. Lothario brings to Mignon's bedside the jewels and prayer book of his long-lost daughter, Sperata. Mignon starts at the ne[illegible], begins to [illegible] from the little book, and soo[illegible]nues dreami[illegible] from memory. Lothario, [illegible]ecstatic[illegible], suddenly recognizes in her his missing daughter. Wilhelm, who has so tenderly watched over Mignon during her illness, asks for Mignon's hand and the youthful couple receive the blessing of the aged father.

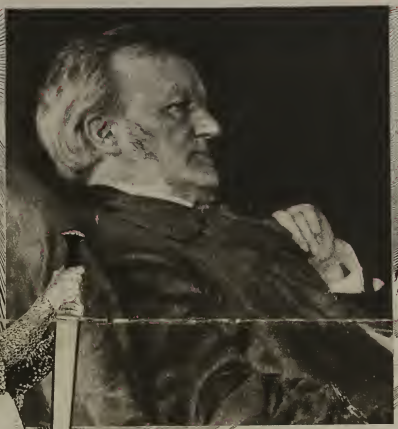
RICHARD WAGNER CENTENARY

MDCCCXIII — MCMXIII



"Parsifal"

the last musical message which Wagner gave the world deals with the most sacred and mysterious legend of Medieval days, the search for the Holy Grail. Feeling that a proper appreciation of Wagner's music drama can only be obtained by a thorough knowledge of the poetical and legendary story, which the master set to his mysterious music, this descriptive program has been prepared.

Descriptive Matter of Bayreuth and the writing of Parsifal

THE YEAR 1913 MARKS the Centenary of the birth of the greatest modern writer of music drama—Wilhelm Richard Wagner. The close of the year brings the curious coincidence of the expiration of the copyright privileges on Wagner's most mystical musical message, his last mighty endeavor—"Parsifal." To the student of Wagner's personality his entire life seems to be surrounded by the glamour of the unreal, and reads like a wonderful fairy story.

In the year 1813 the great poet of the Romanticists, Jean Paul Richter, wrote these words: "Hitherto Apollo has distributed his poetic gifts with his right hand, his musical gifts with his left hand, to two persons so widely apart that the world is still awaiting the advent of a genius who shall create a genuine music drama by writing both the words and the music." That very year there was born in Leipzic the man whose life and works were to be the fulfillment of the prophecy—Wagner—and strangely enough, the little town in the Bavarian highlands, where had lived Jean Paul, was to see the ideal music drama realized in the mighty Bayreuth Festival.

Wagner began his career as an opera composer with "Rienzi," first produced in Dresden, October 20, 1842. This work modeled after the then popular French Grand Opera, met with immediate success, but although fame and fortune seemed to lie in his pathway, Wagner had realized in the writing of this opera, the dramatic absurdities of the old school, and he now deliberately turned toward the ideal form, which the world still calls "The Music of the Future."

On his way to Dresden to conduct his first performance of "Rienzi," Wagner visited the famous old Wartburg Castle of Eisenach, where the Minnesingers of Medieval days, held their annual contests of song. It was from this visit that the composer received the dramatic inspiration which he used in all his later works. When we listen to "Tannhauser" we hear not alone Wagner's first effort in the domain of music drama, but also we meet with real personages who gave to the world the greatest legends of Medieval days. The voice of the noble Wolfram von Eschenbach singing the immortal "Hymn to the Evening Star," recalls to mind that it was from him that Wagner obtained the wonderful story of the Holy Grail, which he used first in "Lohengrin" and later in "Parsifal."

The performance of "Lohengrin," in 1850, may be said to be the turning point in Wagner's artistic career. A political exile, as well as a musical outcast from his native land, the work was produced through the overwhelming generosity of Franz Liszt, being heard for the first time in Weimar, on August 28, 1850, the Centennial celebration of the birth of the great Goethe. So great was the popularity of the opera that Wagner in his exile used often to complain that he would be the last German to hear "Lohengrin."

At one of these early performances of "Lohengrin," a young boy sat enraptured, for to him the glory of the Grail seemed to encircle the genius of Wagner, and he vowed that if the time ever came when he could aid the composer, he would do so to the full extent of his ability. When a few years later this youth ascended the throne of Bavaria, his first act was to send for the exiled composer and to place his influence and wealth at the command of Wagner. Though men still call him "The Mad King," Ludwig II was content to give up his wealth, his throne, and finally, his life to the cause of the Wagner music drama. When the ambassador of King Ludwig II found Wagner, the composer had practically finished "Tristan and Isolde," "The Ring of The Nibelungen" and "Meistersinger" and had made sketches for "Parsifal." He was utterly despondent, for he saw no chance for the production of his mighty dramas. As he wrote to a friend: "Only a king can give me what I now need—an ideal place for the ideal production of my works—but will such a king ever be found?" It was in a very short time after this letter was written that the messenger of the king found Wagner on the shores of Lake Lucerne, and brought him back to Munich, where the composer and his royal patron at once began plans for an ideal opera house. The site first selected was to be in the capital city of Munich, but later, on account of opposition by Munich citizens, this plan was abandoned and the little town of Bayreuth was chosen instead. Strangely enough there stands today in Munich on the very spot which Wagner and his king selected, the famous Prinz Regenten Theatre, where ideal performances of Wagner's works are now given each summer.

Wagner and Ludwig built their Bayreuth temple on one of the hills overlooking the town. It was the intention of the composer that "The Ring" should be kept for exclusive performances here, but owing to the pressing financial needs, the four great dramas were given to the world and "Parsifal" alone remained sacred to Bayreuth until the expiration of the copyright this year. The productions of "Parsifal" by the Chicago Opera Company will be made from the original scores of Bayreuth, and the scenery and costumes will be absolutely duplicated from those which Wagner himself designed.

The legends of the Holy Grail are to be found in all lands, and although Wagner followed more or less closely the version of Wolfram, he has used many points from other sources and authorities. His own conception of the legend is to be found in the description of the Prelude to "Lohengrin."

THE CHARACTERS IN "PARSIFAL" are:

KING TITUREL. The first king of the Grail; to him was given by angelic host the wonder-working spear which pierced Christ's side as he hung upon the cross, and the Holy Grail, the cup last used by Him, which had been the treasure of Joseph of Arimaethea. As Joseph was kept alive in his tomb for many years by the divine power of the Grail, so now Titurel, although entombed, is still a forceful influence felt by the Grail Knights, whenever the sacred vessel is uncovered.

KING AMFORTAS. Son of King Titurel, now reigning in his father's place. Wishing to do battle against the power of evil, Amfortas, taking the sacred spear, has gone to the magic abode of Klingsor, and there has fallen a victim to the beauty of the magician's enchantress. He has lost the spear and has also received a wound, which causes him bodily and mental torture.

GURNEMANZ. Knight of the Grail and faithful servant of King Titurel. He believes firmly that the Grail will send a deliverer to Amfortas, for he has heard the voice of an angel promise "By pity lightened, the guileless one, I have chosen him as thy redeemer."

KLINGSOR. The power of evil. Legend tells us a Minnesinger thrust forth from the Knighthood of the Grail on account of evil passions. He builds a magic castle outside the Grail domains, and there attempts the seduction of the pure Knights.

KUNDRY. The one woman character in "Parsifal"—a dual personality, said to be the Herodias who murdered John the Baptist, and who mocked Christ on his way to Golgotha. She is condemned to wander forever on earth, first in the power of good, then in the power of evil, until the day will come when some pure knight will resist her evil charms. When in the service of the Grail, she fights against the overpowering sleep, for she knows that when she awakens she will be in the power of the magician Klingsor; while welcome is the sleep which comes over her in Klingsor's garden, for she knows that when she awakens, it will be in the service of the Holy Grail.

PARSIFAL. The simple, guileless boy of the forest brought up by his mother Herzeleide to know nothing of the world. Following after some knights he sees in the forest, the youth reaches the domain of the Grail. Here he is led by Gurnemanz into the castle and witnesses the uncovering of the sacred relic. Failing to ask the vital question which would have saved the King, he is put out of the castle. We next see him in the garden of the evil Klingsor. Here, through resisting temptation, he realizes the truth of the suffering King, and sets forth with the reclaimed spear to find again the castle of the Grail and redeem the sorrow-laden Amfortas.

Description of Scenes

THE first scene shows us a wood near the lake, in the Grail's dominion. Awakened by the morning trumpet call, Gurnemanz and two squires are awaiting the King on his way to his cooling, morning bath. Gurnemanz tells them of the founding of the order of the Grail Knights and of how Amfortas received his wound. The wild Kundry appears on her winged horse with balsam for the King. She struggles against the sleep which she feels coming upon her, for she knows that it means she will again be in Klingsor's power. The King reminds them of the promise made by the angel of the Grail, and says he feels that the God-sent deliverer will be Death. The knights bear him away toward the castle.

SUDDENLY cries are heard in the woods and several knights come in, bringing a wild youth from the forest who has killed one of the sacred birds of the Grail. To the questions of Gurnemanz, he proudly claims to have shot the swan, but when the aged knight shows him the sorrow that his deed has brought, the youth breaks asunder his bow and arrows. To the Knight's questions, he replies he does not know his name nor whence he came. Kundry, who knows all the events which transpire, tells the boy that his mother, broken-hearted by his desertion, has died alone, in the forest. The youth is first angry at Kundry, then overcome by remorse, sinks down fainting. Kundry helps to revive him, then, as the power of sleep falls over her, falls to the earth, moaning.

THE bells chime from the tower of the castle calling the Knights to come to the sacred hall. Gurnemanz determines to take the youth thither that he may witness the rites of the sacrament. Then begins that wonderful transformation scene, a marvellous piece of stage mechanism devised by Wagner. As the Knight leading the youth, walks slowly across the stage, the scenery moves with them, so that it seems as though they were actually walking through the woods, up over the rocky heights into the very castle of the Grail. There the scene changes and we see the sacred hall set with the round tables under the dome of radiant light.

THE lad stands silently and gazes at the marvelous temple. He watches the knights march in bearing the couch where lies the suffering King Amfortas. Last appears the shrine of the Grail itself. Bowing his anguished head before the altar, Amfortas begs grace from the Heavenly Father for the wrong which he has done. Then he opens the shrine, and the wondrous glory of the Grail fills the hall, while all kneel in prayer and voices of the angelic host are heard from above. The shrine is again covered. The knights solemnly march forth, but still the lad remains as though turned to stone. Gurnemanz shakes him roughly but when he answers not a word, the aged knight thrusts him out of the door calling after him, "Go back to your geese, fool, and leave our swans alone." Then to the surprise of Gurnemanz, he hears a voice above singing softly:

"By pity lightened, my guileless one."

ACT II takes us to the abode of the evil magician Klingsor. He has discerned in his magic mirror the approach of the innocent youth and makes his plans to entrap and enslave him. The first scene shows us the tower of the enchanted castle. Here, Klingsor has awakened Kundry from her long sleep and commands her to go forth and tempt the youth. At first she refuses to aid him in this evil deed, but Klingsor forces her to do his bidding and with a cry of distress, Kundry disappears in the blue flames from whence she had appeared.

THE scene now changes and we see the wonderful magic flower gardens of Klingsor. The fearless youth appears on the wall and speedily disperses the guards who would bar his entrance. He looks curiously about him, and to his astonished gaze the wondrous flowers are no longer flowers, but beautiful maidens who encircle him and invite him to join with them in their dance. He laughs and plays with them boyishly. They beg him for his love, but not realizing their meaning, he is about to leave them when suddenly he hears a gentle voice, call "Parsifal," and he stops and speaks half to himself—"Parsifal—so did my gentle mother call me. Am I asleep and dreaming that I fancy I hear her voice?"

PARSIFAL looks toward the leafy bower from whence the voice came; he sees the flowers are parted and before him, reclining on a couch is a maiden of marvelous beauty. He draws near, and she speaks again, and tells him that she knew his mother and of her tragic death. Parsifal falls on his knees by the side of the couch, weeping, and the maiden clasps him in her arms telling him she will comfort him in his sorrow. She implants a passionate kiss upon his lips, and as she does so, Parsifal suddenly realizes the cause for the suffering of the tortured King Amfortas, and with a cry that he must return and deliver the Grail, the youth springs to his feet.

KUNDRY cries aloud for help; she curses Parsifal and tells him that never will he find the King: all paths thither will be forever hidden to him. In response to her call for aid, Klingsor appears with the spear which he thrusts full at Parsifal; but above the youth it stops and floats upon the air. Grasping it firmly in his hand, Parsifal makes the sign of the cross, and as he does so the enchanted castle falls to the earth in ruins, and Kundry drops on her knees before him.

With the vision of the suffering King Amfortas still in his heart, Parsifal leaves the garden and carrying the spear before him, starts forth on his quest to find and redeem the King of the Grail.

THE first scene of Act III shows us a hermit's hut in the woods outside the Grail's domains. Here lives Gurnemanz alone. For many years Amfortas has refused to uncover the Grail, and the Knights have gone forth from their sacred abode and have scattered throughout the world. On this Good Friday morning, Amfortas has promised to unveil again the relic, and the knights are coming again to their temple on Montsalvat. Hearing a moaning in the brambles, Gurnemanz discovers Kundry awakening from her long sleep. She tells him that her one wish is to be of service to the Knights of the Holy Grail, and taking a pitcher, goes to fetch water from the spring.

GURNEMANZ baptizes Parsifal and annoints his head with holy oil, proclaiming him the King of the Grail. Kundry, in the guise of a penitent, annoints the feet of the Parsifal and dries them with her flowing hair. As the first act of his Kingship, Parsifal takes water from the spring and baptizes Kundry. The woods and fields are bright with flowers; the holy peace of Good Friday has settled upon all the world. The three bow their heads in prayer. Then chime the bells from the temple. The sacred cloak of the Grail Knights is placed upon Parsifal's shoulders, and Gurnemanz and Kundry lead him again up over the heights to the castle hall.

GURNEMANZ is now amazed to see a strange knight, clad in black armor, approaching. He draws near to him and reproaches him for wearing armor on this holy day. The knight speaks no word, but places his spear in the ground, puts his armor before it, and kneels in prayer. Then Gurnemanz recognizes him as the strange lad whom long ago he had put out of the Grail Castle, and his aged eyes behold again the wonder-working Holy Spear. He begs Parsifal to tell him how he found the way back to them and from whence he obtained the spear, and the knight replies that although the suffering and temptations were hard, he knew that as the God-sent deliverer he must fight on until he had found the sacred castle again.

HERE the Knights are already gathered, and the processions bearing the corpse of Titurel and the litter of Amfortas enter. The suffering King falls on his knees before the Knights, and begs them to deal death to him, a traitor to the good and true.

Parsifal, carrying high above him the sacred spear, steps forward and tells the Knights he has come from God to bring salvation to them all. He shows them the spear, and as he touches the side of Amfortas, the wound is healed. Then the radiant glow of the blood on the spear proclaims the miracle that salvation has again been won for all.

PARSIFAL then tells them God has proclaimed him King of the Grail. He opens the sacred shrine and uncovers the Grail, which he holds on high before the circle of kneeling Knights. The glory of Heaven itself seems to fall from the cup and a radiant glow of celestial light floods all the hall. On her knees before the Shrine, Kundry sinks to her death redeemed. From the loftiest heights a white Dove descends on Parsifal, and as the heavenly voices are heard singing "Wonderous work of mercy, Salvation bringing," the curtain falls.

The Opera Company is indebted to Anne Faulhaber Overndorfer for the preparation of this program. The illustrations are from the series of drawings by Franz Strassen.

Fully eyelids restored, sunken and reduced cheeks plumped and contracted. The yellow sallowness of the skin restored. Mrs. Gage's parlors are thronged from morning until night with delighted patrons testifying to the marvelous effects of Mrs. Gage's method. Many ladies have had one treatment sufficient to entirely obliterate all lines and marks of age.

Astonishing Results

are positively guaranteed from one single treatment. No pain, no inconvenience.

Regular price of treatment $3.00 each, or $25 for course of 10 treatments.

No steaming or hot water. The work is done with an electric battery, and is entirely original with Mrs. Gage. Hollow cheeks filled out to the roundness of youth. Flabby flesh made firm. Do not fail to avail yourself of this extraordinary offer, which only holds good until Feb. 1, 1894.

A Vassar Graduate.

Mrs. Gage desires it to be known that she is a graduate of Vassar College from the full and regular course of study. She graduated with honors, a member of the class of '85, receiving the regular degree of Bachelor of Arts (A. B). Mrs. Gage's diploma as graduate from Vassar, as above specified, hangs upon her office wall, always subject to the inspection of the public.

Mrs. Gage's original researches and discoveries in chemistry have frequently received the approving notice of her former instructor, Le Roy C. Cooley, Ph. D., who for 25 years past has been and still is head of the Department of Chemistry at Vassar. In fact, Professor Cooley has analyzed Mrs. Gage's Remedies and has very emphatically expressed his unqualified approval of them in writing over his official signature.

All Mrs. Gage's Complexion Remedies are for sale by her at her parlors, 806 to 816 the new Marshall Field Bldg., 31 Washington-st., cor. Wabash-av, and by the leading dealers everywhere.

Valuable Book, profusely illustrated, sent on receipt of 10c postage.

N. B.—The two addresses delivered by Mrs. Gage Oct. 7 and Oct. 14, respectively, in the Woman's Building of the World's Columbian Exposition, at the invitation of the Committee on Congresses for the Woman's Building (Mrs. ex-Gov. James F. Ragle, Chairman), will be published in pamphlet form for general distribution. LADIES CAN USE these Remedies with perfect success at home. All letters answered by Mrs. Gage personally.

Is the Print Bad!

or is the trouble with your eyes? If reading a newspaper for a short time hurts your eyes, you may be sure there is something wrong.

Perhaps Your Eyes Are Failing.

If so, you should not continue to rule them by compelling them to perform harder work than they are considered. Consult with us. We are practical opticians.

Sometimes very simple ocular derangements lead to serious pathological conditions, and it is advisable for those afflicted with imperfect vision from muscular insufficiency or otherwise to submit their eyes to an Opthalmoscopic examination.

By this means we give you a differential diagnosis between errors of refraction and diseases of the optic nerve and retina, that have hitherto been allowed to go unreversed on account of the inability of the average optician to recognize the defect and apply the proper remedy.

Our lenses are ground according to our own prescription to correct Strabismus and all deformities of the muscles of the eyeball, to correct the various errors of refraction, soothe the retinal sensibility, strengthen the ciliary system, and prevent those functional derangements which leads to partial or even total blindness.

Do not buy cheap glasses sold by unskilled, uneducated dealers, which glasses are of unequal density, continued use of them will result in positive injury from the constant strain upon the muscles of accommodation and convergence to supply the defects in the glass.

TOWN TOPICS,

The Journal of Society. Published (New York) Every Thursday

One Year, $4.00; Six Months, $2.00; Three Months, $1.00.

THIS GREAT 32 PAGE WEEKLY is universally recognized as the most complete weekly journal in the world.

Its "Saunterings" columns are inimitable.

Its society news, especially of the doings of the 400 of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, and all over the world, is not equalled by any newspaper.

Its Financial Department is authority with all bankers and brokers. Its "Afield and Afloat" makes it the most interesting paper for all lovers of sport—yachting, foot-ball, rowing, shooting, fishing, etc. Its "On the Turf" excels all other racing notes.

Its burlesques, poems and jokes are the cleverest.

AMELIE RIVES, EDGAR FAWCETT, F. MARION CRAWFORD, ANATOLE FRANCE, JULIAN HAWTHORNE, FRANCOIS COPPEE, PAUL BOURGET, GILBERT PARKER, CATULLE MENDES, BARRY PAIN, MAURICE BARRES, MARY J. HAWKER ("Lanoe Falconer".) Mme. LA COMTESSE de MARTEL ("Gyp") AMBROSE BIERCE, RUDYARD KIPLING, ETC., ETC.

—and are, even if a trifle risque, yet always clever, bright and pretty, without coarseness or anything to offend the most refined and moral woman.

Its interest is by no means local; being the recognized journal of American society, it is equally entertaining in all parts of the country.

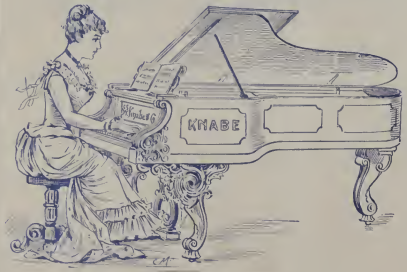
THE PIANO-FORTE.



"No fairy casket full of bliss
Outvalues thee;
Love only, wakened by a kiss,
More sweet may be."

Such was the poet's idea of the piano, many, many years ago, before the wonderful modern improvements had made it the great instrument it now is. Had he seen and heard the

PEERLESS KNABE PIANOFORTE

He might almost be pardoned for putting it even stronger and omitting love itself as an exception, so delicate and sweet, so brilliant and powerful—in a word, so responsive to every emotion of the player is this really noble instrument.

DELLA FOX

As each decade brings its quota of celebrities in literature and the fine arts, so does the stage develop persons of such marked superiority over their fellows that their names go down to posterity along with those of the illustrious personages of that epoch. Within the past few years the name of Della Fox has become indelibly stamped upon the minds of the American people, and a comparatively short space of time only is necessary to give that name universal familiarity. In all that Miss Fox has done during her brief career upon the stage she has manifested the possession of true artistic ability. She is one of the very few genuine comediennes, who, with consummate delicacy and refinement, not only thoroughly interest their auditors, but create hearty laughter. There is every present indication that at no distant day Miss Della Fox will be numbered among the important stars of the time. The illustrated page in this publication devoted to Miss Fox furnishes an excellent impression of the young lady's personality, and [illegible]

WILLIAM LUDWIG.

The engagement of Mr. Ludwig to sing the principal bass parts at the May Festival has been received with general satisfaction. Mr. Ludwig is of Irish descent, and his career adds another to the long list of illustrious names produced by that unhappy country. His musical education was received from the best masters of Europe, and as a dramatic basso he has probably no equal on the stage.

Many persons in Louisville remember his magnificent impersonation of the Flying Dutchman, given here by the American Opera Company several years ago; and it will he of interest to know that immediately after his Louisville engagement he will proceed to London to assume the role of the Dutchman at Covent Garden with the great company now playing there under the management of Mr. Augustus Harris. Mr. Ludwig sings the bass solos in Dvorak's "Stabat Mater" and Mendelssohn's "Elijah." In the latter work he has probably no superior on the concert stage. The following are some of the press notices received by Mr. Ludwig:

And now let us say at last that Mr. Ludwig's "Elijah" was simply a masterpiece. He was enthusiastically received, but upon one or two occasions one could hardly help wondering why even our cold Boston audience did not forget itself and rise to its feet and shout "Bravo, bravissimo." His voice is splendid and, above all, full and manly, and his phrasing is simply a study.

For example, where in the second part the phrase appears, "Tarry here, my servant, the Lord be with thee; I journey hence to the wilderness," a climax of perfect singing was reached which was almost a revelation. Many celebrated baritones have scored great and deserved successes in this part, but no one has ever surpassed Mr. Ludwig in the artistic, intuitive and yet in many instances wholly original reading which he gives to the part.

His "Elijah" is not a dress-coated vocalist singing on the stage of a concert hall. It is a living, breathing man; it is an evident and human dramatic personage. He carries you with him to the desert. And you stand at his side quivering with excitement as he challenges the priests of Baal to the trial which results in the overthrow of their false gods and the victory of the God of Israel. His singing simply dissolves his surroundings and makes oratorio real; and if there were more singers who had this priceless gift the great oratorios could be presented to the public like wholly new works.

It is unnecessary to speak in detail, for it was all magnificent, but it may be said of his rendering of "It is enough" it will not soon be forgotten by any true music lover who heard last night's concert.—Boston Post, April 7, 1890.

The part of Mephistopheles was taken by William Ludwig, who did himself great credit in several of his numbers, particularly in his ditty, "There was a King Once Reigning," and gave a wonderful degree of expression to the charming song, "In This Fair Bower." His rendition of the serenade, "Why Dost Thou Wait at the Door of Thy Lover?" was unexpected, for in several passages of this song he gave an interpretation which, while justified by the notes, is still quite out of the ordinary, and discloses him as a student as well as a singer.—St. Louis Globe Democrat, Dec. 3, 1889.

Mr. William Ludwig's "Elijah" is a performance for the lover of oratorio music to revel in, for his interpretation of this role is a realization of its fullest possibilities, and is calculated to give the highest satisfaction to the most critical. His singing of the "Lord God of Abraham" and "Is Not His Word" were grand dramatic efforts, and his delivery of the recitatives of the title role were declamatory utterances which commanded the most attentive hearing. He won a great ovation after each of his leading numbers, which he well deserved.—Boston Herald, April 7, 1890.

But the special triumphs of the evening came to the "Elijah." William

GEO. G. FETTER PRINTING CO., LOUISVILLE, KY.

WHITNEY MOCKRIDGE.

Ludwig's honors in Boston have been many and well deserved, and won in varied fields. "Elijah," however, was a surprise even to his warmest admirers. There was fervor and passion in all his singing, as well as rare vocal skill and power. It would scarcely be possible to surpass in dramatic force the interpretation of the great air, 'Is Not His Word Like a Fire?' Mr. Ludwig, however, was equally artistic and consistent in all his solos. He entered thoroughly into the spirit of the part, and generous plaudits testified to the admiration of his hearers.—Boston Globe, April 7, 1890.

Mr. William Ludwig sang the role of "Jesus" with a fervor and a beautiful simplicity of spirit that carried its largeness and devotional emphasis to the hearts of his hearers.—Boston Post, April 11, 1890.

No one has sung the music of the role of "Jesus" more acceptably than Mr. Ludwig did last evening, and he created as marked an impression in its delivery as he did in his performance in "Elijah" last Sunday evening.—Boston Herald, April 11, 1890.

Mr. Ludwig deserved the special honors of the evening. It does not seem too much to say that his "Paul" was superb. His work was artistic and effective, as shown in the singing of one of the best numbers in the oratorio, the wonderful aria, "O God, Have Mercy," the pathos was faultlessly rendered.—Providence Journal, Dec. 11, 1889.

To Mr. Ludwig, however, belongs the special palms of the performance. His "Paul" was simply superb. His manner in which that wonderful aria, "O God, Have Mercy," was sung brought tears to many eyes, and well it might. It was an almost faultless rendering. The great recitative and aria, "Now, When the Apostles," was simply tremendous in effect, as sung by this artist. From the first to the last note of his part, his artistic personality and magnetism were immense.—Boston Post, Sept. 25, 1889.

WON GOLDEN OPINIONS.

As Mr. Mockridge is to sing in both "Elijah" and the "Stabat Mater" at the Commercial Club's May Festival, the following from the St. Paul Globe is interesting: "Whitney Mockridge again won golden opinions and persistent applause as a tenor singer in the aria 'Cujus Animam' 'Stabat Mater,' by Rossini. This high estimation was ratified when he sang 'If with all your hearts' from Mendelsohn's 'Elijah.' Mr. Mockridge responded to the persistent applause by singing a pretty melody."

ANALYTICAL PROGRAMS.

The analytical programs, containing a description of all the music, instrumental and vocal, to be presented at the Festival, are now on sale at the music stores and at the office of the Commercial Club, at fifteen cents each, just what they cost. They are attractive and valuable souvenirs.

A PIANO that is becoming a universal favorite here, as it is elsewhere, is the Vose & Sons, one of the oldest and most reliable makes of pianos in Boston. The new uprights of this make have never been sold here until Mr. Emil Wulschner, of Indianapolis, opened a branch in this city at 632 Fourth avenue, and, although here only a short time, the Vose has already become a favorite of all the musicians who have given it a good trial, and it is only a question of a short time until it will be one of THE pianos of this section.

Mr. Emil Wulschner having sold three hundred of this make in Indiana in only eighteen months, it shows how this piano stands in that State. tf

ARTHUR NIKISCH.

TRIUMPHS IN PHILADELFHIA.

"The third in the current series of Boston Symphony concerts took place at the Academy of Music last evening, and was brilliantly successful in every way. A great audience, one that filled every seat in the house and made even standing room hard to get, was present, and a singularly well-chosen and attractive program was rendered in a way that left nothing to be desired. Schubert's B Minor Symphony was played here two weeks ago by the Thomas Orchestra, but it is a composition of such extraordinary charm that it was a pleasure to hear it again, and the interpretation of it given by Mr. Nikisch was exquisitely beautiful. Not less delightful in a widely-different way was the playing of the Mendelssohn music. It could not have been more delicate or brilliant. Mr. Nikisch and his orchestra, however, did not carry off all the honors of the evening. A good part of them fell to the share of Mrs. Nikisch, who was the soloist of the occasion. Her voice is a strong, agreeable mezzo-soprano of ample volume and excellent quality. In the songs with piano Mrs. Nikisch was accompanied by her husband, who showed himself to be as good an accompanist as George Henschel."—North American.

WRITE FOR SEATS.

If you will write to the Secretary of the Commercial Club, inclosing a check or money order, he will send you by return mail the best seats to be had. Reserved seats are but $2.00 each, an extremely low price, considering the character of the entertainment.

THE best piano tuner in the city is at Wulschner's, and it will pay to try him. 11

KENTUCKY'S MAY MUSIC FESTIVAL.

As the time approaches for the consummation of the first grand Music Festival in Louisville, the interest that all lovers of art should feel in the development of musical taste becomes more and more apparent. The box sheet shows an extraordinary sale of tickets, but it is evident that during the next few days many more will be sold; and those who wish to secure a good location should communicate with the Secretary at once. The nature of the music is such that any of the seats in the Auditorium will be desirable; and on the nights when the massive works of Dvorsk and Mendelssohn are to be performed with orchestra soloists and grand chorus, the seats in the rear will be the best in the house for getting the ensemble effects.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra met with an ovation in all the cities visited on its recent Eastern tour, and the critics, although predisposed in favor of local organizations, were forced to admit that such finished playing had never been heard before in this country, and could not be excelled in Europe.

Of the soloists, Miss DeVere is recognized as being par excellence the leading soprano in the United States. During last season she was in demand at all the leading festivals, and it was the universal verdict that no one had ever leaped into the first position more successfully and filled it more worthily than DeVere. She is engaged for the great festivals at Pittsburgh and Buffalo this year, and is said to have no equal in the music of "Elijah" and the "Stabat Mater" of Dvorak.

Mrs. Nikisch has fully sustained her great European reputation in many recent engagements in the East, and will also be one of the principal soloists of the Festival.

Miss Edmands, the Boston contralto, will be a fitting associate to these excellent artistes, for she is one of the best in the country.

Miss Marie Jahn, prima donna soprano from the Metropolitan Opera-house, New York, is recognized as one of the greatest living exponents of Wagner.

Mr. Whitney Mockridge, the renowned tenor, is recognized as the best oratorio tenor in the country, and he will prove to be one of the attractions of the Festival.

Signor G. Campanari, baritone, who will sing the celebrated cavatina from Faust, is a fine singer, and was a member of the opera company at the famous La Scala, Milan. He sings with all the fervor and intensity of the Italian school, and will surely please.

Mr. Ludwig, the great basso, was selected above all others by the Handel and Haydn Society, of Boston, at their grand Festival last year to sing the part of "Elijah," and his rendition of the music was superb.

It will thus be seen that the soloists are the very best that could be obtained. But the Festival will inaugurate a new era in the musical development of Louisville by the formation of a grand chorus to assist in rendering some of the classical works of the great composers. These works will be given (for the first time in Louisville) in their entirety, with the adjuncts of a grand orchestra and famous soloists.

Owing to the large number of visitors expected in the city during Festival week, it is suggested that persons who desire to attend the Festival had better secure tickets AT ONCE.

GROWTH OF A GREAT HOUSE.

Smith & Nixon may feel justly proud of the growth of their house in this city. The firm of Smith & Nixon was established in Cincinnati in 1843, and is the oldest in the territory in which they do business, being in the piano business continuously for forty-eight years, or nearly half a century. Their continued success is due to the standard quality of pianos they sell.

The Chickering piano is the oldest, best, and most durable piano made in America; it has been manufactured for nearly seventy years, and is recognized as the standard of the world. These celebrated pianos are preferred by the leading musicians every where, and in connection with other makes have taken one hundred and twenty-six first gold medals and awards. Smith & Nixon also sell the wonderful "New Scale" Kurtzmann, the most popular upright now made, renowned for its great durability and singing quality of tone. The business of Smith & Nixon's Louisville house has been so great that they found it necessary to double their warerooms; they now occupy the most spacious and elegant piano warerooms in the South.

Smith & Nixon's prices are most reasonable, considering the superior quality of the instruments they handle. Those contemplating the purchase of a piano will find everything they desire in this immense establishment. 11

The Festival Bulletin.

Issued semi-monthly under the auspices of the Press Committee of the Louisville Commercial Club and edited by the Club's Secretary, office, Room No. 900 The Commerce Building, Louisville Ky. For advertising rates, address John L. Moore, Business Manager.

LOUISVILLE, KY., MAY 7, 1901.

HAVING performed the service for which it was summoned, THE FESTIVAL BULLETIN bids the public farewell and retires from the scene of action. It is hoped, however, that it will be called forth again before many months, to trumpet the prospectus of another May Music Festival, the result of the work of the Permanent Festival Association Committee. This Committee has already organized, and it will soon ask the public to support the measures it will formulate. We must have plenty of high-class music in Louisville, and the hearty and generous co-operation of the people will make it possible. If we all pull together, our city can have the best music at the cheapest rate. Let us arrange our next festival so that the poor—many of which class are lovers of fine music—may secure seats ahead at the lowest possible cost. We have made a good start by placing the general admission this year at one dollar.

COME TO THE SCOTCH IRISH CONGRESS.

The arrangements for the Scotch-Irish Congress are now complete. The general exercises of the Congress will be held at Masonic Temple Theater, beginning at 10:30 Thursday, May 14, and holding two sessions a day until Saturday evening. On Sunday morning the visiting clergymen will occupy the various pulpits of the city, and on Sunday evening, under the auspices of the local committee, an old-time Scotch-Irish religious service will be held at the Auditorium, in which all the churches will unite.

All the routine business of the society will be transacted at special meetings of the members themselves.

The general exercises of the Congress are open and free to the public, who are cordially invited to attend, without reference to nationality. The programs at these meetings, consisting of addresses, many of them short and impromptu, by the most distinguished orators of the country, and of delightful music afforded by a band celebrated for its rendition of Scotch and Irish airs, will be highly entertaining to popular audiences.

The principal speakers and their subjects follow: The first speaker of the occasion will be Hon. Simon B. Buckner, Governor of Kentucky, who will deliver the address of welcome. Then will follow, in the order yet to be designated, Hon. A. E. Stevenson, of Bloomington, Ill., on the Scotch-Irish of the "Bench and Bar;" Rev. Stuart Acheson, Toronto, Canada, on the "Scotch-Irish in Canada;" Mr. Alexander Montgomery, of San Francisco, on "The Pioneers of California;" Dr. John S. MacIntosh, of Philadelphia, Pa., on "Our Pledge to Posterity," "The Scotch-Irish of Today and To-morrow;" Judge O. P. Temple, of Knoxville, Tenn., on "The Scotch-Irish of East Tennessee;" Judge Wm. Lindsay, of Kentucky, on "The Scotch-Irish of Kentucky;" Dr. J. H. Bryson, of Huntsville, Ala., "Scotch-Irish Influence in the Formation of the Government of the United States;" Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge, of Lexington, Ky., on "Scotch-Irish Statesmanship." Besides these, addresses will be delivered on subjects not yet announced, by Hon. Henry Watterson, of Kentucky; Col. A. K. McClure, of Philadelphia; Col. J. F. Johnston, of Birmingham, Ala.; Dr. Thomas Murphy, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Dr. John Hall, of New York.

Belfast, Ireland, the greatest of Scotch-Irish cities, will send Mr. Francis D. Ward, President of her Board of Trade, to represent her at the Congress. Other Irish cities will also be represented.

An informal reception will be given to members of the society and specially-invited guests, at the Galt House, after the regular exercises on the first evening.

The official headquarters will be at the Louisville Hotel, at which will be established a bureau of information for visitors.

The Louisville & Nashville and Queen & Crescent railroads and the Central Traffic Association lines, which embrace all the territory North of Louisville and from the Mississippi river on the West to Buffalo, Pittsburgh and Parkersburg on the East, will give one-half fare rates for the round trip to and from the Congress. These tickets will be good for starting on the 12th and 13th of May and limited for returning not later than the 19th. They will be on sale at all the ticket offices of the lines mentioned on the days above stated, May 12th and 13th; passage to be begun on the day of purchasing the ticket.

The Southern Traffic Association, embracing most of the roads in the territory South of the Ohio and East of the Mississippi, will sell tickets at one and one-third fare for going and returning, on the certificate plan.

All persons who wish to visit Louisville for the purpose of attending the Congress or any of the other attractions in progress the same week, can avail themselves of these rates whether they are of Scotch-Irish extraction or not.

The Congress promises to be one of the most notable events in the history of the country.

The Southern Afternoon Press Bureau will hold a convention here May 14th to 16th, inclusive, and the event will attract wide-awake newspaper men from every section of the South.

There will be nine days of splendid racing at the Louisville Jockey Club, beginning with Kentucky's famous Derby, May 14th.

PAGANINI'S DEATH.

In a French paper, Madame Maria Escudier gives the following account of the death of Paganini:

"On the 27th of May, 1840, I was at Nice, and heard of Paganini's death. I sought out the narrow and obscure alley where the violinist dwelt. As I mounted the stairs I met a girl weeping. I asked her the cause of her tears. She answered that her master, M. Paganini, was just dead, and she had lost her place. Curiosity drove me to enter the chamber. There, on a truckle bed, lay the celebrated violinist I had so often applauded with transport in Germany, England and France. A napkin was around the dead man's neck and a plate stood near containing the remains of a pigeon.

"'The poor man,' said the girl, 'seemed to foresee he would not finish the pigeon. When he gave me the money for the day's expenses, he said, "Zulietta, I should like to have a pigeon." "Well, sir, give me twelve sous more." "Twelve sous," he replied, making a worse grimace than usual, "twelve sous! Too dear, Zulietta, get one, my good girl, for eight sous, for you know, my child, there are very many bones in a pigeon." And yet people tell me he was very rich.'

"I ceased to listen to her talk; my eyes fixed themselves on the corpse of Paganini; the countenance, dry as his violin, had, in spite of its ugliness, the solemn character which death imparts. His violin hung mute on the wall.

"Some old women came to perform the last rites to the dead millionaire. I determined to pay funeral honors to his Stradivarius. I placed a white cloth on the table, and laid on it gently the body of the violin. When I touched it it gave out a feeble sound that made me shudder as if I had heard a voice proceeding from the lifeless breast of Paganini. I gently wrapped up the violin, placed a chaplet of immortelles at one end and two lighted tapers at the other, and slowly quitted the apartment, where a young artist was hurriedly sketching the face of the immortal violinist.

"As Paganini had died without the rites of the church, the authorities refused to grant interment to his remains. The steamboat for his native place, Genoa, refused to take the body. It was kept for some days in a cellar, and it was necessary to appeal to Rome to have it transferred to the Villa Cajona, near Parma, where, five years after his decease, the great virtuoso was interred without pomp, like the meanest of mankind."

WHY HE ATTENDED THE SYMPHONY.

Among the crowd that assembled at Music Hall yesterday afternoon to attend the Symphony rehearsal was a small boy who attracted much attention, says the Boston Post. He was neatly but poorly dressed, his hat had seen better days, and altogether his general appearance was such as to contrast strongly with the comfortably-clad people around him. But he seemed bent on hearing the concert, and, notwithstanding his diminutive stature, he pushed his way well to the front in order to be among the first to enter the hall when the doors opened. His eagerness, born doubtless from a natural love of music, excited the sympathies of the crowd, and they began to aid him in his effort to gain admittance.

"See that boy," said one lady to her companion. "How anxious he is to hear the concert. Do you know I think these low-priced rehearsals are excellent education, for they elevate the popular taste in music and enable many poor people, like this boy, to hear a high grade of selections at a small expense. Musical tastes in one so young ought to be encouraged. Let's help him." So they made way for the lad, who looked up with great brown eyes, and, although he held his peace, everyone knew he was grateful to his kind friends. At last he worked his way up to the head of the line and when the doors were thrown open he ran ahead with marvelous speed and secured a nice front seat in the balcony. There he sat with an expression of satisfied expectancy, and more than one who saw him patiently sitting there were glad they had assisted him to so much innocent enjoyment. But about five minutes before the beginning of the performance a lady came in and snapped her finger at the boy, who quickly jumped up and gave her the seat. "Now run back to the office, Jimmy," she said, "as fast as you can, for my husband wants you to run on an errand right away." And the youthful Mozart, with a much-pleased expression, ran down the stairs, two at a time, and on reaching the street breathed a quiet sigh of relief.

WHAT CRITICS THINK OF HER.

New York Sun: Signorina De Vere—To deal with the most notable occurrence of the night—is a soprano endowed with a pure, vibrant and flexible voice ranging as high as F. Her execution is, if anything, more remarkable than her voice. She has such precision and fluency as won universal admiration for the prima donnas for twenty years back, and in the ever fascinating art of dwelling upon a high note, making a crescendo and a diminuendo, and then gliding down to a remote step of the scale, she reminds one exactly, as she also does through the crystalline beauty of her upper tones and the facile grace and surety of her performance in general, of Mme. Gerster when that delightful songstress was at her best. When the Mase audience of the period interrupts the "Lucia" rondo with frantic applause, and follows up this demonstration with half a dozen recalls, and when a like demonstration attends later on, her interpretation of the "Dinorah" waltz—"Ah! non giunge," being given as an encore after the first piece, and "Home, Sweet Home" after the second—the enthusiasm must be regarded as significant. Since Mme. Gerster's palmy days no such scene has been witnessed in this city.

CLEMENTINE DE VERE.

St. Louis Republic: All expectations and interest centered on the next singer who was to make her debut before a St. Louis audience, Signora Clementina De Vere, a world-famous soprano, noted for her brilliancy of execution, an artist of the rank of Jenny Lind, Gerster, and Patti. The audience expected a grand singer, so when she appeared to sing the aria, "Thou Brilliant Bird," from the opera "The Pearl of Brazil" of David, she received an ovation from the audience and the members of the band that might make any artist feet flattered. Her voice is a pure, light soprano, even, true and smooth, and of the greatest flexibility. The selection, difficult and full of runs, thrills and runlades, showed off her superb voice. To say that she enraptured the audience is only stating a fact. When she had finished, Music Hall never heard such applause, it was a furore; the audience was wild and shouted, as well as clapped hands and stamped feet.

Buffalo Courier: The principal debutante of the evening was Signorina DeVere, this being her first season in America. She was found to be an exceptionally gifted soprano, and her singing created the appreciative enthusiasm always commanded by true artistic effort.

San Francisco Call: As Margherita Miss DeVere was divine, both in her remarkable beauty of person and the rare excellence of her acting and singing. As has been well suggested of all the great Margheritas of the past there is not one with whom she would not compare most favorably. Her execution of the famous "Air de Bijoux" was something marvelous, and as her voice would ripple with exquisite melody through the higher notes a murmur of subdued applause would rise from gallery and pit only to sink into breathless silence as she would soar to some higher key with an ease and method which is rarely attained through the years of the most assiduous practice. But at the end of the song the house could contain itself no longer, and a thunderburst of applause followed, lasting for fully a minute.

MRS. NIKISCH IN BALTIMORE.

"The Baltimore people appreciate the splendid work of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Last night every seat in the house was filled and many persons were compelled to stand. While the program was not of such great interest as the last concert, it was a superb one, and almost spoiled the audience for less artistic performances. Mrs. Arthur Nikisch's first appearance created general interest, and the singing was well received. Mrs. Nikisch has not a great voice, but a remarkably pleasing one. She was formerly a light opera singer, and has performed successfully in the Stadt Theatre, Leipsic, and the Hof Theatre, Cologne. Mr. Nikisch accompanied her on the piano, and no more exquisitely played accompaniments were ever heard in Baltimore." —Sun.

THE BEST SEATS.

Many inquiries are received as to which are the best seats for enjoying the Music Festival. Some people have a preference for seats near the stage, but they do not consider the fact that a large orchestra and chorus, aggregating in all 325 performers, can be heard to the best advantage at a distance. The acoustic properties of the Auditorium are so good that a whisper can be heard all over the house, and it stands to reason that the combined effects of 325 people will be best heard from the rear of the hall.

AN EMBARRASSMENT OF RICHES.

In a conversation with a prominent musician the other day, he expressed the opinion that the May Festival program caused him to be in a dilemma. He had to divide up his seats with his family, and could not decide which were the best programs from a musical standpoint. He says they are all good, and contain so much that one wants to hear that there is an embarrassment of riches. The Tuesday night and Wednesday afternoon programs consist of the greatest variety, and, excepting the choral nights, will probably be the most attractive.

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Appreciation of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which has been steadily growing in New York for five years, says the Tribune of Feb. 25th, seems to be developing into a very fine cult. The last concert of the organization at Chickering Hall was an extraordinary affair, so far as the recognition of the work done by Mr. Nikisch and his men was concerned, but a still more extraordinary and indeed incomprehensible affair so far as the enjoyment of the blownish antics of Mr. de Pachmann was concerned. That the playing of the superb band, under its inspiring leader, should be appreciated at its full value by a New York audience is not at all to be wondered at. New Yorkers know good music when they hear it, because they have been trained in appreciation by Mr. Thomas and his confrères, and they cherish no petty prejudices against virtuosi who reach their ideals of excellence in this department. They have a good deal of amiability, too, and love relaxation, which, perhaps, goes as far as any thing can to explain the circumstance that Mr. de Pachmann's curtain calls amused laughter and a new round of applause when he throws kisses to the pianoforte on which he has played, and by a series of eloquent gestures informs the audience that to the instrument alone he himself is due the credit for his brilliant performances. It is all affectation and unworthy of an artist, of course, but so long as the public can be humbugged into the belief that it is but the ecstasy of genius that spurs these species of charlatanry will be practiced by M. de Pachmann, and applause will follow it for no other purpose than to see what he will do next. The joy of it is that it spoils the enjoyment of the judicious when he plays so beautifully as he did last night in Mozart's D minor concerto and so dizzyingly as he did in Mendelssohn's "Rondo Capriccioso" and an Etude by Chopin, with which he opened his program performance after the concerto. And it robs Mr. Nikisch's concert of the dignity which its lofty artistic merit invested it with. The orchestra's numbers last night were Chertkoff's "Anacreon" overture, the "Waldweben" from Wagner's "Siegfried" read in a style that sounds rather tame in New York, and Brahms's D minor symphony.

Next season the orchestra will give six concerts, the increased number being due to the fact that it will take the place in Brooklyn's musical life vacated by the Philharmonic Society. Seats for the series may be reserved on and after to-day at Schubert's music store on Union Square.

GERTRUDE EDMANDS.

ABOUT MISS EDMANDS.

"Miss Edmands brought to her share of the work a voice that is remarkable for its sympathetic quality and which in the prayer to Wodan was imbued with a religious feeling that made her singing extremely effective."—Washington Post, Feb. 13, 1890.

"Miss Gertrude Edmands made her debut here and with the very first note she demonstrated her title to rank among the best of contraltos. She sings with exquisite taste, phrases with rare intelligence and refinement, and her enunciation is delightfully distinct."—Petersburg Daily Index-Appeal, May 23, 1889.

"Miss Edmands has a superb contralto voice."—Richmond Dispatch, May 25, 1889.

"Miss Gertrude Edmands is well known for her work—artistic work which would alone make her famous. She adds to a rich deep voice a wonderful power of expressing the meaning of her sentences."—Boston Traveler, Dec. 21, 1889.

"Miss Edmands added much to the enjoyment of the evening by the musical and refined way in which she sang her group of songs by Schumann."—Richard Heard, in Boston Post, Nov. 22, 1888.

"Miss Edmands has a beautiful voice and a refined style, and her share of 'He Shall Feed His Flock' was exquisitely successful."—N. Y. Sun, Dec 30, 1887.

ABOUT THE PROGRAMS.

The programs for the May Festival have been arranged with a view to include in the performances the widest variety combined with the best quality of music. No doubt many persons who have a preference for certain styles would wish to see more of their favorite composers represented, but it will be seen that in the limited scope of the Festival there is not room to cater to individual tastes. It is believed that the program as selected will meet with the favor of all reasonable people, and that the Festival as arranged will prove to be of the greatest interest to the greatest number.

RHEA'S FAREWELL AT THE
St. Charles Theatre.
Rhea in "Arcadia"—The Story of the Play.
"Arcadia," the play in which Miss. Rhea will begin her farewell engagement at the St. Charles on Sunday next, is called Dangerous Ground in the original French of Sardou. The plot hinges on the inconsiderate action of an Impetuous lover, going into the house of his betrothed at an unusual hour, finds himself in the apartments of his sweetheart's married sister, the Baroness de Trouville, with whom he had previously had a slight flirtation. Threatened with discovery by the husband, he seizes the Baroness' diamonds, resolving to save her reputation even at the cost of being branded as a thief. The husband's suspicions were aroused, however, and even his wife's assurances of her innocence fail to allay it. He refuses to hear what the lover would say, and a duel to the death is about to take place when all is happily cleared up by the ingenious confession of Helene, the wayward wife of the wife's sister, and the real cause of the whole trouble. As Helene Mlle. Rhea was seen at her best. Nothing she has heretofore done in New Orleans has been entirely in the line of her powers and so calculated to display her many charms of manner as this part. Love makes her bold, but even boldness does not rob her of her suddenly charms. She is never at a disadvantage throughout the play, and at all times is bright, innocent and attractive. In the last act she was peculiarly effective, and drew from the audience in the midst of spontaneous applause. In every way there is noticeable a marked improvement in this always-pleasing actress. She is deserving more at ease with her English, and her mispronunciation merely adds piquancy to the delivery of her lines. Taken as a whole, her Helene is a pretty and artistic bit of work, and those who were pleased with her in other roles will be charmed with her in this. "Arcadia" can be given only Sunday, February 8th. Monday, Tuesday and Tuesday matinee. On Wednesday, Rhea will appear in her superb comedy, "An Unequal Match." Thursday, by general desire, "The American Countess." Friday will be a gala night. The Drury Lane version of "The School for Scandal" will be produced for Rhea's grand benefit, and at the farewell matinee on Saturday "Camille" will be played. There will be no performance on Saturday night.

A Word of Advice.

Wishing to impress upon the minds of the many visitors who have come to our city to see the "World's Great Exposition," that in their search after pleasure they must not lose sight of the all-important fact that the change of climate, and especially that of water, greatly endangers their health and comfort, and to place within their reach the means of obviating this danger, we cite to them the old adage, "An ounce of preventive is worth a pound of cure. So protect yourselves by following the advice of Dr. Harvey L. Byrd, who recommends "Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey" as a stimulant, to be taken in the following manner: To a glass of water or milk add one half ounce of "Duffy's Malt Whiskey." If taken as advised, you will find it not only very palatable, but very effective as a tonic to your good health, and thereby greatly add to the pleasure of your visit.
The "Duffy Malt" will be found very beneficial, not only to the visitor, but also to the resident of our city, who will find it invaluable as a stimulant. A careful perusal of our catalogue will show why the "Duffy Malt" stands unexcelled as an article for the sick room as well as for the table.
The "Duffy Malt" can be found at our new store in the Pickwick Club building, corner Canal and Carondelet streets.
The "Duffy Malt" can be found at our new store in the Pickwick Club building, corner Canal and Carondelet streets. Price, one dollar per bottle; six bottles for five dollars. POETRY.

HOW A PAPER IS MADE.

"SAY how is a newspaper made?"
The question is easy to ask;
But to answer it fully, my dear,
Were rather a difficult task;
And yet, in a bantering way,
As the whippoorwill sings in the glade,
I'll venture a bit of a lay
To tell you how a paper is made.

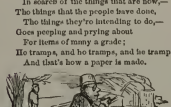
An editor sits at his desk,
And ponders on things that appear
To be claiming the thoughts of the world —
Things solemn, and comic and queer;
And when he has bit on a theme
He judges it well to parade,
He writes, and he writes, and he writes,
And that's how a paper is made.

He writes, and he writes.

An editor sits at his desk,
And puzzles his brain to make out
"Telegraph" so squabbled and mixed—
It's hard to tell what it's about;
Exchanges are lying around and,
While waiting dispatches delayed,
He clips, and he clips, and he clips,
And that's how a paper is made.

He clips, and he clips.

An editor out in the town,
In search of the things that are new,—
The things that the people have done,
The things they're intending to do,—
Goes peeping and prying about
For items of many a grade;
He tramps, and he tramps, and he tramps,
And that's how a paper is made.



He tramps, and he tramps.

And all that these workers prepare,
Of every conceivable stripe,
Is sent to the printer, and he
Proceedeth to stick it in type;
His lines, respecting his will,
In slow moving columns parade;
He sticks, and he sticks, and he sticks,
And that's how a paper is made.

He sticks, and he sticks.

In short, when the type is all set,
And errors cleaned up more or less,
'Tis "locked in a form," as we say,
And hurried away to the press;
The pressman arranges his sheet,
His ink gives the requisite shade;
Then he prints, and he prints, and he prints,
And that's how a paper is made.

He prints, and he prints.

MISCELLANY.

MALIBRAN AND THE KING.

At Naples, the rule is that when an actress is about to make her début, she waits and solicits the honor of his Majesty's presence on her first appearance. In compliance with this regulation, Madame Malibran went to the king and said hesitatingly, —

"Sire, if it be agreeable to your Majesty, I have come to request that your Majesty will be graciously pleased not to appear at the Theatre to-morrow evening." The king, not a little astonished, demanded the reason of a request so singular.

"May it please your Majesty, I have heard that it is the etiquette here in Naples, not to applaud in the presence of royalty; that is to say, unless you graciously set the example."

The king, perceiving her embarrassment, desired her to speak out.

"Sire, as you are good enough to command me to speak, I will. The fact is, I am so much in the habit of being applauded the instant I appear on the stage, that I am sure, if I were received in silence, I couldn't sing a note."

"Very well," said his Majesty, "I will set the example. Fear not; you shall be abundantly applauded."

Madame Malibran returned home highly satisfied by having thus secured powerful protection. In the evening, just before her appearance on the stage, she got between the side scenes, where she might be seen from the royal box, and having caught the eye of the king, reminded him of his promise by clapping her hands. His Majesty, pleased with her freedom and originality, failed not to be as good as his word, and the whole house responded to the royal signal. — Arvine.

CURIOSITY OF PUNCTUATION.

All languages have their curiosities, but the following, which is said to be a reality, could hardly occur in any but the French.

A certain man made his will, and by it, in the line, "A chaque deux cent mille francs," he gave to each of two sons, two hundred thousand francs. In folding before quite dry, an accidental mark was made after the d in deux, so that the line read, —

"A chaque d'eux cent mille francs," making it read, "to each of them, one hundred thousand francs," instead of "to each, two hundred thousand francs." This slight accident made a sad inroad in their fortunes.

HAYDN'S COURT KNOWLEDGE.

A female singer, who was in high favor with a German prince, was appointed to sing one of Haydn's compositions. At the rehearsal she and the conductor differed as to the time in which it ought to be sung. It was agreed that the composer should be referred to, who, when the conductor waited on him, asked if the lady was handsome.

"Very," was the reply, "and a special favorite with the duke."

"Then she is right," said Haydn, with a significant look at the poor, disconcerted professor, who, in all probability, had he gained his point, would have lost his place; and this Haydn well knew.

ANECDOTE OF HANDEL.

Handel was one of the most humorous of mortals, and at the same time one of the most irritable. His best jokes were perpetrated frequently during his most violent bursts of passion. Having occasion to bring out one of his oratorios in a provincial town of England, he began to look about for such material to complete his orchestra and chorus as the place might afford. One and another was recommended, as usual, as being a splendid singer, a great player, and so on. Preliminaries, Handel made his appearance, puffing, both arms full of manuscript. "Gentlemen," quoth he, "you all read manuscripts?" "Yes, yes," responded from all parts of the room. "We play in the church," added an old man behind a violoncello. "Very well, blay dis," said Handel, distributing the parts. This done and a few explanations delivered, Handel retired to a distant part of the room to enjoy the effect. The stumbling, fumbling, and blundering that ensued are said to have been indescribable. Handel's sensitive ear and impetuous spirit could not long brook the insult; and, clapping his hands to his ears, he ran to the old gentleman of the violoncello, and, shaking his fist furiously at the terrified man and the instrument, said: "You blay in de church? Very well, you may blay in de church; for we read de Lord is long-suffering, of great kindness, forgiving iniquity, transgression, and sin. You sal blay in de church, but you sal not blay for me;" and, snatching together his manuscripts, he rushed out of the room, leaving his astonished performers to draw their own conclusions.

GAUGE FOR A MUSICIAN.

A well-known pianist recently played some of his most astonishing pieces before the Sultan. At the conclusion of the performance, the Sultan, who had been observing him with great apparent admiration, said to him, —

"I have heard Thalberg (a low bow of the artist, and a modest smile); I have also heard Listz (a still lower bow and devout attention); but not one of all that played before me perspired as much as you do."

HARVARD SYMPHONY CONCERT.

The seventh concert, given on Thursday afternoon, had the absolute novelties — Mr. Drezel's setting of Longfellow's charming verses written for Agassiz's fiftieth birthday, sung by Miss Doria, and an overture by Dudley Buck, both of which were very well received. Mr. Lang played Schumann's concert-stueck in G and a cappriccio by Bennett, in his most finished manner. The concert closed with a fair rendering of the Fifth Symphony of Beethoven. The eighth concert will take place on Friday, Feb. 13.

REMINISCENCES OF PAREPA.

The New York Tribune pays a merited tribute to the personal character of Madame Parepa-Rosa, the deceased prima donna. Her marriage with Mr. Rosa was one of love on both sides, and the mutual respect and frank affection which always subsisted between husband and wife were charming to witness. The most affectionate relations generally prevailed between her and the members of the company. Almost any of the subor- [illegible] the chance to be of service to "Madame," and the chorus singers often took a few dollars out of their earnings to buy flowers on special gala occasions for the prima donna who always had a kind word for them and a gracious smile. With the principal artists, also, despite the proverbial jealousies of the profession, her intercourse was unusually cordial and agreeable. Her best friends, however, were chosen from private life, and in their society she was always one of the most charming of companions. She was constantly doing little acts of kindness in unexpected ways — singing to the servants at the hotels in her travels, or helping some broken-down musician. On one occasion she attended a benefit performance at a theatre, when one of the principal attractions advertised did not appear. She promptly came forward from the audience, and relieved the beneficiary's distress by going upon the stage dressed as she was and volunteering a song. She owned a pleasant house in London, to which it was her purpose to retire some day for the enjoyment of that quiet, domestic life for which she always had a longing. Probably no opera singer who ever visited America was more universally respected by musicians.

THE BRAVEST SOLDIER.

Frederick the Great, after a terrible engagement, asked his officers, "Who behaved the most intrepidly during the contest?" The preference was unanimously given to himself. "You are mistaken," replied the king; "the boldest fellow was a fifer whom I passed twenty times during the engagement, and he did not cease, or vary a note the whole time."

— Did you ever hear when the harpist was preparing for sweet melodies, how he took the chords that were out of tune and commenced screwing them, and fingering them, till one by one they had all been brought to the right key, and how then he swept his hands over them and brought exquisite harmonies forth from them? The process of chording was one of hideous sounds, but the sounds that were produced after the instrument was put in order were sweet and agreeable to the ear. And I believe that the proper condition of man is one in which his soul gives forth music and an abundance of it. — H. W. Beecher.

TABLE TALK.

— A wag on reading C. A. White's new Quartette, "The Wolf on the Hill," said he would rather have him there than howling at the door. Correct.

— "Give me my own native oil" (isle), whistled the locomotive, when they substituted kerosene for sperm.

— There are upwards of five hundred journals in China devoted exclusively to musical [illegible] the considerable cities contain two or more theatres for operas. No wonder they are so noted for their music.

— He'd Play It. — A lugubrious-looking individual, approaching a musician, asked him in earnest and melancholy tones, "Friend, do you know 'Man's chief end'?" The innocent fiddler cheerfully replied, "No, sir; but if you'll whistle it I'll play it."

— "The Israelites Crossing the Red Sea" is one of the paintings exhibited by a professor in Maine, who claims in his advertisement that they were "photographed direct from nature."

— Singing by Rule. A writer in the New England Chronicle, in 1723, thus observes: "Truly I have a great jealousy that if we once begin to sing by rule, the next thing will be to pray by rule; and then comes Popery."

— Said a famous composer when praised for the ease and grace of his melodies, —

"Ah! with what difficulty is this ease acquired."

— The Arcadian says: — The Vokes family is to have four thousand dollars a week, in gold, in Philadelphia.

— Bach's "Passion, according to St. Matthew," will be sung again this year with orchestral accompaniment at St. Paul's Cathedral, London, during Holy Week.

— An interesting and valuable discovery has lately been made in Prague. Portions of the opera of "Don Giovanni," entirely in the handwriting of Mozart, have been found in the theatre where the first representation of the great work took place. The museum at Vienna has purchased the treasure for £280.

— Another batch of Italian papers is at hand, with flattering notices of Mrs. Logan.

— T. Martin Towne is much commended as a musical convention leader out West. He is a larger Town-e than he was years ago, when we used to see him now and then. He will be getting a city charter yet.

— Will some medium who stands high in the esteem of the spirits invisible, tell us how ghosts of the Pilgrims enjoy our sacred concerts?

— The pupils of the Indiana Conservatory, Fort Wayne, Ind., J. C. Bartlett and S. B. Morse principals, gave their 16th concert Dec. 5th.

Charles McKendree Trimmer.

The subject of this sketch has been devoted earnestly to the cause of music for twenty-one years, mainly in institute, convention, and normal-school work. He was born Nov. 19, 1844, near the little village of Hudson, McLean County, Ill., where he spent his boyhood days upon the farm.

Mr. Trimmer is of a delicate organization; and, always having an aversion to everything pertaining to rudeness, he seldom enjoyed the accustomed sports of most boys, though he is fond of a good story or joke. He is conservative, yet always affable; and, from his early childhood, his sympathetic and peculiarly sensitive nature was influenced easily by anything tender and pathetic. His love of the beautiful in nature, music, art, and the like, is very apparent. Whether admiring a work of art, engaged in or listening to a beautiful solo, a grand oratorio, or a masterly symphony, he becomes so inspired by its influences as to seem enraptured with its beauties.

He disclosed a great love for music at an early age, which grew to be such a passion with him that his almost incessant singing and whistling often proved a source of annoyance to his family.

His father, having no love for music, never aided or encouraged his son to cultivate his talents in that direction. The death of his dearly-loved and sympathetic mother was his first great sorrow, after which changes came, and he was forced to give up his college attendance, and made his home with his oldest and only living brother. Here he soon brought a little four-and-a-half-octave melodeon, which he had succeeded in purchasing, and a few books, and at once began his chosen study.

In the winter of 1864, he taught a few singing classes, using a violin which he had secured through the aid of his kind mother. In the fall of 1865, he purchased a five years' scholarship in the Northwestern Normal Academy of Music, located at Bloomington, Ill., and determined to devote all his energies to the profession of music. He studied with Prof. John Zemdell, of New York, and soon began teaching classes in vocal music, and later on the violin. In 1868, he attended the Iowa Academy of Music, at Davenport, where he began the study of harmony as a specialty, under the able instruction of Prof. F. A. Parker, a graduate of the old Boston Music School, founded in 1851 by Prof. B. F. Baker.

In 1870, he met a Miss Druley, a teacher of piano and organ, and a fine singer; and, being called upon to aid her in concerts, their acquaintance soon ripened into a mutual attachment, and in 1871 they were married. In the summer of 1873, they attended a session of the National Normal Musical Institute, held at Chicago; after which, returning to their home at Bloomington, Mr. T. organized and conducted his first institute, at Normal, Ill., which proved a success. Being organist and director of music at the First M. E. Church of Bloomington, he arranged for and conducted a very successful normal musical institute there in 1874.

In the following winter, Mr. Trimmer and his wife entered the Boston Conservatory of Music. Mr. T. studied harmony with Prof. B. F. Baker as well as with Julius Eichberg; and Mrs. T. made a specialty of piano and singing, in which she was very successful.

After leaving the Conservatory, they settled in Chicago, which is still their home. In 1878, Mr. Trimmer was employed as director of music at Dr. Worrall's church, Chicago, and while there engaged did his first important work in musical composition, though he had written a "Thanksgiving Service," hymn tunes, chants, part songs, and so forth. In January, 1879, he finished an elaborate "Christmas Service," for choirs, a cantata, in four parts, which was given with his large chorus choir at Dr. Gurney's church, Chicago, when he was the director of music there in 1880, where it was received favorably. It is pronounced by competent critics to be a valuable acquisition to the libraries of ecclesiastical music. His next cantata, "As the Hart Pants," is in five parts. These cantatas, with his church services, songs, and quartettes, especially his songs, "The Belle of the Town" and "The Tempest," and his quartette, "Grant is Gone," are becoming popular. He has now in course of completion an elaborate "Easter Service," for choirs, and an oratorio, "The Crucifixion and Resurrection."

Mr. Trimmer for some years has been in very delicate health, but is now much improved, and is teaching in the West, where his work is commended highly by the local press. He has had a large experience in teaching, his work having extended throughout the Northwest till his catalogue of names now numbers over seven thousand pupils. Associated with him as teachers a portion of the time have been his wife, a fine soprano soloist, a teacher of the piano of marked ability, and an accomplished lady; and Prof. B. F. Baker, who is associate author with him of "The Normal Music-Teacher."

Mr. Trimmer is a conscientious teacher, and has a true love for his work, and the highest regard for the cause of music, believing its true mission is to express the noblest aspirations and most exalted devotion of mankind, that to cultivate a taste for good music is to refine, to elevate, and to make better all who engage in its study

KITTY MAY.

BY GEORGE COOPER.

WH, where is my sweet Kitty May?
She's left me in tears and alone;
The dusties now wave night and day
O'er the grave of my darling, my own;
All hushed is her sweet voice of gladness,
But here my lone vigil I keep,
While the winds softly whisper in sadness,
Oh, sing, pretty birds, o'er her sleep.

I hear in the songs that you sing me
The voice that will bless me no more;
And visions of sweetness you bring me
Of bright, happy moments of yore;
But no one so gentle and loving,
In joy to my heart now may creep:
For her footsteps are done with earth roving,
Oh, sing, pretty birds, o'er her sleep.

Then watch o'er my darling, so lonely,
Sweet birds of the beautiful spring;
Her meadows are mine, and mine only,
And long in my heart shall they cling.
Oh, soon shall we meet, beyond sorrow,
Afar o'er the river so deep:
While I long for that gladsome to-morrow,
Sing on, pretty birds, o'er her sleep.

THE COLISEUM OF 1872.

THE GRANDEST STRUCTURE OF THE KIND EVER ERECTED.

ITS DIMENSIONS AND MAGNITUDE.

The plan of the present Coliseum differs from that of 1869 in the former's being not only larger in size, but more ornamental and substantial in exterior appearance. The general style of architecture is Italian. The building is founded upon heavy timber platforms bedded on the well-settled gravel soil. The length of the building is 550 feet, and the greatest width 350 feet. The upright walls on the sides are 40 feet in height and are covered with weather boarding. The end walls of the main building are composed of cross-framed counterforts, braced in the most thorough manner, built up of heavy timbers, and forming in reality a timber wall about 22 feet in thickness. The highest points of the ends are some 115 feet. The lean-to roof is that part of the covering which extends inward from the side walls the distance of 75 feet, covering the galleries and then apparently terminating abruptly. The trussed roof shows great ingenuity and strength. Commencing at a point 11 feet above the inner edge of the lean-to roof on either side, it spans the intermediate space of about 200 feet. There are twenty supporting trusses, each composed of three spans of 60 feet 8 inches. These are regular tie-beam trusses, fastened together, each one by six 1¼ inch bolts, 8 feet long, and about 66 bolts of ¾-inch iron from 13 inches to 24 feet long. This roof has an inclination of 44 inches to the foot, which makes it quite steep.

The entire superficial contents of all the roofs are about 200,000 square feet, or about four and one-half acres. The roofing material, previously prepared, is laid on in sheets, and is thoroughly waterproof.

The exterior of the building is highly ornamental, especially the end facades, the fine, bracketed doorways, the mullioned windows, the recessed arches, the projecting cornices, and the general embellishments of the grand central arched portal. Seven ventilating turrets adorn the roof, and the central portion of the end facades, which are brought forward some 10 feet from lateral wings, is flanked on either side by towers 30 feet square and rising some 25 feet above the roof. The several turrets are surmounted by flag-staffs bearing national banners.

The interior of the edifice is equally well planned. The side and end balconies are 75 feet deep, 10 feet from the parquet floor, and having a continuous ascent of 24 inches in every foot towards the walls. Back of the rear row of balcony seats is a promenade gallery 12 feet wide, and extending through the circumference of the building, 1800 feet. These seats are designed for spectators only. The chorus seats, some twenty thousand in number, occupy the easterly end of the building, and extend about 240 feet from the end wall, and are disposed amphitheatrically. There are numerous side aisles for the comfort and convenience of the singers.

The orchestra seats are upon a platform raised 2 feet and 6 inches above the parquet floor in front, and rising backward. The parquet—the principal accommodation for the spectators—is 235 feet long by 200 feet in width, has a smooth spruce floor, and the seats so constructed as to be easily removed upon the occasion of the grand ball. On three sides of the parquet are promenades, 25 feet in width, under the side and end galleries. A portion of the parquet is reserved for distinguished guests.

The daylight is supplied by means of twenty-four double windows on the ends, and two large semi-circular windows, each 25 feet in diameter. Numerous other windows, varying in size, are noticeable in all parts of the building.

There are 12 entrances, each 25 feet in width, and six others of smaller dimensions. Attached to the main edifice are numerous ante-rooms for the special accommodation of the singers, executive committee, "Bouquet of Artists," members of the press, etc.

And, finally, to keep the great crowd of bystanders away from the doors, a substantial fence has been erected 20 feet from the building, and surrounding it on all sides; once inside of which, the visitor may approach the entrance in happiest mood, and with perfect freedom and comfort go in to partake of the delicious feast of ravishing harmonies.

MISS KELLOGG IN LONDON.

The following extract from the private letter of a young lady of Boston, dated London, May 13th, is interesting. We may add that Adelina Patti was among the audience and went upon the stage to congratulate our favorite upon her brilliant reception and success: — "Miss Kellogg made her debut last Saturday evening in 'Linda di Chamouni,' and made a signal success. Sir Michael Costa conducted the orchestra. He utterly objects to encores, and on this occasion calmly proceeded with the chorus after Miss K.'s first aria without regarding the applause, and for two minutes hisses and chorus engaged in a hand-to-hand fight; but the hisses would not be drowned. They proved themselves more effective, and finally reigned triumphant and Sir Michael returned to the aria. The Duke of Newcastle called on Miss K. yesterday, and said this was something unprecedented in the annals of London audiences. It was certainly a fine success. Gen. Sickles and lady, and Mrs. Hoey, the actress, were present. Also Titiens, who, it appears, received her offer from the Jubilee Committee too late to accept an engagement for the Coliseum. A new tenor, Campinini, has appeared and carried London by storm. He is to sing in 'Lucia,' with Miss Kellogg, on Wednesday. He went to Mapleson, the manager, on Saturday, and said, 'Who is this Kellogg that I am to sing with? I know nothing about her.' Mapleson sent him to the stalls, that he might judge for himself, and, at the conclusion of the opera, inquired, 'Well, what do you think of her voice?' 'It is a perfect flute,' was the reply. Everybody here is interested in the Jubilee, which is talked of in all circles. The Coliseum nerve seems prodigious, and surprises all."

COMPLETE ROSTER OF THE JUBILEE GRAND CHORUS.

For the sake of future reference, we append the following complete list of the societies which have been allotted positions in the chorus of the Jubilee. There are one hundred and sixty-five societies in all, and comprising in the aggregate twenty thousand singers. We give the list in the order in which they are to be seated in the Coliseum. Where the State is not mentioned, Massachusetts will be inferred.

— That was a beautiful idea expressed by a lady on her death-bed, in reply to a remark of her brother, who was taking leave of her to return to his distant residence, that he should probably never meet her in the land of the living: — "Brother, I trust we shall meet in the land of the living. We are now in the land of the dying."

BOSTON CONSERVATORY CONCERT.

Monday, the 27th May, was the occasion of another quarterly exhibition of the pupils of the Boston Conservatory of Music. Music Hall was completely crowded with an appreciative and enthusiastic audience. The performance was throughout one worthy of commendation and betokened no small amount of talent and ability on the part of the youthful aspirants. We are fain to believe, however, that the time of exhibition was much too long, since we noticed that the audience grew restless quite frequently. Individually speaking, twenty-two minutes was too long a time to allow to a single performance, especially at an exhibition of such a character. We are not finding fault, only stating what we imagine was the unanimous opinion of the audience. Of the more meritorious performances, we must refer to the organ Vorspiel, by Miss Alice Spicer; the truly delightful and highly artistic rendering of Weber's Concertstück, by her sister, Miss Emily; the pert and airy rendering of Arditi's Valse Pestasz, by Miss Minnie Ropes; the respective violin solos, with piano accompaniment, of Miss Bell, Master Van Raalte, and the little Miss Lilly Chandler. The latter's cunning ways and tasty appearance seemed to be sources of delight to her audience. Sam'l W. Jamieson's playing of the Fantaisie on Lucia spoke well of his teacher, Prof. Tracy. We might mention other performers that were good. We enjoyed all, and we venture to say that the audience was likewise pleased.

MISS MEHLIC'S FINCERING.

Here is a specimen of Pacific criticism. Our readers will take it for what it is worth:

"A large audience greeted Miss Mehlig, at Pacific Hall, Tuesday evening.

"The eminent feminine musical gymnast fairly exceeded herself on that occasion.

"First she gave us a Polonaise in E, by Liszt, — the famous author of 'List, oh List!' and other favorite melodies. Then came a scherzo, — whatever that may mean, — which was only the other name for a concentrated movement on A flat minor; although there was no hitch or 'break,' which is invariably the custom with the general run of 'flat miners.' Then Schubert and Mendelssohn, and last, — but not least, — Ferguson 'chopped in,' and the very air was resonant with quavers, demi-semi-quavers and the like! The 'Invitation to Waltz' was a perfect spread of melodious gyrations, and actually made one dizzy to appreciate all intricate harmony.

"As a manipulator of the ivories Miss Mehlig eclipses the very stars in the musical firmament, while her brilliancy of execution is only exceeded by the refulgent rays of the veritable sun."

The Management take pleasure in announcing to the public that they have completed an arrangement with Mr. J. M. HILL for the production on Monday, January 19th, 1880, of Chicago's great success, "ALL THE RAGE," a Comedy in Four Acts, by Mr. W. D EATON. Prominent among those engaged to appear in this Comedy are Messrs. WILLIAM DAVIDGE, FRANK HARDENBURGH, J. C PADGETT and others whose names and reputation all theatre-goers are familiar with. The scenery is now being prepared by Mr. J. B. AYRES, and, being local, will be more interesting than any that has heretofore occupied the Novelty Stage.

Plunger.

The Story of the Play.

D. K. Higgins' comedy-drama, "The Plunger," written for Oliver Byron, was seen for the first time in New York at the People's Theatre, Oct. 27th, 1890. The plot is not complicated, though dealing with a quite effective story of crime, heroism and love.

A CREAT SUBJECT FOR HYPNOTISM.

A young bank clerk, in love with the daughter of his employer, and hated by his fiance's cousin, who is the cashier, is, through the latter's machinations, convicted of forging the firm's name. He is, of course, innocent, but the evidence is circumstantial, and he is sent to Sing Sing. "The Plunger" is a wealthy, devil-may-care young sport, with a large fund of humor and no end of reckless courage. He espouses the young clerk's cause, and, becoming convinced of his innocence, devotes his energy to tracing the real culprit. The night raid upon the safe, with its contents of cash, is foiled by the Plunger, who, though intoxicated, is quick enough to close the safe door after the miscreants have forced one of the firm to open the combination. The Plunger shuts the door, and by daring work manages to rout the villains.

In the Third Act, where a most realistic view of the historic Garfield Hut is shown, the clerk escapes from prison, and, in an endeavor to evade his pursuers, comes to the home of his sweetheart. A mutual recognition is followed by the devoted attempt of the orphan girl to save her lover. She is aided in this attempt, though unconsciously, by the Plunger.

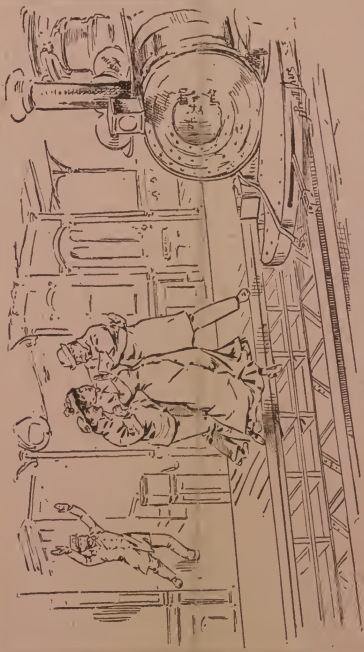
THE TRAMP SCORES.

In the Fourth Act the heroine is about to become the victim of her enemies, when the Plunger again intervenes as she is being thrown in front of a moving train on the Elevated Railway, New York City. This scene has particular features of realism in it, and is one of the best constructed situations in the play. In the end the young clerk's good name is restored, and he weds his true love, while "The Plunger" wins his gay Irish Widow, and the pair of villains are sent to their fate. Incidental to the last act "The Plunger" and his widow have many attractive scenes, and possibly the strongest is that where the widow receives a lesson in hypnotism and succumbs to the superior will power of her dashing "mashing" admirer.

KATE BYRON

As the WIDOW CLOVER.

In Oliver Byron's new play, "The Plunger," Miss Kate Byron plays a part which has not been seen on the stage in this country in many years—the "Widow Clover." It is a finely drawn character of the wealthy Irish aristocracy, and Miss Byron imparts to it many delicate touches of pathos, plenty of refined comedy and bright, sparkling humor, such as has not been witnessed since the days when Miss Annie Cruise and Miss



THE ATTEMPT AT MURDER.

Laura Keene made such lasting impressions in the similar part of "Miss O'Leary." Miss Byron's interpretation has nothing in it of the ordinary portrayal of the Bridgets or Betsys, and it never descends to burlesque. It represents the Dublin lady—not the ignorant servant. It is a new creation, and fills a void which has of recent years existed on the American stage.

N. Y. Clipper.

One of the conspicuous features of "The Plunger" is the elegance of the COSTUMES worn by Mrs. Kate Byron as the Widow Clever. At least five splendid specimens of the most celebrated Parisian modistes are worn at every performance to the admiration of the entire audience of both sexes.

Oliver Byron's costumes are elaborate and particularly suitable for his creation of "The Plunger," "who sports because he is sporty." His appearance in the first act is the signal for applause from all parts of the house.

As a Matinee Performance "The Plunger" ranks with the most popular play yet seen. Ever since its first production it has been a noticeable fact that the larger part of the attendance has been ladies to witness this pronounced success. This fact is largely due to the absence of vulgarity in the comedy, and the abundance of witty and sparkling sentiments that scintillate through the entire play.

CAPTURED BY FORCE AND CAPTURING THE FORCE.

"A Great Sensation Scene!"—that is the verdict upon the conclusion of the second act; and for unique situations and thrilling developments it is unequalled upon the stage at the present time. The picturesqueness of the climax is most attracting.

The immense amount of Scenery used in the various acts and carried by the company attracts unusual attention; and being specially designed and made with a view to its novelty and effectiveness, forms no inconsiderable portion of the performance

"The Devil's Hand is in all this."

English Sense of Humor.

New York Tribune.

"Tom" Ochiltree is fond of telling stories about his ocean trips, but one of his best is of comparatively recent origin. He says: "I was coming across, and a very good sort of Britisher used to sit with me in the smoking room. I tried all my best jokes on him, and he never cracked a smile. At last I got angry, and said: 'I don't think an Englishman could see a joke if you fired it at him out of a gun.' And then that blessed Englishman stood up on his hind legs and said: 'How can you fire a joke out of a gun?'"

STORY OF THE PLAY.

In approaching the matter of the play, "The Saint and the Fool," which has been written about Joan Darc for Fanny Davenport, it is necessary to put out of mind all other treatment of that great character which the stage has known. Miss Matthews has chosen to ignore the Joan of delicate spirituality, and to put into the centre of her drama, Joan Darc, the soldier, the war-like maiden, who was the match in physical strength and endurance, as well as courage and bravery, of any soldier in the army of young Charles, the uncrowned King of France. This is the mainspring of the play.

The first act opens with the home of Joan Darc at Domremy, showing her father's cottage, the church where she worshipped, with a distant view of the Place Loids. Here is told the story of her hearing the angel voices and her desire to assist the Dauphin in his efforts to reach home and be crowned King of France. Her first meeting with her future King takes place in this act, and he presents her with a jewsled sword, which is afterwards used with such effect on the field of battle. Her father opposes her desire to become a soldier, and she has another enemy in Nicholas L'Oseyen an English spy, who is in love with Agnes Sorel, the mistress of the King.

In the interval, four months, that elapse between the first and second act, many changes have taken place. Joan has been placed in command of the King's armies, the city of Orleans has been captured from the English, and Charles VII has been crowned King of France in the historical old Cathedral of Rheims. We find Joan at the head of her army when the curtain rises on the second act. Here, also, is introduced Clichet, the court jester, who, through his efforts to save the Dauphin's life, has become a cripple. He falls in love with Joan, but the knowledge of his deformity causes him to be content with watching over her safety. Nicholas, whose hatred of Joan has been increased by Agnes—for the reason that the King has looked with favor on Joan—attempts to poison Joan, but is thwarted by Clichet. The deformed jester again displays his fidelity when he prevents a dagger-wielding Joan, while she is absorbed in prayer.

The third act is on the evening prior to the assault on Paris, when Joan is visited by the King. She repulses his suit and appeals to his love for France. The enemy are heard approaching, and Joan, clad in magnificent armor, assembles her forces and leads them to victory.

But reverse comes to the armies of the French and Joan is finally captured by the English. The fourth act shows her in captivity at the prison of Rouen. Nicholas appears and endeavors to kill her in prison, but Joan is again saved by the devoted Clichet, who throttles the spy. Joan, with the assistance of her jester, makes her way to the outer wall, and lowers herself to the moat with the aid of a rope. The rope breaks, however, and she is precipitated down the battlement. The English arrive before Joan can effect her escape and she is recaptured.

The last act takes place also in the prison of Rouen, fifteen months later. Confinement in a dark dungeon, lack of food and the harsh treatment of the jailers, have almost broken the spirit of Joan. The inspired young girl of the first act is now wan, pale and haggard, and after defying the judge, is lead to suffer martyrdom at the stake. Clichet, faithful to the last, ends his own life when he realizes that he can no longer serve his mistress.

PROF. BELL, the well-known electrician, is an advocate of the "echo" system on vessels at sea for ascertaining the presence of an approaching iceberg or another vessel. The principle is that any solid body on the surface of the ocean will give back an echo to a sound from the deck of a ship not too far distant, and the navigator, with a bell to make the sound and a telephone to receive the echo, can easily tell when there is danger of a collision. Mariners generally hear the echo of an iceberg simultaneously with its thump into the vessel. T returning from the church-yard, he called upon Ferdinand Schubert, the favorite brother of the composer, and was permitted to see the treasured store of Schubert's compositions. Among other things, Schumann selected the Symphony in C, and after much trouble, it was taken to Leipzic, where it was performed March 22, 1839, at the Gewandhaus concert, under the direction of Mendelssohn. In a review of the work, more as a whole, than as an extended criticism of the separate movements, Schumann, who more than all others helped to lift the name of Schubert out of oblivion into immortality, wrote as follows:

"One must appreciate that more than mere melody, something above sorrow and joy, as these emotions have been portrayed more than a hundred times in music, lies concealed in this Symphony. Nay, more; in listening to symphonies like this, we are transported to a region where we never remember to have been before. Here we have, beside masterly power over the musical technicalities of composition, life in all its phases, color in exqulsite gradations, the minutest accuracy and fitness of expression, and permeating the whole work a spirit of romance such as we recognize in other works of Franz Schubert. This heavenly, long-drawn-out Symphony is like some romance of Jean Pauls', which can never end. Except in numbers of the works of Beethoven, I have nowhere found such extraordinary and striking resemblance of the human voice, as in Schubert It is the very reverse of Meyerbeer's method of using sounds so as to represent the human voice.

"The analysis of the movements piece by piece is neither a grateful task to ourselves nor to others. One would be obliged to transcribe the entire Symphony to give the faintest notion of its originality throughout. I can not, however, pass from the second movement which speaks to us in exquisitely moving strains, without a single word. There is one passage in it where the horn is calling as though from a distance. It seems to come from a heavenly sphere. Here everything else waits and listens, as though some celestial messenger were hovering around the orchestra. The Symphony has had an influence on us such as none since Beethoven's has ever exercised. I have no fear of its being overlooked or forgotten. It bears within its bosom the seeds of immortal growth."

OVERTURE IN THE ITALIAN STYLE.

The origin of this Overture is said to have been some pleasant badinage with some friends after witnessing a performance of Rossini's Tancredi. Schubert, though a great admirer of Rossini's melodies, made light of his orchestral writing, and on this occasion, while waiting for supper at an eating house, he wrote down the Italian Overture. Its caricature of Rossini's salient points, including, of course, the inevitable crescendo, is obvious enough, but nothing could transform the individuality of Schubert's writings, and the overture possesses characteristic beauties, which are immediately recognizable.

intelligent and appreciative an audience as can be seen in any city in the West.

The Strakosch Grand English Opera Company recently gave a really first-class rendition of the opera of "Martha," with Miss Kate Beaberg as Lady Henrietta, Miss Mathilde Mulenbach as Nancy, Mr. Geo. Appleby as Lionel, and Mr. Geo. Fox as Plunkett. The choruses were especially fine, being the chief enjoyable feature of the opera.

One of the regular Conservatory concerts occurred on Friday evening, the 26th inst., in the chapel of the Institution for the Blind, on which occasion there was a large and appreciative audience. The new Hook & Hastings organ at the Blind Institute has recently been completed, and Prof. J. H. Davis, of the Conservatory of Music, was invited to "show it off." The organ is one of great volume, purity, and sweetness of tone. Prof Davis and Miss Alice Lathrop, also of the Conservatory of Music gave us an organ and song recital of rare good merit. Mr. Davis has a well-earned reputation as an excellent pianist, but on this occasion he proved himself to be fully master of this great musical instrument, the organ.

Miss Lathrop, satisfactory at all times, was in unusually fine voice, and charmed her audience. Following is the programme:

Prelude in B minor.....Bach
Aria.....Bach-Whitney
Andante sostenuto (from Sonata in C minor, Op. 80).....Merke
Songs—"O! Savior Hear Me".....Gluck
"The Lost Chord".....Sullivan
Fantasia in E minor (The Storm).....Lemmens
Aria—"Rejoice Greatly" (Messiah).....Handel
Gavatina.....Raff

SYNOPSIS OF CASTANEA.

After the opening chorus it is discovered that the Count di Luna has something depressing upon his mind, and that he "sits unheeding our gay song." Upon being interrogated, he replies:

"Only mournful strains would flow if I should try to sing."

Amneris has no patience with such displays of sentiment, and freely expresses her mind to that effect.

Then follows a discussion, introduced by Manrico, as to whether the dialogue of opera should be spoken or sung; and this leads to a consideration of German, French and Italian as the proper language for opera, Lucia, Fernando and Wolfram taking part. Anima recalls attention to the fact that the Count has not yet made known his troubles, but as she is too bashful to ask, Carmen volunteers on the ground that some one must find out what the opera is about; that the singers themselves don't know, and that the Count's story would probably throw light on the subject.

So Carmen, seconded by Anima, importunes the Count to tell his secret, and he concludes that, though the recital will be a painful one to him, "he had better yield than be talked to death." He then makes an extended endeavor to tell his story, but breaks down overcome with emotion. This reminds the sympathetic Manrico of some suffering which once fell to his lot because of "a party by the name of Jane," again putting Amneris all out of patience.

A threat now brings the Count to an actual commencement of his narrative, which is about an old lady whom he calls Mother Hubbard; but he again breaks down. Here occurs a misunderstanding, during which the Count thinks he discovers some flippant allusions to the old lady of whom he was speaking; but they assure him (in a double quartet) that they "honor age with their respect." Then he continues, mentioning a visit made by Mother Hubbard to a cupboard.

This reminds Don Giovanni of one "Dame Margery" famed in song, who often went to a cupboard for the purpose of "taking something to keep out the cold." This insinuation, calculated to reflect upon the respectability of Mother Hubbard, causes great disturbance. The Count protests and Fernando says the entire company is insulted. He continues with some animadversion upon Don Giovanni's career as an opera singer, and distinctly implies that with such as he mercenary motives outweigh high art. Of course, nothing but a duel the next morning at sunrise could be the sequel, and in their impatience for the encounter they cry "O haste crimson morning!"

Lucia makes the truly feminine suggestion that they should "bring the case before a jury;" and, seconded by Amneris and supported by the company, she quiets the tumult. The combatants retract their offensive remarks, and the Count proceeds, interrupted only by a little scare about a policeman.

When it appears that Mother Hubbard's excursion to the cupboard was on behalf of some one who paid no board, Leonora is moved to depict in the most brilliant colors the "delirium of transport" which takes possession of the average individual who succeeds in getting "something for nothing."

Although interrupted by sundry incidents, the whole story at length comes out, and at its tragic conclusion the entire company is as deeply "enshrouded in gloom and overpowered with melancholy" as the Count himself. They moan and groan (in excellent harmony), for awhile, the basses commenting thus:

Now to the cupboard by the door
She goes its contents to explore;
The poor dog followed at her heels,
For he was faithful at his meals.
But, see! Not e'en a fishball lone,
Nor yet a much dismantled bone.
His not to ask the question why;
His but to lay him down and die!

At the close of this, Fernando, in agony of spirit, doubts that anything awful could ever have transpired. Alas! it must have been true; for the Count produces proof in a curiously illuminated old volume, which he supposes to be done on vellum, but which Carmen finds to be linen. In this volume is the record of the Count's narrative, with portraits of the actors in it.

But with wonderful insight Fernando studies the volume further, and, to the great joy of everybody, finds that the Count's interpretation of the incident was wrong, and that, instead of having a tragic finale, it turned out happily.

Here Il Profundo Basso reflects cruelly upon the intelligence of the company, giving as his opinion that they might all be "lineal descendants of Mother Goose." But this does not mar the general happiness, and the Count who, in the reaction from excessive melancholy has quite lost his head, makes the most extraordinary and extravagant proposition ever heard on the operatic stage.

The company then retire to a light supper of mince pie and Welsh rarebit.

the curtain falls upon at the end of the third act is unusually strong. The picture of the noble-hearted girl covering the face of the murdered, wayward son and then claiming that the unfortunate wretch is her lover, so that the father may not learn the depth of his son's degradation, is one of the most effective melo-dramatic situations that can well be conceived.

HOW "DAD'S GIRL" WAS NAMED.

Mr. George T. Ulmer yesterday told a Times reporter how it came about that the play which Lizzie May Ulmer is making such a hit in received its title. Mr. E. J. Swartz, the writer, had finished the play and only needed a name to make it complete. He had been puzzling his brain for weeks trying to select a suitable one, when I called on him. Here I found that he had an invalid wife, around whom he hovered like a mother, only leaving her to go to his office and returning as quickly as possible. His shadow was his little daughter, about 12, whom he adored and worshiped, and who reciprocated his affection in the sweetest and most childish way and always spoke of herself as "dad's girl." Ask her who she was, and the reply was, "I'm dad's girl," and to his arms she would fly and hide her face on his shoulder. The affection between the two was beautiful to contemplate. After talking with him awhile I told him not to trouble about a title

OPINION OF THE OLDEST NEWSPAPER IN AMERICA.

Mr. James Perry, the able critic of the Philadelphia North American, writes as follows, in that paper, on Tuesday, Oct 21st :

"Cheek," by Mr. Fred Marsden, was produced at the Chestnut Street Theatre last evening before an audience which left very little vacant space in the house, and which applauded from time to time with a heartiness betokening an unqualified approval of the entertainment provided. The character of Dick Smythe provides Mr. Roland Reed with a part in which his peculiar talents find full scope, and in which he develops a versatile ability which even outstrips the bright promises of his earlier days. Mr. Reed is no stranger to the Philadelphia public; but those who remembered him at the Walnut and elsewhere years ago must have been surprised at the unique cleverness and dramatic talent which he displayed last night in his very effective and successful performance. To say that he has given the part careful study, that

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY.

ACTS I, III and IV—Salon in the house of John Vaughn, Faubourg, St. Germain, Paris.
ACT II—Drawing Room in the house of Mrs. Dudley.
ACTS I, II and III—are supposed to occur the same evening.
ACT IV—the following morning.

That VICTOR DURAND made a hit here with the public there is not the slightest doubt, and many will welcome the announcement that it is to return next week. It is the only serious play that has succeeded among all that have been produced in the country this season. This certainly gives Mr. Carleton, its author, a prominent place among playwrights, and he must be credited with having worked a strong composition in action and dialogue out of his fertile imagination. VICTOR DURAND is a play which balances well between a melodrama and a society comedy, and the amalgamation is so cleverly executed that neither element predominates so as to give it a positive class in any of the stereotyped ways. In a season where farce-comedies, comedy-farces, musical absurdities, nonsensical and dramatic impossibilities, monopolize the staze, a well-written serious drama should be as welcome as an oasis in a desert. But though serious the subject, the drama is not one iota gloomy. It is full of wit and humor, and epigrammatic in no small degree; the comedy element is not carried in by the heels, as in most productions, simply to create a laugh, but it walks in naturally and takes its place as it would happen in real life, and has and is one of the fundamental portions of the story, and finally is the agent through which the mystery that surrounds the unfortunate "Victor Durand" is solved. All through the entire piece it shows a dogged obstinacy, characteristic in every respect of a certain phase in the American character which has never before been placed in a play upon the stage. "Victor Durand" should be peculiarly interesting to an American audience, for it is an American play, the first-born of an American writer, and deals with American character as it is, not as it is caricatured.

HOWARD METHOD.

Mr. John Howard of New York spend the next six months in Chic teaching personally at his office, Ro 33, Central Music Hall.

His method gives the same volun exact control of the vocal parts of throat that one has of the fingers of hand.

By certain easily learned movement the tongue, palate, larynx, jaw pharynx, the pupil learns to either str or relax the vocal chords, to make th heavier for greater breadth of tone, lighter for higher tones and softer qu ties.

The voice is made doubly reson and usually gains from two to six n in compass, while the quality beco absolutely pure—the singing tone. this being gained in months instead years.

All interested are cordially invited call at Mr. Howards's office,

A few minutes trial of the voice and amination of the throat and palate enable him to decide the present stat each one's voice, and to explain appr mately what it will become with mo ate study. Mr Howard is permitte refer to H. B. Palmer, W. L. Tom and other well-known musicians,

Signors CAMPINI, NOVARA, CORSINI, Mlle. LABLACHE, and Madame SEMBRICH.

lowing law and law case, taken from the records of the New Haven Colony in 1669, are strange reading in these times. The statute says: "Whosoever shall inveigle or draw the affections of any maide or maide-servant, either to himself or others, without first gaining the consent of her parents, shall pay to the plantation, for the first offence, 40s.; the second, £4; for the third, shall be imprisoned or corporeously punished." Under this law, at a court held in May, 1669, Jacobeth Murline and Sarah Tuttle were prosecuted "for setting down on a chestle together, his arm around her waiste, and her arme upon his shoulder, or about his neck, and continuing in that sinful posture about half an hour, in which tyme he kyssed her and she kyssed him, or they kyssed one another, as ye witnesses testified."

"Jim," inquired a schoolboy of one of his mates, "what is the meaning of relics?" "Don't you know? Well, I can tell you. You know the master licked me in school yesterday?" "Yes." "Well, he wasn't satisfied with that, but he kept me in and licked me again. That's what I call a re-lick."

A learned lawyer was once accused of having disgraced the bar by taking silver from a client, the etiquette of the profession requiring that his fee should be in gold. "I took silver," he replied, "because I could not get gold; but I took every farthing the fellow had in the world, and I hope you do not call that disgracing the profession."

Ballgespräch.

Lieutenant: „Nicht wahr, mein gnädiges Fräulein, Ihr Herr Bruder steht bei den Garde-Ulanen?"

Dame: „Aber, Herr Lieutenant, Ich habe doch keinen Bruder!"

Eingegangen.

Herr Müller kommt sehr spät von einem Zweckessen nach Hause. Damit [illegible] von seiner Frau nicht gehört wird, hat [illegible] schon auf dem Korridor die Stiefel ausgezogen. Endlich ist er seiner Kleider ledig, und fürchtet nur noch, daß das Knarren des Bettes ihn verrathen möchte. Leise hebt er ein Bein in die Höh'. Da ruft es plötzlich: „Aber Mann, Du wirst doch nicht mit dem Cylinder auf dem Kopfe zu Bett gehen!"

Berechtigtes Mißtrauen.

Rath: Aber sehen Sie nur Ihren Herrn Schwiegersohn an, er ist ganz wie umgewandelt! Gestern noch ließ er den Kopf hängen und sah nicht rechts noch links, und heute lacht er mit dem ganzen Gesicht!

Bankier: Ja, der kann gut lachen, ich habe ihm schon wieder 'mal unter die Arme gegriffen!

Monday evening next, Feb. 11, this favorite artiste will begin a week's engagement at McVicker's. A charming little actress, who has not in many years deviated from a prescribed course of artistic excellence, who is not less painstaking and conscientious because the public is firmly bound to her in friendly regard. Miss Mitchell returns and reappears, precisely the same, in the exact characters she has impersonated time out of mind. She has not even lost a little of the sprightliness which captivated the begetters of the present generation. Still vivacious; still mirthful and effervescent; the peculiar voice retaining still its familiar flavor of bucolic ingenuousness; the provoking assumption of naivette that one can hardly reconcile to the shrewd, clever intelligence now and then breaking cover, still exerting its merry or tearful influence; the song, the caper, the laugh, the demure and deprecating manner; the odd surrender to pathos that checks smiles and suggests a tender feeling—here they are again before eyes and hearts, in the pretty little idyl of an older day.

The week's repertoire will include: Monday and Wednesday evenings and Saturday matinee, "Fanchon"; Tuesday and Thursday, "Jane Eyre"; Friday, "Pearl of Savoy"; Saturday night, "Little Barefoot."

WELCOME, "HAZEL KIRKE."

The famous Madison Square Theatre Company will appear at McVicker's Theatre the week of Feb. 18, in that ever popular, always welcome play, "Hazel Kirke." That "Hazel Kirke" has proved the most successful and popular play of the day every one already knows. Originally produced at the Madison Square Theatre, New York, it there received 486 consecutive representations, the longest single run ever attending any play in this country. C. H. MATTHEWS, Treasurer. MARCUS R. MAYER, Business Manager.

"How about the [illegible] route will they take?"

"From Upper Canada or Ontario points they can take the Toronto, Grey & Bruce Railway from Toronto to Owen Sound, and thence by steamers across Georgian Bay and Lake Superior to Port Arthur, where, as via the Algoma Mills route, they connect with the Canadian Pacific, on the other side of Lake Superior, for Winnipeg or any points north and west of that city."

Apropos of the above there was a meeting of representatives of the railways who will have that nut to crack in the early spring. General Manager Mauvel, of the Manitoba Railway, which extends from St. Paul to Winnipeg, presided, and there were present besides James Stephenson, general passenger agent of the Grand Trunk at Montreal; W. S. Alexander, general traffic manager, and C. H. Warren, assistant general passenger agent of the Manitoba; E. St. John, general ticket and passenger agent of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific; W. A. Thrall, general ticket agent of the Chicago & Northwestern; F. L. Whitney, assistant general passenger and ticket agent of the Michigan Central; A. F. Merrill, assistant general ticket agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, and H. C. Davis, assistant general passenger agent of the Northern Pacific. The last-named railway is said to have called the meeting, and is interested so far as its business to Fargo and Glyndon is concerned. General Manager Van Horne, of the Canadian Pacific, is said to have instructed the agents of that line in Europe to make the rate to emigrants intending to go to the British Northwest $9.75 each from Quebec to Winnipeg, and a correspondingly low rate will be charged the Canadian immigrant from the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario. It will be seen that the difference between the Canadian Pacific rate of $9.75 and the Canadian-American all-rail route via Chicago and St. Paul rate, $31.50, is more than two-thirds, and hence the former route will take about all the British emigration to the Northwestern Territory of the Dominion. Thus it is no wonder that the lines interested in the meeting are alarmed at the situation and will endeavor to devise ways and means to meet the competition. The matter was discussed for some time, but no action was taken, and the meeting adjourned subject to the call of Mr. Stephenson, the Grand Trunk representative, who left the city last evening for Montreal to consult with his principals.

It is understood that he will return as soon as possible, after notifying the other roads of the date fixed for the conference which will be held here. Considerable gossip was indulged in in railway circles about the matter, and it is the general feeling that there will be a lively competition on the opening of navigation next season between the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian and American lines running to the Dominion's northwest. Another thing for the meeting to consider is the emigrant rate of $12 agreed upon by the New York Central with the Canadian Pacific.

The general managers, auditors, general Eastern agents and general freight agents of the railways forming the Western Trunk Line Association, or tripartite organization, will meet at the Grand Pacific Hotel to-morrow for the purpose of adjusting freight allowances. General Manager Clark, of the Union Pacific, will not then be here, but he will be present at the big gathering of that body on Jan. 23, to which date it was postponed at the request of the Burlington, in order to give that company time to consider what course it would pursue regarding the tripartite compact. The feeling among the representative men in the new association is stronger than ever that the Burlington will ultimately come in, but officials of that line are still indefinite in their expressions and will not

A rabid greyhound, owned by Dr. Miller, of Fullerton avenue and Clark street, after having bitten several other dogs in that locality, was shot by an officer, as also was one of the bitten dogs. It is thought that no persons were injured by the brute.

Officer M. J. Mahoney last night arrested Addie Martin and Jennie Lee, whom he charged with disorderly conduct. The same officer arrested the former woman last week for street-walking, and was himself arrested on a warrant taken out by her charging him with assault. His case was continued till Jan. 11 in $200 bonds.

The annual meeting of the Academy of Sciences was held at No. 268 Wabash avenue last evening, resulting in the selection of the following officers: President, Dr. Edmond Andrews; Vice-Presidents, W. H. Wells and B. W. Thomas; Secretary, Dr. T. W. Vetle; Librarian, N. S. Davis Jr. The Secretary reported a balance of 30 cents in the treasury.

Murry Nelson and others transferred yesterday to the National Elevator & Dock Company for a nominal consideration of $500,000 the premises at the corner of Archer avenue and Ogden Slip, southeast front, 425 feet to the river. This is merely a transfer as between incorporators, Mr. Nelson and others turning the property over to the company, which is controlled by them.

At the monthly meeting of the Fröebel Kindergarten Association yesterday at the Grand Pacific, a committee was appointed to visit the new afternoon kindergarten opened Monday last at the corner of Arnold and Twenty-second streets. The management is anticipating great results from a course of educational lectures for parents and teachers to be given by Col. F. Parker under the auspices of the association.

The County Board of Education yesterday adopted a resolution asking the County Board to inquire into the needs of the Normal-School Building, especially the students' hall, with regard to better protection in case of fire. The step most desired is the establishment of telephonic connection between the school and the fire department of the Town of Lake. After transacting business the board adjourned until the first Tuesday in February.

Twenty pairs of rubber boots stolen from Beston & Co., No. 160 State street, by William Jones, colored, were recovered from the second-hand stores at Nos. 407 and 415 State street conducted respectively by D. Aman and [illegible] William Goldstein, by Detectives Thory and Tierney, who captured the thief. Jones, when arrested a few days ago, had in his possession several pairs of boots. The police will prosecute the second-hand dealers for receiving stolen property.

Mr. C. C. Bonney, the attorney for the Citizens' League, stated yesterday that he confidently expected a decision in the several liquor license cases during the January term of the Supreme Court, although it was possible he might be disappointed, as the twenty-eight printed briefs which had been filed in the different cases aggregated nearly 1,000 pages, and their examination would perhaps require more time than was at the disposal of the Judges during the term.

Dr. Kennicott has just returned from Poncha Springs, Colo., where great excitement exists over the discovery of a large number of garnets of unusual size. The Doctor brought with him a monster specimen, weighing five pounds, which is unquestionably the largest

Edward Mace was divorced from his wife, in Warren County; but, soon after the rendition of the decree setting aside the will, and vesting all the property in him, he was remarried to his wife,—the ceremony being performed by Judge Ward, of this city. Subsequently Edward Mace died; and his widow, some years ago, married Henry Scott, one of the defendants in this action.

Secondly (and here comes the strangest part of the drama), Mrs. Carr and her two daughters were sojourning with Mrs. Defrees, a relative, in Piqua, O. The two daughters frequently expressed regret over the death of Aunt Polly Mace, who had taken much interest in them during her life. Reading in the papers of a celebrated spirit-medium who was stopping at Columbus, O., Mrs. Carr and Mrs. Defrees went over to consult the spirits. The medium cautioned the ladies not to be frightened at any development that might appear. The event took place at midnight, in the medium's room. A hand was laid on the head of Mrs. Carr, and a voice was distinctly heard through a trumpet, calling her by name. It uttered plainly the names of many citizens of Lafayette, and sent word to [illegible]d Mary Carr not to feel badly, [illegible]ney bothered about would all [illegible] in the end. The the Dutch dialect, a Hebrew [illegible] acting on the Atlanta boards. The man is a thorough artist. He plays without effort and convulses his audience at will. His recitations are the finest we have ever heard here, the little piece, "Somebody's Mother," being a perfect gem of pathos. His temperance and senatorial speeches were exquisitely funny, and his various sweet songs were charmingly given.

"We question very seriously if any actor ever gave an Atlanta audience more genuine pleasure than did Gus Williams last night. But it is vain to attempt to describe [illegible] must be seen to be enjoyed. THE LEGION OF HONOR COMBINATION

Has achieved a genuine success in Philadelphia and Baltimore, where it has recently been produced. The press of those cities is liberal in its praise of the acting of Messrs. Sam'l Peircy and Lewis Morrison, and Miss Annie Graham. Our patrons will soon have an opportunity of judging of the merits of the play. The leading members of the combination are favorably known here already.

"LUCILLE."

The plot of this most promising work is of the romantic type and presents opportunity for great dramatic effect. It is the love story of Lucille, daughter of a French nobleman, who, while traveling in Italy, meets and becomes enamored of a young Sicilian nobleman (Antonio) who is in political exile. Her return to Paris with her family parts the lovers, and an adventurer, cousin to Lucille, sets about to frustrate the lovers' hopes, in order that Lucille's fortune may become his. Lucille returns to Italy at the death of her father to seek her lover, and finds him the favorite of the King at a court ball. Through the plotting of the cousin (Chevalier D'Avergne), Antonio is cast into prison for participating in a revolt against the government, and sentenced to lifelong imprisonment. In despair at his prospects Antonio is about to die by his own hand, when a messenger from the King arrives with a pardon for Antonio and an order that the adventurer be made to suffer in his stead.

The plot offers great scenic possibilities which will be made the most of. Mr. J. M. Hill, will have all new scenery painted especially for this production, presenting each scene with every accessory that art and money can produce.

WALT DISNEY'S
MARY POPPINS

Mary Poppins

...the author and story teller

One of literature's most beloved and delightful heroines, "Mary Poppins," at long last steps from the printed page to become an unforgettable living, breathing personality through the motion picture magic of master story-teller Walt Disney.

Almost from the day the enchanting, elusive Mary Poppins character appeared on the literary scene in 1934, straight from the pen of English authoress P. L. Travers, she seemed destined to gain additional fame through some form of the entertainment medium.

Theatrical, motion picture and television producers tried to obtain rights to the "Mary Poppins" books, but all were rejected by the authoress, for fear of what might happen to the stories, and particularly her heroine, in the dramatization.

Disney first became aware of the delightful Mary Poppins about fifteen years ago, when one of his daughters introduced him to the magical nursemaid. Her enthusiasm for the books prompted his reading them and he, too, saw their potential as material for a motion picture.

Upon learning that film rights were unobtainable, he temporarily abandoned the idea. Then, several years ago, the paths of Disney and Mrs. Travers happened to cross in London. They discussed the possibility of his bringing "Mary Poppins" to the screen and the authoress, cognizant of the producer's integrity and artistic endeavors, agreed to relinquish the film rights if his approach to the stories met with her approval.

On Disney's return to the studio, the project was set in motion and several months later, Mrs. Travers was invited to Burbank for story conferences. Elated with the treatment her beloved heroine was receiving, the authoress signed the formal contracts.

The screenplay was put into the capable hands of two of Disney's top writers, Bill Walsh and Don DaGradi. Walsh, one of Hollywood's most gifted writers and humorists, also served as Disney's co-producer.

To handle the direction of the multi-faceted production, Walt entrusted the assignment to Robert Stevenson, who in the past had directed such Disney successes as "Old Yeller," "The Absent Minded Professor," "Son of Flubber" and "In Search of the Castaways."

This mild-mannered Britisher, with a complete understanding of British humor and a genuine flair for comedy, was the perfect choice for this English-flavored musical.

With these key creative people at the helm, more than a year of pre-production planning was still necessary before "Mary Poppins" was ready to go before the cameras.

One of the brightest musical comedy stars of Broadway and the London stage is vivacious and talented Julie Andrews, who makes her screen debut in the title role of Walt Disney's musical feature, "Mary Poppins."

Julie Andrews

A professional since she was twelve, Julie astounded theatre-goers at this tender age when she stepped on stage in a revue and sang an operatic aria in her clear, young soprano voice. This impressive bow established the talented Miss Andrews as a performer with a great future in the theatre.

Other revues, concert tours, guest appearances on radio and television followed. While appearing in a pantomime at the London Palladium, Julie was offered the lead role in "The Boyfriend" on Broadway.

At the end of a year's run in this hit musical, Julie was handed the plum role of Eliza Doolittle in Lerner and Loewe's "My Fair Lady," which went on to make theatrical history.

After two years in the New York company of "My Fair Lady," Julie returned to England to play Eliza for eighteen months in the London run of the show.

Returning to Broadway in Lerner and Loewe's "Camelot," Julie scored another personal triumph.

During one of her last performances in the hit musical, she was visited backstage by Walt Disney who offered her the title role in his forthcoming production of "Mary Poppins."

Julie's inspired performance in this exciting tunefilm led to stellar roles in "The Americanization of Emily" and "The Sound of Music," firmly establishing her as one of Hollywood's most important new stars.

David Tomlinson

A veteran of over thirty-five British films, brilliant actor-comedian David Tomlinson makes his American film bow in Walt Disney's "Mary Poppins."

Fresh from a two-year triumph in the London stage success, "Boeing-Boeing," Tomlinson was seen by Walt in the romantic comedy and signed for the important role of the harassed father, Mr. Banks.

Equally at home on screen or stage, Tomlinson made his professional debut in London's West End production of "Quiet Wedding," as understudy to the star. When the play went on tour, David took over the leading role and later re-created his role in the film version.

At the outbreak of World War II, Tomlinson joined the R.A.F. and became a flying instructor. Discharged in May, 1946, with the rank of flight-lieutenant, he immediately resumed his acting career.

He has since appeared in such noteworthy English films as "The Way to the Stars," "Miranda," "Fame is the Spur," "Carry on Admiral," "Up the Creek," and the recent Academy Award winner, "Tom Jones," to name a few.

Glynis Johns

Known to audiences around the world for her critically acclaimed work on stage, screen and television, Glynis Johns is considered one of the most versatile actresses in the entertainment field today.

The petite and attractive Miss Johns has proved conclusively she is equally adept at comedy or dramatic roles as she brings her own special and unique charm to whatever part she is portraying.

Now Glynis adds musical comedy to her long list of accomplishments playing the whimsical suffragette mother, Mrs. Banks, in Walt Disney's musical "Mary Poppins," her third film for the producer.

The fourth generation of a theatrical family, Glynis began her career as a dancing prodigy at the age of six. At twelve, she switched from dancing to acting.

Her performance in the stage hit, "The Chilren's Hour," led to her movie debut in "South Riding" and an exclusive film contract with Alexander Korda. Since then there has been no lapse in an active career that has included such memorable motion pictures as "The Promoter," "Miranda," "Encore," "The Sundowners" and "Papa's Delicate Condition," and Disney's "The Sword and the Rose" and "Rob Roy, the Highland Rogue."

Hermione Baddeley

Fresh from dramatic triumphs on Broadway in "A Taste of Honey" and "The Milk Train Doesn't Stop Here Anymore," versatile British star Hermione Baddeley returns to film comedy in the role of Ellen, a Cockney maid.

Karen Dotrice

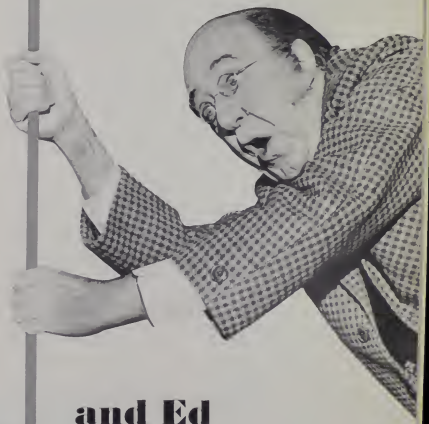
Karen Dotrice, youngest member of one of Britain's most talented acting families, makes her second screen appearance as Jane Banks. A discovery of Walt Disney, she recently made her screen bow in the producer's "The Three Lives of Thomasina."

Matthew Garber

Young Matthew Garber also makes his second screen appearance in the role of Michael Banks. Another of Disney's acting finds, this pint-sized method actor also made his movie debut in the producer's "The Three Lives of Thomasina."

Arthur Treacher

Having played more English butlers on screen than probably any other living actor, veteran British comedian Arthur Treacher enjoys a complete change of pace in the role of Constable Jones, a kind-hearted London policeman.



and Ed Wynn

Beloved by all who know him, this 77-year-young thespian is literally a living history of the entertainment world.

Now in the sixty-first year of a still flourishing career, Ed Wynn contributes another of his incomparable comedy performances in Walt Disney's "Mary Poppins." As the lovable, laugh-happy Uncle Albert, he chalks up his seventh film assignment under the Disney banner.

Ed made his acting debut at the age of sixteen appearing in vaudeville with various partners until 1914, when he was signed for the "Ziegfeld Follies" of that year. Extended runs in "The Passing Show of 1916" and "Shubert's Gaities" followed.

Subsequently he wrote, directed and produced "Ed Wynn's Carnival," "The Perfect Fool" and "The Grab Bag."

Ed made his first motion picture, a silent, in 1926, and during the thirties divided his time between the screen and radio, for which he created his ever-famous Fire Chief characterization.

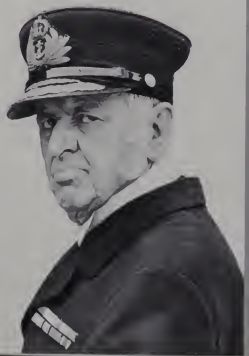
A pioneer in television, too, Ed continues to enjoy an active career here as well as in motion pictures.

Elsa Lanchester

The inimitable Elsa Lanchester, who has built a colorful career in drama, music and comedy, creates another of her whimsical characterizations as Katie Nanna, the harassed nursemaid, whose abrupt departure creates a household catastrophe.

Reginald Owen

Having portrayed everything from a French statesman to a detergent tycoon during his 35-year screen career, veteran performer Reginald Owen plays to perfection the role of the eccentric Admiral Boom, late of His Majesty's Navy.



Music

The talented song-writing team of Richard M. and Robert B. Sherman and Academy Award-winning musical director Irwin Kostal prove an unbeatable musical combination for Walt Disney's "Mary Poppins."

The brothers Sherman, who pooled their musical talents at the suggestion of their hit song-writing father, Al Sherman, have been staff composers at the Disney Studio for the past five years. During this time, they have composed hit tunes for such Disney successes as "The Parent Trap," "Bon Voyage" and "Summer Magic," plus original music for "Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color" on the NBC-TV Network.

Composers Dick and Bob Sherman, musical director Irwin Kostal, Dick and Julie enjoy an impromptu songfest during rehearsal.

However, "Mary Poppins" has proved the greatest challenge and most rewarding musical assignment of their careers. For the delightful tunefilm, the Shermans composed fourteen completely original songs, including such unique titles as "Spoonful of Sugar," "Jolly Holiday," "Love to Laugh," "Chim-Chim-Cheree," "Feed the Birds" (Tuppence a Bag), "Step in Time," "Stay Awake," "Sister Suffragette," "A Man Has Dreams," "The Life I Lead" and "Supercalifragilisticexpialidocious."

This last title was a tongue twister the Shermans dreamed up as kids for a gag during summer camp doldrums. They had forgotten about it until Disney requested a superlative superlative to put over a story point. Bob and

Dick not only came up with the word but also a song that could very well become the hit tune of the show.

Kostal, who received the coveted Oscar for his scoring of "West Side Story," divides his time between motion pictures, television and Broadway.

The former musical director of "The Garry Moore Show" on television, he also wielded the baton on several of the Carol Burnett TV specials.

One of the great musical talents of our time, Kostal was musical director of the hit tune-show, "Fiorello," and is currently represented on Broadway with the musical-comedy smash, "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum."

Upon completing the supervision, arranging and conducting of the music for "Mary Poppins," he drew the same assignment for the filmization of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "The Sound of Music."

A seventy-five piece orchestra, comprising the finest musicians in Hollywood, was used in the scoring of the Disney musical. Six weeks of pre-scoring was necessary to record the songs of stars Julie Andrews, Dick Van Dyke, David Tomlinson and Glynis Johns. The post-scoring of the background music for the production involved an additional two-month period. The entire musical score, including the songs, was recorded in full stereophonic sound, to enhance the enjoyment of this important Disney presentation in its initial engagements

Choreography

Exciting dancing and unique staging play an important part in every stage or film musical and choreographers Marc Breaux and Dee Dee Wood have contributed both to Walt Disney's sparkling musical feature, "Mary Poppins."

This husband-and-wife team, whose work has brightened many a Broadway musical and television special, now lends its vibrant talents to a motion picture for the first time.

The lightning-paced chimney sweep ballet, one of the most rigorous film routines ever set to music, the charming and colorful "Jolly Holiday" sequence with its imaginative dances, and the tuneful airborne teaparty provide many of the show-stopping moments in the delightful musical.

Prior to the chimney sweep ballet going before the cameras, six weeks of rehearsals on an exterior mock up of the rooftop set was necessary. Animation

The technique of combining live-action photography with the animated cartoon has long been considered one of Walt Disney's major contributions to motion pictures. First pioneered by him some forty years ago in a series called "Alice in Cartoonland," it has been developed down through the years at the Disney Studio and is used only on special occasions, when the story calls for these special effects.

Combined live-action with animation proved the highlights of such past Disney successes as "The Three Caballeros" and "Song of the South," but has never been used more effectively than in the delightful "Jolly Holiday" sequence of his "Mary Poppins."

Production

The success of any motion picture depends upon the teamwork efforts of its production staff and "Mary Poppins" is a perfect example of such harmonious collaboration.

In addition to such key people as the film's imaginative and seasoned director, Robert Stevenson, the co-producer, Bill Walsh, who also co-wrote the screenplay with Don DaGradi, the song writers, musical director and choreographers, Walt Disney recruited some of the top creative people from Hollywood, Broadway and London to merge their individual talents into the making of perhaps his most ambitious motion picture.

The noted English designer Tony Walton, whose costumes and sets have graced many London stage successes, as well as the current Broadway and London hit, "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," created the colorful costumes and served as design consultant on the overall production.

The lavish sets, which include an elaborate replica of a London park adjoining colorful Cherry Tree Lane, the expansive roof tops of London, the interiors of an English bank, as well as the homes of Uncle Albert and the Banks family, Admiral Boom's ship-shape dwelling and a cross-section of London streets, filled to capacity the four enormous sound stages of the Disney Studio.

These settings were designed and created by art directors Carroll Clark and William H. Tuntke, with Emile Kuri, two-time Academy Award winner, and Hal Gausman handling the set decoration.

In a musical feature like "Mary Poppins," the special effects experts have a field day. Such innovations as a teaparty on the ceiling, the airborne travels of the flying nanny, and merry-go-round horses that break from their carousel and gallop off across the countryside, are but a few of the magical tricks they were called upon to perform. Peter Ellenshaw, Eustace Lycett and Robert A. Mattey combined their wizardry to perfect these overwhelming feats.

Edward Colman, whose cinematography has so imaginatively captured the mood and action of such Disney successes as "Babes in Toyland," "The Absent Minded Professor" and "Son of Flubber," was the director of photography.

These talents, together with many others, have produced a motion picture that might well be Walt Disney's supreme achievement in screen entertainment.

MY FIRST PLAY.

I always speak of this event in my life as "my first play," merely because it was my first, but also, because, like all aspiring writers, I trust it may not be my last. I mention this incidentally, as a little bit of encouragement to those to whose sharp pens I know will tremble with anticipatory excitement at the mere prospect of an opportunity to "get even."

Now, the way that I came to write a play and get it produced was thus:

One morning while rushing along in a "Hansom" by the Queen's Theatre in Longacre, I was hailed by an old gentleman, known for half a century by all theatrical men in London as "Jolly John Ryder." In many ways, the old gentleman resembled our well-known and popular actor, John Oliver. In theatrical management, Mr. Ryder had travelled himself with the legitimate drama, in which he has always maintained a considerable prominence. He belonged to the old school, not only in acting, but in many other things, among them in a tendency to be hard. Money was every possible opportunity. As I got out of the cab, he seized me by the arm and exclaimed, "Where the devil do you come from?"

"I have just come up from Oxford," I replied, "where I am keeping term, to look after the next number of my magazine, the Dark Blue."

"I had hardly got the words out of my mouth, when the old gentleman explained to me, in intermittent phrases, interrected letters comes greeted forth on the heads of the management of his theatre, playwrights and the public in general. "The theatrical business is going to the dogs. There have we had," said he, "at the theatre four consecutive failures, and it looks very like as if we were going to have a fifth, unless the 'Eruption at Vesuvius,' which we are getting up for Oxeford—'Last Days of Pompey,' I mean—is going to be a Vesuvius eruption property, we shall be right; if it does not, it will close the house."

"The trouble with you managers," said I, "is that you never gauge the public taste, which in my experience always works in a circle. First people have a craze for the legitimate drama. That passes off into a desire to bear the old comedies. From that they get to pantomime, then to burlesque, stages to melodrama, and then by fine degrees to spectacle and the big business, which being first introduced to drama, a revulsion of feeling takes place, and the "legitimate" gets a new lease of life. Now the public taste, at the moment in which we are speaking, has arrived at that condition, wherein it will best appreciate a domestic melodrama with strong local color. A good play, introducing life at the University, for instance, would be about the thing, especially if the pictures were a true one, and not a theatrical caricature of Lincoln's." Oxeford."

"Young man," said he, "you come right over to Miss Hodgson; you are just the person we want." With that he hurried me into the theatre, where I was introduced to Miss Henrietta Hodson, the manageress. Miss Hodson is also generally conceded to be an actress of remarkable power and intelligence, received me most kindly and heard all I had to say. By some fatal misapprehension she understood me to say that I had a play ready written, and so asked me if I could come round up to the theatre and read it next Thursday. "Certainly," said I, "with the greatest pleasure." What I said that I cannot to this day understand. I suppose the ambition of writing a play and having it produced was too much for me. However, I did not realize until I had got out into the street what I had promised. It being then Monday, 3 P.M., I had just two days and a half to conceive my plot and write my play. However, being at that time at an age when I would have undertaken to run the Derby Course in forty-five minutes' notice, I made up my mind to retire to my chambers and produce that play or die.

What it cost me to accomplish it I do not like to say. But write it I did.

Thursday morning, duly at the appointed hour, I appeared before Miss Hodson, and while she fanned herself on an elegant settee, poured forth the first act. It was concocted,

I do not think it necessary to trouble my readers with any lengthened description of thepiot, especially as I trust to rewrite the play and produce it at some future day. Suffice it to say that I had two main ideas in view. First, I desired to illustrate a man's revenge that should seek the degradation of the family one of whose members had injured him, and that I also wished to present several scenes of Oxford life as truthfully as my own experience would permit.

Miss Hodson was kind enough to say that she thought the work had many points of merit, and that she would herself read it to Mr. Labouchere, who was at that time interested in the theatre. Owing, no doubt, to her kind intercession, I soon after received a notification that my play had been accepted, and would be produced without delay.

I now began to realize what I had done, and soon became aware of the fact that I had stirred up a veritable hornet's nest. I had ebentuated my play "The Undergraduate." That soon brought down upon me the jibes and sarcasm of every penny-a-liner in town. It did not seem to occur to these worthies that a man living at the university might be capable of depicting its life with some regard to truth. Furthermore, I had been guilty of writing a play when barely out of my teens, and had committed the awful crime of getting it accepted.

I had constant trouble with the stage manager and costumer, who insisted upon dressing my "Collegians" in large straw hats, with sky-blue streamers, waistcoats coats and gray trousers. As I knew that half of my audience on the first night, at least, would be composed of "Varsity men, I knew that, whatever might be the many other defects of phe representations, I would have to be said so to the right color of the ribbons. I informed the stage manager that such apparel would make gentlemen look like a cross between variety show swells and an operatic chorus. To which he returned but one reply, "We've got the things in stock, and it's cheaper to use them," and it was only by the most determined representation to Miss Hodson that I secured proper raiment for them. I assured her that if Oxford men were represented with sky-blue streamers it would be considered by the Oxford men as a libel on their university, and by the Cambridge men as a caricature on theirs, that the play would never be permitted to proceed, and was bound to break up in confusion.

The first night arrived. The house was packed, and by the row which prevailed in certain portions of the audience I soon perceived that my play was going to have a very lively time of it. Even the overture provoked a display of feeling, as at its conclusion some cheered the leader, and some hissed him. From this onward a regard of the most free and fearless sort was not a scene, so exquisitely painted and so well set, for the stage management had spared no expense in their portion of the work, that the audience burst into hearty applause and called out the scene painter. The first act was then successfully through the first and second acts, at the end of which latter a perfect storm of applause and of hostile demonstration. One half the house applauded wildly, apparently recognizing in the bad singing and the uproarious noise the truth of my picture, the other half as wildly protested equally determined to put a stop to the proceedings. A suggestion on the part of the host of the "Goose" that a more strict adherence to bel, accompanied by a cornet solo, "Sweet Spirit Hear My Prayer" (Wallace), and a farmer lover of his art, but he is also a stern disciplinarian, and it largely by the force of his personality that he is enabled to render amenable to his will all those under his musical control.

The effect is satisfactory to the eye, and, as far as the voices are concerned, to the ear also, the danger of orchestral tone is not commensurate with the number of players engaged. This is attributable to the fact that, as it has been being placed on the same level, the tone is partially absorbed.

Much sound judgment has been displayed in the disposition of the players as far as the relative position of the instruments is concerned. The contra-basses are placed at each end of the orchestra, the remainder are extended in single lines at the back on each side, and the 'cells are massed in the centre, the whole into one double wing, their apex. The May Musical Festival

The series of performances inaugurated on Tuesday evening afford a significant proof of the real progress of the art and practice of music in our midst; for the realization of such an undertaking does not wholly depend on the professional element engaged, but also needs the practical cooperation of those who have cultivated their musical talents, from sheer love of the art, in order to carry the matter out on so gigantic a scale. When it is remembered that the choral force taking part in this concert is composed almost exclusively of amateurs, it must be admitted that America can now fairly claim to be considered a musical country.

This result is mainly due to the untiring perseverance and enthusiastic labors of Mr. Theodore Thomas, who has for so many years labored faithfully in the good cause, undaunted by the innumerable difficulties that always beset the man who, single-handed, fights the battle of intellect. The great mass of the public regard music entirely as an amusement, and practically ignore its higher functions. Therefore, the task of educating them up to a higher standard is one of extreme difficulty. Mr. Thomas is a man of keen musical sympathy, and a farmer lover of his art, but he is also a stern disciplinarian, and it largely by the force of his personality that he is enabled to render amenable to his will all those under his musical control.

He has attained every career by sender this festival a great artistic success, and, although pecuniary considerations are not paramount, it is probable that, notwithstanding the large expenditure involved, a profit will be realized. The arrangements at the Armory are in every way excellent, and the actual difficulties have been but few, overcome that a fair hearing can be obtained in almost any part of the immense auditorium. The ensuing duet was omitted owing to the unfortunate absence (from illness) of Miss Cary, and the unaccompanied chorale, with its masterly counterpoint, exceedingly well sung by the choir, concluded the work.

The Jupiter Symphony tested the quality of the band and the acoustic properties of the building more thoroughly than the preceding number, and although there was a lack of sonority and even clearness in some instances, the result was, on the whole, eminently satisfactory. The first movement was capitally given, the strings were conspicuous for energy and verve, and the wood wind was simply perfect, the delicacy and refinement of tone being something absolutely marvellous.

The Andante was also rendered in a manner that has rarely been equalled. The "reading" was unimpeachable, and it seemed as though every player was animated by the same sentiment, every nuance being observed with equal facility and precision. Mr. Mansell and Pinsuti were less satisfactory, for the simple reason that the former was played unctuous and the latter prete, whereby the one lost its playful charm, and the other became confused and inarticulate. The Finale was a model for the development of the four subjects employed in this celebrated movement render it especially necessary that the slightest unsteady tempo should not be adopted. On the other hand, decision and boldness of attack were called for in several features. The loss of effect in the case of the Menuetto was also felt by the audience, a fact proved by the absence of applause at its termination, although it is, from its timefulness and simplicity, more acceptable to the general public than any other portion of the work.

Of course the event of the evening was the appearance of Pauline Maderna, an artist known the world-wide. Her appearance on the platform was the signal for an enthusiastic ovation. She is a handsome woman, possessed of a stature and of splendid physique. She had chosen for her début here the great Recitative and Aria from "Fidelio." Before she had completed the opening phrases of the Recitative it was evident that her powers had not been overestimated. Her voice, although not apparently of very extended compass (as she sang the Scena in E flat), is of remarkable power, and is also completely under control; as her rendering of the lovely andante abundantly proved. Although not a dramatic soprano, her voice is not equally well adapted for the execution of florid passages, but in the broad declamatory style or music which is expressive of deep and intense emotion, she is superb.

Frau Materna is not merely a singer, but an intellectual artists of a kind that is but rarely encountered, but whose sphere is emphatically the stage, wherein she invests with a genius proper scope for its due development.

She was recalled amid a storm of applause that cannot be described; the whole chorus rose en masse, waving their handkerchiefs in their frantic excitement, the audience exhibiting an equal amount of enthusiasm.

When she reappeared it was the signal for fresh outbursts of cheering, and a gentleman who was in front of the orchestra an elaborately polished horseshoe, which evidently surprised and delighted her personally, and which was well worth retaining. As Frau Materna was being driven away from the rear on her arrival, she observed a man with a shoe, and observed to a gentleman who had accompanied her: "Do you see that horseshoe, it will bring me good luck." Her request was complied with. The circumstance becoming known to some members of the Festival Committee, they obtained possession of the shoe unknown to its owner, sent it to Tallary, who polished and beautified it, and presented it to the prima inscription.

The presentation of this novel souvenir was quite an interesting incident. She shook Mr. Thomas heartily by the hand—a signal for more cheering—and retired, but only to be called out again and again. At last she returned to the orchestra by repeating the final Allegro of the Aria.

After an interval of a quarter of an hour, two encores executed a Handelian "call," and shortly after Mr. Thomas proposed to commence the "Choral Symphony." The three solo vocalists did not put in an appearance till some few minutes afterwards, when they severally took their seats. Miss Wisnant undertook to sing Mise Cary's music, but as she was almost entirely inaudible, it is difficult to state in what manner she accomplished her task. She was, apparently in a state of extreme nervousness, and, therefore, due allowance must be made for her shortcomings.

Mr. Toedt's diminutive voice is utterly useless in a building of such magnitude.

Mr. Henschel also seemed somewhat vocally deficient, and although he sings skilfully, this does not compensate for the absence of voice.

The trio, "For the Lord is gracious," was consequently a most unsatisfactory performance, and was not creditable to worthy the occasion.

The choruses with which the work commence were taken at two rapid a pace, and the Handelian character was, consequently, eliminated. In the fugue the weakness of the soprano was manifested when the voices divided in accordance with the requirements of the five-part writing.

The "Hymn of Praise" was finely rendered by Miss Wisnant and Mr. Henschel, but the accompaniments were played with the utmost grace and delicacy.

The subsequent chorus, "O, tal Your Way," was characterized by lack of emphatic treatment on the part of the chorus, a want of precision in taking up fugal points.

The substitution of E flat for B natural on the third note of a soprano phrase, on the first occurrence of the word "God," was also a strange oversight, as it was not prepared the accuracy of the corresponding passage, assigned to tenors and basses respectively, in the two previous bars, but destroyed the fine effect of the unaccompanied chord of E flat which occurs in the third bar following.

The "Gloria Patri" marked allegro maestoso, was taken at double the rate of speed indicated, and the whole movement, as well as the Final Fugue, suffered in equal fugal comprehensible in consequence. The disastrous results were more apparent on account of the immense area of the building, which demanded that any tempo should be duly adopted, should be in the opposite direction.

On the whole, however, the concert was characterized by much real excellence, and it may fairly be anticipated that the subsequent concerts will reach a much higher standard.

The audience numbered 5,000, and thanks to the admirable seating arrangement, all were accommodated without delay or inconvenience.

One circumstance worthy of special note occurred. Mr. Thomas administered a well deserved rebuke to a party of well-dressed but ill-bred people, who started to leave the building in the midst of the last chorus. He immediately stopped the performance and signalled the chorus to sit down, explaining to the audience that when the disturbers of the public peace had departed, he would resume and conclude. His spirited action was highly indorsed, and it is fervently to be hoped that the lesson will have a decisive effect on other equally inconsiderate people, if not exist.

Salmi Morse's New Opera.

In spite of the preoccupations and disturbances of the May evenings and the engrossing claims and attractions of the Music Festival, the announcement that Dr. Salmi Morse, the author of "The Passion Play" and "The Doctor of Lima," had written a new opera, caused the wildest excitement throughout the city. Col. Mapleson stopped, with one foot upon the steps of his steamer, and exclaimed, "Why was I not told of this before?" Theodore Thomas' baton was arrested in mid-air, and the music that Theodore Thomas was arrested in Boston, and the great conductor, neglecting his Music Matters for a moment, expressed his surprise in a polyglot sentence, which seemed to the chorus like indignation. Sullivan, Gilbert, Carte, and Richard D'Oyly Carte, way Hall, and murmured, "And he never asked me to compose the music!" Maurice Grau stopped to James Morrisser, "That is an opera I can sing without sacrificing my religious scruples." Maurice Grau sailed for the first time in search of New York with his French troupe, and Abbey & Grau's New York hall with the French Fair. Here in New York struck him each of the Standard Theatre, "It will come high, but I must have it!"

In a word, everybody was aroused, curious and interested, and the pious Boston Ideals saw their way clear for another season.

MUSIC AND DRAMA comes, like a poulice, to soothe the popular and professional excitement by the announcement of the facts. It is true that Salmi Morse has written the libretto of an opera, or, rather, as he would have it, he has written the book of an opera. The music is by Carl Kerssen, who resides at 25 Waverley place, New York City, but, of course, he is not a New Yorker. He is a musician and a very secondary consideration. The great moral lessons, the profound philosophical deductions, the—the—in short, the Salmi of Morsisms of the libretto will be the great points of importance. These in fact will weary the cable with the news about Salmi Morse's opera to stir Europe to its depths. There it is that will speed to the biggest cities which bear the intelligence to the furthermost confines of Mexico. These it is that will make the loss of the gold beaver, which Salmi Morse wore to the esthetic Esquimaux who are engaged to paste Herald posters upon the North Pole.

The title of Salmi Morse's new opera is "A Pearl of a Laundress," and the book of it is in three acts, and is duly entered according to Act of Congress in the office of the Librarian at Washington. The following are the names and vocal requirements of the

In one of those philosophical prefaces which go so far to insure the success of his dramatic works, Salmi Morse boldly and broadly announces that he intends to be discover by his new opera. It is, we do not deny, a risky and hazardous thing to be discovered, and explore it safely and satisfactorily, Salmi Morse is that fortunate individual. "Columbus," he happily says, "in the palmy days" (and Salmi Morse, mind you, is as much at home in this remote period as an island native), "could have gone rise to more serious consequences. The libel upon Dinah extirpated so many nations." In a word, Salmi Morse are no nations extirpated in the new opera. Salmi Morse is simply working for its wonderful discovery to the plot of the libretto. His mighty mind always operates in this logical but long-winded manner.

"A Progressive nation," he resumes, after a paragraphs pause, "more reasonable in their ideas of justice, have healed the severest penalties for monetary basis." We do not believe that anybody but Salmi Morse would have used the word "monetary basis." "But backward people," he continues, "still cling to the retaliatory measures of passion, conception of time and space." This is nowhere more rigorously exemplified than in the antiquated communes of the solute Netherlands, where the inhabitants are so far behind the times as to that that is unconditionally carried into effect. This is called "Progressive nations" and "Dutch." Both of the immediate mass of information packed into that paragraph (in spite of some verbal inaccuracies and obscurities about "it's"), like a feather bed in a pint pot, and you will appreciate the extent and minuteness of the knowledge of the author of "The Passion Play" by which is now to come.

Here son Kricker (tenor), an opulent tanner, like Jay Gould, but also, unlike Jay Gould, a gay Lothario, is surprised in the arms of Jeannette Lamdese and forced to escape through a window leading to a balcony too high to risk jumping off. Salmi Morse says that the Here was "somewhat surprised," but, not even in an opera, are heroes surprised especially. However, Van Kricker climbs from balcony to balcony along a row of houses, and is at last discovered by what Salmi Morse calls "the dreaded night-watchman," and is arrested. The window of Jeannette (soprano), the city washerwoman. Jeannette's father, Rosebloom (bass), is the corporal of the dreaded guard, who have caught Van Kricker. He is arrested, condemned upon circumstantial evidence and sentenced to marry the washerwoman, according to the law previously promulgated by Salmi Morse.

Van Kricker is, of course, very much disgusted. Salmi Morse says: "He seems to conform to the union; dresses meanly at the wedding; assigns a separate domicile to his wife, and makes her subject to every means of low-conceived neglect." Jeannette resents this treatment and resumes her profession as a washerwoman, putting the name of Van Kricker on her name and bills. "The disgrace of such proceedings," says Salmi Morse, "is more than the irate husband can brook. He openly declares that if she would carry her threat into effect that he, in his turn, would pick up some woman in her place. She, however, refuses to relent. Cutaby stung by this new disgrace, the husband makes love to the first girl he meets," and she happens to be Gertrude (soprano).

Salmi Morse seems to have here quite missed an opportunity for a duet between Van Kricker has brought the disgrace of pointing out that by his bad conduct before reaching the balcony, second, by his scurvy conduct towards his unmount victim, and, third, by his improper letters. Look my some other woman. Perhaps these points are all covered in the full libretto; but we call Salmi Morse's attention to them in case he has overlooked them in preparing for inculcating a moral lesson.

With an ingenuity that does Salmi Morse, or the unknown French author, great credit, Gertrude is made the means of the punishment and conversion of Van Kricker. She is the female friend of Jeannette, although they are rival washerwomen, and under the guardianship of her uncle Rosebloom, and also in love with an itinerant Hans Gyppel (second tenor), "whose prospects in life may be said to appear up-hill." He is struck by the casualty of his pants being too devilish tight for him." The word "devilish" is Salmi Morse's own, and we are not responsible for it. The delicacy of the phrase, "the casualty of his pants," more than adorns the use of such an unpleasant world as "devilish," and so we let it pass as a bit of realism.

Van der Hirring's wife was the apparent object of Van Kricker's clandestine affections. It was through her window that he escaped. It was from her balcony that he climbed to the balcony of poor Jeannette. You will not find the name of Mme. Van der Hirring in the cast of the opera. "Because of her absence," says Salmi Morse, "she does not appear upon the stage." This is a real relief after every reader as a capital reason for her non-appearance. We are familiar with all sorts of reasons for the non-appearance of operatic ladies, such as doctors' certificates, rows with the manager, quarrels with other singers, more profitable engagements elsewhere; but for complete absence from the stage, Salmi Morse's reason takes the entire manufactory of confectionery. "Nevertheless," he says, "she is the cause of the appear upon the stage."

Nevertheless, Mme. Van der Hirring, although absent, exercises a very important influence upon the plot of the new opera. She is the cause of the hero's being on the ding day, by her husband, she stumbles, breaks open the casket and discovers the proofs of his wife's intrigues with the gay lothario of the bank. She is a wife scorned and demands revenge. Salmi Morse, or the unknown French author, seems to have been pressed on idea from Shakespeare's "Othello;" but note how differently he handles the incident. Salmi Morse makes Hirring the husband of his wife—which would, indeed, be impossible, as she is absent from the stage—and thus contrives a more subtle and natural revenge. "He would have," says Salmi Morse, "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth." In other words, Van der Hirring is disgusted that he cannot have Gertrude until he has ruined poor Jeannette—a vile proposition, which appears to have escaped the lips of Salmi Morse with no very nice in the music. We can trust Salmi Morse to remedy this defect in the words of metrical rondeau when at rehearsal.

But see how, like a lily from the mud, a pure and virtuous denouement arises from this muddle of wickedness and incentiousness! Jeanette pretends to encourage Gyppel, Gertrude leads on Kricker—both conceive the most injurious for the same night. Then, Jeannette and Gertrude have only to change dresses for that night in the dark and in French opera, each husband climbs into the apartment of the wrong wife with their legitimate hopes very pick. A French author would have stopped here, but Salmi Morse does not forget Madame Van der Hirring, although she is absent from the stage, and sends her legitimate lover to her reputation by explaining that she was only "an interlocutale agent in the affair of the casket." And now, in the eloquent words of Salmi Morse, "the unexpected meeting of the several parties with their legitimate lovers brings about a universal reconciliation, and ends with the hilarity (as it should be) of double wedding."

The title, "A Pearl of a Laundress; or, Starch," is thus justified by the plot, but where does the "Tan" come in? Salmi Morse replies that he has examined into the idea of a pun upon "Pearl Starch," but we cannot follow him upon the "Tan." Nobody gets tanned, although Van Kricker is a tanner. Perhaps some of the music is adapted from "Tannhäuser."

To illustrate Salmi Morse's libretto, Carl Kerssen has composed or adopted an overture, "introduction chorus," one song for Gyppel, two songs for Jeannette, two songs for Jeannette, one song for Gertrude, two duets for Jeanette and Van, a chorus, song and concerted, "Persian Kings," an "entr'acte," a duet, a trio, a waltz song, a finale, a ballade, a cavatina for Van der Hirrberg, a patrol of Ouard Uhlans, a song for Olga (mezzo-soprano), and three finales. We have not yet had the pleasure of hearing the music, but, no doubt, it is fully equal to Salmi Morse's libretto.

The scene of Act I. is "a water-front hotel, with a public house" with a swinging sign having a beer mug painted on;" (3) a park, with a view of the North with bushes;" (3) interior of a wash-house. Thus the opera may be—as in time it doubtless will be—played as easily in every drawing-room as upon the largest stage. We sincerely hope that we may live, and all our readers likewise, until we shall see it successfully produced.

Mr. Hanchett's Occasionals.

At the third of his interesting and instructive "Occasionals," Mr Henry G. Hanchett gave to those who were present an intellectual treat. Some account of the historic development of the sonata form with an analysis of Mozart's tenth and Schubert's first sonatas in part, and of the whole of Beethoven's sonata in C, op. 53. Mr. Hanchett announced that he hoped to be able, on next Monday afternoon to illustrate more completely the enlarged sonata form by a presentation of Rubinstein's Sonata in A minor for piano and violin. The lecture was, as usual, successful, positively pronounced so by all. These "occasionals" are free to music students, and the attendance is increasing so people find out how valuable they are.

Acme Opera Company.

This company, which has had a successful tour in the provinces, appeared on Monday at the Standard in the evergreen, "The Mascotte." Miss Randall, a young lady with a very good soprano voice, was an arch Bettina. Miss Eisner was pretty as Pimenta, and Mr. Peakes displayed considerable comic talent as Lorenzo. The baritone, Mr. Mark Smith, was Pippo, and, in spite of some rather clumsy acting, was very successful. Mr. Wilkie, Frederick, has a good method, and sang sympathetically well.

French Opera Company.

PAOLA MARIE.

Mr. Grau's company gave "Mignon" on Thursday night. The chorus and orchestra were as bad as usual, and the conducting rather worse. But Mlle. Paola Marie atoned for almost everything. Her Mignon was a magnificent creation, touching, simple and tender. She sang, too, excellently, and her vocalisation was admirable. We have never seen this charming artiste to greater advantage than in M. Thomas' pretty opera. The Philine was the debutante, Mlle. Dalmont, who has a pleasant voice, which she manages with intelligence. The Lothario of M. Maugé deserves very high praise. He raised this part, which is ordinary enough, in a flat, stale and insipid role, into a very prominent position. To M. Maugé and Mlle. Marie the opera owed everything.

On Thursday, April 27th, the "Dragons de Villars" introduced another debutante, Mme. Prevat. She has a fresh, clear soprano voice, and acts brightly and with spirit. She received much applause in the duet with Spiross, M. Maurus, who acted with great spirit. Merly completely overdid the part of the Lieutenant. A decided success.

On Friday, Offenbach's pretty "La Fille du Tambour Major" was given. The orchestra was worse than ever, often overpowering the voices and rising to a deafening noise in the finale. Mlle. Marie, as Stella, looked sweet and sang charmingly. The part is one of her best. Mesdames, as the Deux Indis Volés, fascinated. His soft, soul-but and every point were brought out with consummate art. Taudberinger especially, Grisot, and Nigri was an excellent Robert, being highly successful in the duo d'amore.

"Si Jetais Roi" was produced on Saturday. It was exquisitely mounted and costumed, the chorus sang exceedingly bright and picturesque. Chorus and orchestra at their worst. Mme. Prevat, excellent as Catherine, sang admirably, singing the duos with Zeyharis, M. Maurus, with charming effect. Maugé as usual acted a great deal better than he sang.

This week opened with "Le Jour et la Nuit." This lovely work of Lecocq was given for the first time in French. Maeo was charming as Manola, and as usual M. Mesieres, as Prince Pipeau was inimitable. Taudberinger was good, as indeed this accomplished actor always is.

"Carmen" was given on Tuesday to a small, but appreciative audience. Mlle. Paola Marie played the part of the heroine with great spirit and more Southern vivacity than Miss Hauk, and sang with effect. Mme. Dalmont as Michaela sang and acted well, and the Escamillo of M. Maugé was excellent in his swagger singing, his acting being extremely vigorous and spirited. Don José was satisfactorily rendered by M. Maurus. The chorus was, as usual, distressing, but the orchestra went rather better. The opera was well mounted. The most successful part of the evening's performance was the finale of the third act. The thinness of the audience is to be attributed to the counter attraction of the Music Festival.

The Joseffy Concert.

On Thursday evening, April 27, a large audience heard Mr. Joseffy render at Steinway Hall several compositions which he has never before played publicly in New York. The orchestra, under Mr. Thomas, opened the program with a smooth and finished rendition of Gluck's Overture, "Iphigenia in Aulis," and the overture to Goethe Schumann's "Overture, Scherzo and Finale" were performed with that attention to detail, delicacy and finished correctness which we have learned to expect when the accomplished conductor wields the baton. The Andante and Rondo from Mozart's Concerto in A major (allegro, with cadenza, by the performer—Adagio—allegro assai), Chopin's Sonata, Op. 11b, and the Scherzo from Sonata, Op. 31, No. 3; Chopin's Nocturne in D flat major, Liszt's "Rhapsodie Hongroise," No. 12, "Chopin's Etude," Op. 25, No. 11, "Andante and Saint-Saens' Concerto No. 2, in G minor (Andante sostenuto—Allegro scherzando—Presto).

Decidedly the best playing of the evening was done in the last two movements of the Saint-Saens Concerto. The orchestra would BRIDGE'S "MOUNT MORIAH"—THE "MESSIAH" GOOD FRIDAY CONCERT—MUSIC IN THE CHURCHES—CAST OF THE "MIRELLUNDEN"—CYCLUS—HUSTER—SOPHIE MENTER—VON BULOW —ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC—ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA CONFANY.

LONDON, April 17, 1882.

Dr. Bridge's oratorio of "Mount Moriah" was given on Wednesday in Holy Week at Westminster Abbey. It has been given often before in the provinces since it was first heard, when the composer took his musical degree at Oxford eight years ago. As befits a musician of Dr. Bridge's training, it is remarkable for its display of contrapuntal skill. But it has more in it than this learned element; it has a good deal of dramatic character, and deserves more frequent hearing than has been given it. The airs throughout have melody, and are excellent musical illustrations of the words. It was well performed under the composer's direction, with Dr. Stainer at the organ.

The "Messiah" was, as usual, given on Good Friday. The performance took place at the Albert Hall, at 7 A. M. Misses Albani and Enriquez and Messrs. Maas and Foli were the soloists. The first named lady was in good voice, and sang in perfection. Mr. Cusins was the conductor, and stoutly refused to grant an encore of "Unto us a Child is born," although the audience nearly unanimously demanded it. The hall was crowded. The choruses and orchestra were admirable. If familiarity with the music is a source of interest, they have it. Dr. Stainer was at the organ.

On Good Friday evening, Mr. Ashdown gave a concert at St. James' Hall. The novelty was a "Meditation" of J. S. Bach, arranged by Gounod for hand, chorus and pianoforte. Marie Roze took the soprano part in Rossini's "Stabat Mater." Gounod's "Salutaris" and the "Hallelujah" choruses from the "Messiah" and "Mount of Olives" were included in the program.

Altogether the music on Good Friday and Easter day was, this year, of unusual excellence. One very notable feature was the increased tendency to revive on Good Friday the unaccompanied choral services. There is no doubt that vocal music, when heard in the full glare of daylight, and with an express solemnity in a way not to be reached by any instrumental device. The selections in most churches were highly appropriate and showed a decided progress in true ecclesiastical taste.

The following is published as the cast of the "Nibelungen" at Her Majesty's Theatre:

First night—"Das Rheingold," Gods—Wotan, Emil Scaria; Donner, Heinrich Wiegand; Froh, Anton Schott; Fricka, Therese Vogl; Freia, Minna Nilsthegn—Aberrich, Otto Schelper; Mime, Max Schlosser. Giants—Fasolt, Albert Eliers; Fafner, Robert Hilbert. Goddesses—Erda, Hedwig Reicher-Kindermann; Frella, Antonia Schreiber; Erda, Gerlinda Ringler. Rhinedaughters—Wellgunde, Augusta Krause; Wellgunde, Katharina Klafsky; Fraosilde, Bertha Schelper.

Second night—"Die Walküre." Siegmund, Albert Niemann; Hunding, Heinrich Wiegand; Wotan, Emil Scaria; Sieglinde, Therese Vogl; Hofmeister: Brünhilde, Therese Vogl; Fricka, Hedwig Reicher-Kindermann. Fulgrithe Gerhilde, Augusta Krause; Helmwige, Antonia Schreiber; Waltraute, Katharina Klafsky; Schwertleite, Maria Schuster; Helmwige, Therese Müller; Siegrune, Lina Wagner; Grunegrde, Rosalia Sailer; Rossweisse, Gisinda Bruch.

Herr Richter will soon be here for his concert and opera season. Sophie Menter and the inscrible Von Bulow are announced to play. Mme. Essipoff has left the Schultz-Curtius Concert, at which the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh will be present.

The Royal College of Music is still being vigorously worked. Not much, however, to the satisfaction of native musicians. Foreign musicians are heard here after subscribed £5[illegible] to the entire Philharmonic season of £35. Out of the £300,000 asked for, only £50,000 have been raised. It is now called the Royal German College of Music, and loud complaints are made of the international character it is made to assume. The report of the Royal Academy of Music is favorable, notwithstanding against the remarks of the Royal Dukes respecting its position towards the National Training School. It reminds the Royal censor that after a certain requirements have been met, the funds are to be balanced by the conditions offered, and that it went out of its way to show its goodwill to the rival scheme by allowing students of the professorial staff to accept situations in the Training School.

Till the Royal Italian Company (Limited) is fully constituted we do not know how Gye and Mapleson will work the enterprises. In 1869 the elder Gye and Mr. Mapleson had a temporary partnership, and made, it is said, over £60,000 in the season.

Ganz's concerts begin on the 26th and will be continued on the four following ultimate Saturdays. Five of Beethoven's symphonies and twelve by other composers will be given, including Liszt's "Dante" Symphony, Berlioz's "Symphonie Fantastique," and Raff's "Gipsy Symphony, Selim's "Erlkönig," and also a new one by Egambati. The orchestra will be led by Mr. Pollitzer.

The Crystal Palace Festival will take place on June 7. Handel, Beethoven's "Elijah," Handel's "Acis and Galatea," Sullivan's "Prodigal Son," Spohr's "Last Judgment," Bridge's "Boadicea," Haydn's "Creation," and Benedict's "Woman of Samaria" will be given.

The projected New Italian Opera Company, to which I referred in an earlier paragraph, has received all kinds of operatic anecdotes.

The great accession from Her Majesty took place in 1866, when Costa, Gruneisen and Macirone succeeded Mr. Lumley. These malcontents, after nursing Covent Garden for a while on republican principles, fell to with Mr. Delafield, the son of the banker, and the $1,500,000. His fortune was soon spent, when Mr. Gye took up the management. Lumley at Her Majesty's had meanwhile been losing money, and closed the doors in 1852. He made a brief experiment again in 1856, but finally Mapleson came to the front and made a brilliant success by producing "Faust." Then he too was lured out in 1867, as Gye had been in 1856. Then came the combination of "all the talents," its brief duration, and Gye triumphs in London with Napoleon's American campaign.

"FRANCOISE DE RIMINI"—THE BOOK BY M. JULES BARBIER—ITS ABSURDITY—ANALYSIS OF IT—MLLE. SALBA—M. LASSALLE —THE CAST—M. PAUL FERRY AND THE OPERA POPULAIRE—THE CHARITY BALL.

PARIS, April 28, 1882.

"Francoise de Rimini" at last. The house of course was full. All the celebrities of the high life, the haut monde, the artistic and journalistic world of Paris sat patiently through the long and weary work of M. Jules Barbier. The performance began at 7:30 and ended after midnight.

Doubt has many sins to answer for in throwing such a halo of poetic sensibility and pathos over that worthless young woman Francesca, and the still more worthless Paolo. His greatest sin, however, is having signed M. Barbier with this libretto. The poor coxcomb of font acts with a prologue and an epilogue.

Prologue—Set: shades of the gates of hell. Mountains and rocks, rocks and mountains. A Fourth of July celebration in the background. On one rock a long inscription in the vulgar style of the police regulations. Inscription looks like one of Hetzbold's "Bucks" struck by lightning. Enter, Dante, M. Coronaut. Dante has come to see how the land lies. He certainly has lost his voice. Then enters Virgile. Madame Barbier crowned with laurels. He explains that the inscription means:

"Leave hope behind, all ye who enter here."

Nevertheless Dante and Virgile enter without leaving anything behind. The sound of Virgil's voice is heard "Dans l'espace." Second tableau —The two poets hike a boat on the Styx. They row about while the chorus of "Damned" sing "Ah! Ah! Ah!" Enter, Francesca, Mlle. Salba, and Paolo, M. Sellier. They condole with each other over the idiotic libretto. Virgile enters and says:

—nunus nalcorn.

Tableau ends. Francesca recitation induces versa—

The duo-comédie one of the finest in the repertoire of "Elsinore."

Act 1. Paolo and Francesca are reusing a naughty book, a medieval romance, which tells the story of Launcelot and Guinevere. They fall, with frisone amoureux. A duo, "Celebrai ajeux," leaving. He kisses her. Very inconsequent. Enter husband of Paolo, Giancio. The three then sing a trio, "Italie, o Italie," very nosy and commonplace. Guido announces the arrival of M. Lassalle, is coming to attack the town. He urges Paolo to defend it.

Second tableau. The locale sounds, the people rush into the square. Much confusion. Enter Paolo, who sings a martial air, "Aux armes." Mlle. Richard, in black velvet jacket and blue soulliet, endeavors to enter the Opera Populaire. Mr. Ferry prevents her. Paolo then breaks into a chant de guerre, very conventional and in bad taste. Discouraged by the failure of his martial air, he sings a love song. They fly to just in time to save the opera. Lancelotte, M. Lassalle, enters. A strife between Lassalle and Sellier. Lassalle wins. Sellier is killed. Another orchestra strikes up, the Gothichin fashion salt. The conductor, Alles, is in a state of musical fury, as well he may, with the three orchestras. He is seen to tear out a few of his hair. Curtain.

Act II. The marriage of Lancelotte and Francesca. News is brought that Launcelot has fallen in love with Guinevere. Lancelotte, Lancelot, and Guido. It is very like that of Hamlet, Ophelia and Gertrude in "Hamlet." The couple are married, and a romance is sung—not exactly sung by Lassalle. The bridal train leave the church. A chorus of pages, forgot to sing it. Guinevere and Launcelot have had good ings, surround Lancelo, and insult Mlle. Richard by singing

Faire nous meilleur visage!

Paolo, however, is very much in love. He comes just in time to find his Francesca married. He tries to open his wounds with a dagger. Launcelot is cruel, and will not allow the prime donna to sing. She declares she will never be Lancelotte's, and breaks away from him. Curtain. Third tableau. Prologue one of Verdi and "Il Trovatore," hardly befitting a bride who is deliberately rejecting over a favorable chance to commit adultery.

Act III. Grand festivities given by the bridegroom, on purpose to allow Rosine Maret a chance of displaying her sukker and talents. She does so in a charming manner. Then a final duo, "Je t'adore." Guido announces that the Emperor has summoned Lancelotte to his presence at Stadt. Grand Duchess Gerolstein, Lassalle, is ardent and emotional. The ballet was very pretty, and the fair Maret never displayed more grace and charm. She was encored. Curtain. Fifth tableau.

Act IV. Francesca, in her husband's absence, takes to Launcelot. Unfortunately it is the thirteen armed sweetheart, the naughty book of the perfect lover. They have not time to have more libraire," with considerable feeling. Then Arcasse, who prays the art of Galeazzo, sings a serenade, commencing "Dors, dors, mon enfant." Launcelot and Guinevere shake the youthful entertainer. Then Paolo rushes in and falls into the embrace of Francesca. Launcelot is a fixed fact, Arcasse is on a sound in haut. A cloud hides the denouement.

Epilogue. Hell once more. Chorus of damned: "Amour eternant." Another encore. Curtain. Finis. Virgile exclaims:

"Pour sorer qui a mort, il faut valoire la vie.

Then the curtain falls on the most idiotic libretto.

The book is full of such platitudes and nonsense. The scenery was magnificent. The musical genius of the nineteenth century with scrupulous exactness and with marvellous effects. Mlle. Salba has a high school of singing. Her voice is pure, and her good qualities She gesticulates like a sewspaper. Mlle. Richard, on the contrary, with her fresh voice, avoided all the eccentricities of Mlle Salba and endeavored to give a true interpretation of the part. She is capable of all his means, and his creation of Lancelotte confirms his place in the front rank of lyric artistes. Sellier had a good part in Paolo, but succeeded in singing with a good deal of pathos. Gaillard was a conscientious Lancelot. Mlle. Maret and Mlle. Arnaudon very good leading soprano and prologue as Dante and Virgile.

With such a piece libretto and such a book, it is wonderful that M. Thomas' work produced any effect. It is the work of a scholar, not of a genius. Much of it is pretty nothing a grand. It will share the fate of Ambroise Thomas' other operas—oblivion.

As a matter of record, I send you the distribution: Lancelotte Malot (Mlle. Salba); Francesca, Mme. Richard; Paolo de Palestin, M. Gaillard; Francesca, Mme. Salla; Arcasse, Mme. Richard; Seigneurs et Dames de la Cour, Mlle. Arnaudon, Mme. Richard, Seigneurs Lassalle, Sellier, Bonnet, Ferry, Bonnet, Gaillard, Pont, Bonnet, Dupuy et Epilogue: Le Dante, M. Grimodet; Virgile, Mme. Barbet, (Damnes et Seraphins.) Ballet Divertissement régit par M. Mesmacq: Les Cygales, Mlle. Rosita Mauri.

Why are musical people so quarrelsome? Here are M Andran, composer of "Le Marechi," and M. Galet, one of the authors of "Les Cloches de Corneville," at war within the walls of the Folies Dramatiques. Why, nobody knows clearly. Report attributes to some misunderstanding about collaboration in "La Petite Fee."

M Paul Ferry, late manager of the theatre at Davre, is the only candidate who has come forward to create an opera populaire with a subvention of 300,000 francs a year offered by the city. He supposes his application for a concession by producing his piece for an insurance ball to be erected at the entrance of the boulevard Magenta; on the ground occupied by the panorama of Berlioz. Great objections were made to this arrangement by the Municipality, but the difficulty has been surmounted by buying out the Society which runs the panorama. M Ferry claims to have financial support to the extent of three millions The Municipality are determined to any case to insist that wherever he comes the manager, he must not call his house Theatre Municipal or Théatre de la Ville de Paris, or any term which would imply a semi-official character. The city wishes the enterprise to be perfectly free.

The event of the season will be the ball at the Continental Hotel on the 30th. The court-yard will be transformed to represent one of the "bals de bois," which were given in 1725, in honor of the marriage of the Dauphin, son of Louis XV., to the Infanta Marie Therese. All the actresses of the Francais will be present to represent the ladies, as well as dames of noble patronesses. The ballet is for a very deserving object. "L'Hospitalite de nuit," for the homeless poor. During the four years of its existence it has received 100,000 individuals, and found work for 12,000.

Alexandre Guilmant will continue this year at the Trocadero the organ recitals he founded in 1878. His object is to enlarge the circle of those who appreciate the beauties of the organ. He will give, in addition to selections from the old masters, Bach, Handel, Batiste, Lemmens, Alexandre Guilmant, Brahms, Rosenhoff, Fesberger, Ischirle, Rietzer, Albrechtsberger, Brahms, Rosenhoff, Fesberger, Ischirle, Rietzer, Albrechtsberger, Rinck, Kerl, G Muffat Pachelbel, Dandrieu, Balaon, André et Jean Lemmens, Schneider, Schumann, Reine Sonata, Eberwein, Schmidt, Gedi, Spohr, Rheinberger, Saint-Saens, Ecclesiastic, Rigel, Chenal, Bennett, and other novelties by modern composers

To show how they do things in France, take the instance of the droits d'auteur as appertaining to the cast of "Fatinitza." The year are Stappe, six per cent to the heirs of Auber and Scribe, the authors of "Le Domino Noir," two per cent to M Wilder, and two per cent to M. Lhérie.

Cluseau has closed his last concert brilliantly with Berlioz' "Prise de Troie," Gounod's "Cantique d'Esther," Diemer's "Enfance du Christ," a Gleck's "Armide," concluding with the usual "Marseillaise."

Lamoureux at his last concert gave the "March and Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin," the "Ride of the Valkyrie," "Francesca," the "Symphonie Rédoque," of Salvayre, a new work skillfully written, and not devoid of genuine inspiration. The "Symphonie Fantastique" closed a work of the first class, and orchestrated in a masterly manner. The concert ended with the choral air of "Lotengrin."

THE APOLLO—GAVAZZI—BRUSCHI-CHIATTI—MAYLAS.

ROME, April 15, 1882.

The Apollo is closed. Poor Tati has not been in luck's way. His only consolation is that it has been unlucky, so have all the other theatres in Italy. The new opera of the season, Maylas, by de Lue, Cambie, "will not buy the child a frock."

The new opera at the Teatro Dora d'Alba" was a triumph for Gayazzi. He had to repeat the duet with the baritone in the first act and the Romanza in the last act. He is a wonderful disinvolto and gaieste, and was applauded to the echo. Crosses of gold and silver were flung at him by dozens, and on several occasions' allusions, ostensibly with the intention of some of his female admirers.

Signora Bruschi-Chiatti also received an ovation. The duo, with the tenor in the first act, was encored, and both received all the wreaths The lady has a fresh, clear voice, she sings with passion and true artistic sentiment, and has a fine presence, and handsome. Unfortunately this accomplished artist was indisposed towards the end of the season, and was replaced by Signora "La Jaia." She sang in which she first revealed to the Roman her talents and genius. In consequence of this unfortunate indisposition, the season will not be a success.

"Regina di Saba," and one of "La Jaia."

They speak of giving "Il Duca d'Alba" at the Costanzi, with Borgio But this is very doubtful. The new opera-seria of "Roberto Il Duvolo" have been commenced. A few representations of Donizetti's legacy may, however, be given. It cannot be represented, however, before the 30th, and the season ends on the 21th.

NOVELTIES—REINTHALER'S "KATCHEN VON HEILBRONN"—MIHALOVICH'S "HAGBART UND SIGNE."

DRESDEN, April 10, 1882.

It may perhaps be interesting to you and your readers to hear some account of the two novelties which have been produced in March by the management of the Royal Court Theatre. The words of the former are Reinthaler's "Kätchen aus Heilbronn" and Mihalovich's "Hagbart und Signe." Reinthaler has taken Kleist's well-known theme of subject. Every German knows and loves the romantic and sympathetic Kätchen of Kleist. The author of the libretto has in some points altered the drama of Kleist, Kätchen, the Count Wetter von Strahl, and the Empress-Queen's real daughter; the Kaiser is not brought in as a deus-ex-machina. The Count is not the Kaiser's son, and the Count is brought about by their mutual love, not by any external influence.

The Editor has made some alterations, but not enough to spoil the connected with. Kunigunde, the evil genius of the piece, is not quite so repugnant as in the original. The music pleased both the critics and the public. He manages to write for the orchestra in quite a masterly, limited manner, and betrayed great refinement of feeling. His accompaniments to the solo parts are marked with great individualism, never overpowering the former and yet maintaining its own rightful place. The music is not of the highest order, but Reinthaler, like Gernsheim, but in treatment they have all the advantages of the Italian method of writing for the voice. Another great advantage of this opera over many modern ones is the fact that the libretto, which received extraordinary interest and profound knowledge. He introduces characteristic melodies, which always demands an increase of musical expression. They are this much more effective than if he had treated the subject in a more modern style.

The singing was admirably interpreted by the principal characters. Frl. Malten sang the part of Kätchen the first act, and her fine s with the greatest success. The "Nachtwandel" in the first act, at the beginning of the second act takes us into the old Rittersaal; we hear it sounding through the trembling figure, and the "Ave Maria" sweet feeling. The scene at the conclusion of this act is very touching, and the scene, in which Kätchen is tried by the Vehmgericht, is very fine. Frl. Malten knows how to interpret the part of a pathetic character perfectly without the slightest touch of the drinking song in the third act is full of humor. In the scene in the Nacht "in written quite in the style of the place middle ages, and, with the conspiracy scene and the finale, forms a remarkable piece of music.

The reception of it here was as enthusiastic as it had been at Hamburg, Berlin, Leipzig, Munich, Weimar, Carlsruhe, Prague, Vienna, Pesth, Impole, Frankfort, Wiesbaden, Cologne, Aix-la-Chapelle, Mannheim, and the rest of the cast all contributed their tasks ably. The composer was twice called before the curtain.

Mihalovich has, on the other hand, worked on a very unsuitable libretto, quite unfit indeed for musical treatment, and inevitably leading the composer into those exaggerations to which in all cases he has fallen a victim. The music is full of beauties, but the whole is not in the first rank. The overture and Act I. are full of power, but he knows how to produce effect by the gradual augmentation of his tone material to full effect strength and how to produce poetic effects by skillful use of the various groups and voices of his vocal instruments. Mihalovich uses the orchestra only for mere effects, thus allowing neither the various instruments nor the voices of the singers to be heard to advantage. The principal parts were sung by Frl. Malten, Frl. Schefzky, Frl. Schenks, Herr Gudehus, Degele and Rudorf did their best. But the result of the whole performance was disappointment.

FRAULEIN M.

The Influence of Edwin Booth on Dramatic Art.

If to be a great actor a man must have versatility and the capacity to risk his individuality, however strong, then is Edwin Booth not a great actor, for all his representations are marked by one and the same individuality, which he seems to be powerless to conceal. Whether he play Iago, Richelieu, Hamlet, or Bertuccio, it is impossible for the audience ever to forget the actor in the character he assumes. "Great moments" he undoubtedly has; moments in which he rises to great heights. These startle his audience and serve to save his performance.

In calculating the influence of an actor of this character upon dramatic art we must remember that Mr. Booth has for many years been considered as one of the exponents of what is known as the legitimate drama. As such he must have influenced it powerfully for good or ill. We will see in the course of a brief critical review of some of his leading characters with which of these two results he is to be accredited. In this issue we will consider but the performances of Richelieu, which, with many critics, we are inclined to think one of his best representations, inasmuch as it is a part where the conventional mechanism which is one of his leading characteristics is more in harmony with the part than with any other that he plays. Mr. Booth lacks spontaneity, and while sometimes he undeniably carries his audience with a display of passion, to sensitive ears it seems only simulated, and the heart fails to recognize that the actor has lost himself in his part. In Richelieu, where he has to feign weakness and to simulate anger and rage, he succeeds, because it is in the intention of the character that the conditions and emotions it portrays should be evidently simulated. Had it been part of the play that Richelieu should be really ill in some parts, and really in other parts really angry, Mr. Booth would have failed, as he conspicuously does fail, in the one or two situations which include his contest and struggle with the King, where his tendency to "pose," and his efforts to catch the applause of the groundlings, are most apparent.

We are not of those who would carp at every man or woman because they have shortcomings peculiarly before the public for years. But we are of those who honestly believe that artists of great reputation deserve and can stand the severest criticism. If Mr. Booth be a worthy representative and exponent of the great masters in dramatic literature; if it be his ambition to represent their works in such guise and with such surroundings as befit them, then is he entitled, not only to such money and approbation as may be showered upon him, but more, he deserves well of his country, in that he lives to maintain a high standard in art.

But if, on the other hand, Mr. Booth be not a worthy exponent of these characters, if he do not surround himself with such other persons as enable him to present great works as they should be given, if forgetting the claims of his art he inhere but to maintain himself, then we say emphatically that he does more to destroy a taste among the rising generations for the noblest productions we have than all the variety shows put together.

Shall we expect of our youth that, accustomed to the rare and completeness with which our modern drama is placed upon the stage, they shall prefer the "legitimate," when they see, for instance, Palmer Leyton's "Richelieu" with courtiers whose dress is as tawdry and tattered as their speech, with a Baradas, the bowleg of the King, whose awkward gait, labored sentences, ill-fitting clothes and clumsy gestures would certainly have, with Louis XIII., been a cause for consigning him to the Bastile, when they see Marion Delorme, of whose beauty, grace, and political influence in her time they have read so much, personated by a coffee and cake, thin tone lance lately on the board, when Louis XIII. is portrayed by a gentleman who is certainly not one inch a king? When they see this, and when they add to it Mr. Booth's own defects, is it to be wondered that they smile incredulously when they think of the perverted tastes of their forefathers, who cared for the "legitimate?"

Henry Irving's great Shakespearean revivals in London have shown conclusively that whenever the actor unites to great capacity such love for his art as will prompt him to devote all the means at his command to the worthy representation of the great works of the men whom we all honor, the public will respond in such an emphatic manner as will leave his success no matter of doubt. Stipulated performances in all the world of art are enough, but they are all the more conspicuous and harmful when they deal with the highest and most noble subjects of the drama.

JOHN C. FREUND.

The Passing Show.

DEAR PATSHUN—George Darrell is a young Australian, who, having written a play, has been acquainted with Miss Eugene Legrand, determined to discover American and to bring out his piece at the Park Theatre, Brooklyn, which is one of his leading characteristics is more in harmony with the part than with any other that he plays. Mr. Booth lacks spontaneity, and while sometimes he undeniably carries his audience with a display of passion, to sensitive ears it seems only simulated, and the heart fails to recognize that the actor has lost himself in his part. In Richelieu, where he has to feign weakness and to simulate anger and rage, he succeeds, because it is in the intention of the character that the conditions and emotions it portrays should be evidently simulated. Had it been part of the play that Richelieu should be really ill in some parts, and really in other parts really angry, Mr. Booth would have failed, as he conspicuously does fail, in the one or two situations which include his contest and struggle with the King, where his gold perceives that Darrell is in love with Solange and refuses to bush any longer. So he denounces her openly in the presence of a crowd of four persons. She does not reply; she only looks at him. Words fail me, as they did her, and again I fall back upon Mr. Darrell's poetry—

"There came a rush of passions, a whirlwind of turmoil;
She rose, engulfed and shattered, amid the ruinous coil!"

The fourth and last epoch shows Solange engulfed in rich robes of black silk and velvet, and shattered upon a satin couch, covered with leopard skin. Amid the luxury of a first-class Union Square boudoir, with green satin walls and velvet upholstery, and in the words of some more of Mr. Darrell's poetry,

"Heart of oil save honor, a shadow of the past.
She bore its cross unflinching, sacrificed to the last."

But make no mistake, dear Patshun, Miss Gonsalez No, the Rev. H. A. Wesner turns up to declare that she did not poison her husband, and after Darrell has publicly proposed to her, for the third and last time, she asks him to be seated and retires from the stage.

The latter part of the romance ought to become really right away.

None of the actors and actresses in "Solange" deserve any credit except John Matthews, but this is the fault of the parts, which are all equally poor and indefinite.

Mr. Darrell may now return to Australia and report that he has discovered America, but that America declined to discover him.

The other novelties for the night of the first of May were the Hess Troupe in "The Mascot," at the Standard, and the Gran Troupe in "Le Roi de la Nuit," at the Fifth Avenue. These I turn over to your Musical critic, with my sincere commiseration.

The revivals of "The World" at Niblo's Garden, and of "Widow Bedott" at the Bijou, cannot be regarded as novelties, as being the fifth revival of "The World," and the third or fourth of the "Widow."

Poor Harry Grip, who died of pneumonia caught in the raft-scene, Clinton Hall took his place as the hero, at Niblo's. Somebody said the town with the rumor that Jimmy Morrissey was to make his first appearance on the stage as the vision of New York in "The World." Was what Tom Comyn, of the Herald, calls "a cunard." Morrissey might do worse. I have always thought that the actors who play the vulgar parts generally succeed. Morrissey will, sure.

Herrmann, the magician, opened at the Thalia Theatre, where Gerstner sang for the last time this season, at a concert for the benefit of the Treasurer, on Sunday. Herrmann is very clever, but he ought to take better writers and better him. Heller, who secured the most spontaneous of stage hits, actually committed the folly to imitate him at actor. Herrmann has either a bad part or a bad memory.

The Japanese Prince, with Herrmann, is a wonder well worth going down to the Thalia to see.

Your Music Festival sets up on the theatres this week like Jumbo upon the baby elephant. But by next week the managers hope to have a show.

Theo Fanny Davenport commences her farewell engagement at the Grand Opera House. She is already in town, being the origin, and with George Clarke, looking rather younger than ever, full of his invention of a new parlor car.

Then, too, Maurice Grau has his new French company at the Bijou. You have never seen Bijou to comedy, but London entranced the town that had it to ourselves that burlesque or opera bouffe. We shall see. But it seems to me that for a professional singer to play comedy is like a pugilist who tries to fight with the right arm tied behind him.

Paola Marie is going to attempt the same experiment at the Fifth Avenue next Monday in "Divorçons." Fetch 'em catching.

The last nights of "Youth" are announced at Wallack's. How many last nights there will be, nobody knows. "La Belle Russe" has been carefully rehearsed, which, at Wallack's, is always all sunny boy by contraries is a pretty sure proof that it will not be done this season.

It would be a shame to take "La Belle Russe" away from Jeffreys-Lewis, who made a great hit in it at San Francisco. But Rose Coghlan is well enough to play the part, if Wallack decides to produce the piece. Indeed, it is a part that would restore any leading actress to health and strength if she saw her rival understudying it.

"The Widow," a new American opera, is in rehearsal by the Hess troupe for the Standard. Zelda Seguin is said to have a grand part in it.

Poor, dear old Bartley Campbell, who sticks to his "White Slave:" like a man and a brother, is compelled to announce the last week of it at Haverly's, and "The Professor," from the Madison Square Theatre, is billed for next Monday.

As Bartley continues to be the leading author who "eschews Uncle Tom's Cabin" for the road, what will he say to the opposition at which cadaverous him at Philadelphia?

A manager named Smith—not our own versatile John P., but another Smith—has brought out a mammoth, double Boston "Uncle Tom's Cabin," calculated to crush my "White Slave" whom it may encounter in the provinces.

Smith has two Topsys, two Marks, three trick donkeys, ten bloodhounds, the South Carolina Jubilee Singers, headed by Nellie Bell, the famous camp meeting shouter, and a glittering transformation scene, to wind up his two Little Evas in a blaze of glory.

How is the single-handed "White Slave" of Bartley Campbell to stand against this revolver of an "Uncle Tom's Cabin," with everything double, except the prices, which are just half the regular rates?

Bartley has only one hope. Having adopted the theory of writing plays for the road and thrown his artistic scruples overboard, let him go the whole Ouidomah and beat Smith at his own game.

He should advertise at once "A Herd of White Slaves," instead of one, and put in eleven horses, three heroines, three villains, and assert that he has the largest, tallest and heaviest line of low comedians in the business.

Smith has sixty performers in his "Uncle Tom." Campbell should engage seventy—"Count 'em, Seventy"—and thus raise the Annie.

It is no use going on the road in a half-hearted way, Bartley, with his one "White Slave," will be swamped unless he gets up and gets his fine work in on the posters.

Almost every actor and actress I know, is going to visit England this Summer. Some are going home; some for pleasure trips. All declare that the first thing they shall do in London, is to see Irving.

No English actor, since Macready, has had such fame in America as Irving. Your supplementary picture of him last week was welcomed by all professionals.

The talk about his visiting America has died out. I do not see why he should come here, unless he is as curious to see the country as the public are to see him. Of fame and money he has all that any man need care for in England.

During the dead season in London, from August to October, Irving might, perhaps, be induced to visit us; but we could offer him no better terms than he can secure, with no risk and much easier work, in the British provinces, and, besides, the dead season in London is also the dead season here.

So, as Mahomet will not come to the mountain, the mountaineers are sailing away by steamer-loads to see the theatrical Mahomet.

London and New York are now almost the same metropolis dramatically. Paris has fallen back to the third place. Irving has accomplished this, among his other Thespian miracles.

His appointment as an Honorary Trustee for England of the American Actors' Fund is not only a compliment to him personally, but a recognition of his unequalled services to the profession. He has put players upon a par with princes. He has restored the English stage to more than its Elizabethan glories.

To see Irving is now the Mecca of every American actor.

But there is something else in London which I wish that American actors and managers would see and study over, before it is too late.

You remember the old Strand Theatre and the programs which Mrs. Swanborough used to produce there? Well, the little theatre is to be torn down and rebuilt upon a much larger scale, and in future, as during the past few years, it is to be devoted to opera-bouffe in English, under the experienced direction of H. B. Farnie, who may not suit the American public, but who hits the English in the bull's eye every time.

The old Strand was the burlesque theatre of London. The program used to be: First, a farce to play the people in; then a short comedy, to end at 9:30; then a burlesque, with two really funny comedians and plenty of pretty girls.

This is the sort of a theatre which New York needs. It will make the fortune of any manager who organizes it. If Mrs. Swanborough has been superceded at the Strand, it will pay any manager to imitate her in inaugurate such a theatre here.

No people are more fond of burlesque than the Americans. They like it in books, such as Mark Twain's and Artemus Ward's; they like it in the pulpit, as witness Beecher, and Talmage, and Ingersoll; they like it in the papers, which are all more or less travesties of genuine journalism; they would like it at the theatres, but they don't. If they could supply it, they seek it at Tony Pastor's, the San Francisco Minstrels, and the variety shows.

Capitalists know that no kind of property pays so well upon an investment as a theatre. So, indeed, do the local authorities on this point. But a theatre with a Strand program—without the farce, which is not needed here—would pay the manager as well as the rest of them.

Fancy a house at which you could drop in and see the successes of the other theatres caricatured by clever artists, bright composers, comical comedians and lovely actresses! Why, the dollars for tickets would dance by themselves out of the pockets of the public!

Well, we are to have such a theatre next year. Whether the Harrisons or the Goodwins are to be at the head of it is an open question; but the theatre is to be built and opened.

I give this early notice so that all the managers of the press may spend the Summer in getting their burlesques ready.

Shanks has already handed in his libretto. Yours,

Ludovic Halevy.

The name of Halevy is one well known in French art and literature. The father of M. Ludovic Halevy, whose portrait we give in this number, was a litterateur of distinction, and brother of the illustrious Fromental Levy, the composer of the well-known opera, "La Juive."

Ludovic Halevy was born in Paris, in 1834. He commenced his career in one of the public offices of the Government, and in 1852 was in the office of the Secretary of State. In 1858 he was advanced to the post of Chief Clerk in the office, for Algeria and the Colonies. In 1861 he was clerk to the Corps Legislatif. During this period he began to write for the stage. His earliest works were undertaken in collaboration with Leon Battu, Hector Cremieux and Henry Meilhac. With the latter he has been associated in all his great works. The names of Halevy and Meilhac, on the title page of a libretto, were nearly always followed by the words "Music by Jacques Offenbach."

The success which his works attained at the theatre led Ludovic Halevy to form the resolution to abandon his official career and devote himself exclusively to literary occupations. The civil service in France, like the civil service in England, gives its best members to literature and the drama.

It is impossible to give a perfect list of all the works which bear the name of Ludovic Halevy. We shall limit ourselves to merely giving the principal productions.

His first writings for the Bouffes were some operettes which he signed "Jules Servieres." The first piece of which he acknowledged himself the author, was the "Ba-ta-clan," which had such a run in 1855. In 1860 his name appeared in one of the curiosities of literature, Ludovic Halevy and his father Leon, wrote the book of an operetta, "La Mariasse le Savoir," the music for which was written by the Duke de Morny. It was produced at the Bouffes.

In 1867 he wrote "La Chanson de Fortunio" and "La Pont des Soupirs." Although the former contains some of Jacques Offenbach's best music, neither of these pieces had the brilliant and lasting success which attended his next ventures. There were the three great successes, "Le Belle Helene," in 1865, "La Vie Parisienne," in 1866, and the immortal "Grande Duchesse de Gerolstein," in 1867. Others that followed in quick succession were equally popular. Need we name "Barbe-bleue," "Les Brigands," and the charming "La Perichole?" All these pieces the words and music are equally distinguished for brilliancy, gaiety and wit. Offenbach has been inseparable without Ludovic and Halevy, and Meilhac and Halevy almost inconceivable without Offenbach.

Halevy, however, was not content to rest his reputation on operettes or opera bouffe. He entered into competition with Eugene Labiche, and conquered his right to a portion of the domain of humorous comedy. Halevy and Meilhac were no less successful in this species of composition.

The Palais Royal produced their "Chateau a Toto," in 1868; "Tricoches et Cacolet," in 1871, a great success, which was playing last month at the same theatre; "Le Reveillon," in 1872; "Le Roi Candaule," in 1873; "Le Boule," in 1875. The Varietes have produced "Les Sonnettes," "Toto chez Tata," "La petite Marquise," "La Cigale," and "La Roussotte."

The Renaissance have given by the same authors "Le petit Duc," and "La petite Mademoiselle," with the charming music of Charles Lecocq.

The Vaudeville make a success with their first comedy, "La Clef de Metella," which was followed by "Les Bobis de Pamirge," a delicate sketch of womankind.

The Gymnase produced a comedy of manners, in five acts, "Fanny Lear," in 1868, and in the following year the well-known and ever popular "Frou-Frou," where Aimie Desclee made such an admirable creation of the heroine.

The Theatre Francais had the credit of giving "L'Etide le Saint Martin" and "Le petit Hotel."

These theatrical successes might have satisfied the literary aspirations of most men. But Halevy has been no less successful in romance. His "Invasion," "Monsieur et Madame Cardinal," "Les petites Cardinal," "Un Mariage d'Amour," and "L'Abbe Constantin,"—which last named work is being published here in the feuilleton of the Courier des Etats Unis, are all bright and successful. The two last-named, indeed, have attained an almost unexampled success.

In romance as well as on the stage the name of Ludovic Halevy stands in the list of masters.

Henry Crisp.

Harry Crisp, the leading man in "The World" combination, died in Chicago, last Thursday. He was of a noted theatrical family. His father being a popular favorite on the English stage. Harry was born at Edinburg, in 1847, and was christened after Harry Hotspur, the character his father was playing on the night he was born. The family soon afterward came to America, and, after some experience in New York and Philadelphia, settled at Nashville, Tenn., where the elder Crisp managed a very successful circuit in the Southern States. Harry Crisp served in the Confederate army, and when the crash was on over resolved to adopt his father's profession. He made his debut as Snarley, in "Under the Gaslight," at the Howard Athenaeum, Boston, in 1866. For the next six years Mr. Crisp was leading man at various theatres in the South, and in several companies on the road.

After a successful engagement at the Boston Museum he joined Mr. Daly's Fifth Avenue Company in 1874, playing the Rev. Harry Duncan in "Divorce." In 1876 he invested as the leading man in "Pique," and in 1877 accepted an engagement with Mr. Abbey at the Park, where he played Ann Pretchard in Bronson Howard's Saratoga, in "Our American Cousin." In 1878 he created the title rôle in "My Partner," and played the character in every leading city. In 1880 he created Joe Thatcher in "Deacon Crankett" at Baltimore, and then appeared at the Union Square in "Two Nights in Rome" with Maude Granger. He remained in her company till he joined the World troupe. In the season 1881-1882 he took the part of Sir Vincent Huntingford in "The World," and his performance in this character made a great success with the interpretation given by the original impersonator. It was a well-earned closing performance of this gifted actor, who died from untimely death and deprived us of a promising actor. He was buried in Boston

Emily Mestayer.

We regret to have to record the death of this well-known actress, who died in the city last Tuesday. She was born with an instinct for the stage. Her father was a low comedian of considerable repute, and when she made her first appearance, at an early age, her sister, the Mrs. Charles H. Thorne, and her brothers, the late Louis Mestayer and the still surviving Harry Mestayer, were also on the footlights. Miss Mestayer possessed great versatility, and was a favorite at the old Bowery's museum. She made a great hit as Lize, which she played in Charnfau's Mose. For two or three seasons she played at Wallack's and the Union Square, and was an admirable Mrs. Motigrey in "The Rivals." The Boston Museum retained her as leading actress for several years. Her last appearance in New York was about eight years ago. Since then, with the exception of an engagement for a brief period in California, she has not appeared in public. Miss Mestayer married Dr. Charles Heap, a dentist in California, but was a widow for over twenty five years. She leaves two sons, Dr. Charles Heap, of San Francisco, and Mr. William A. Mestayer, of the "Fantastic" Company. The funeral services took place at the "Little Church Round the Corner," and the remains were placed temporarily in Greenwood.

Drama in London.

THE COURT THEATRE—"THE PARVENU"—THE PLOT—THE CAST—THE ROYALTY—"NOT REGISTERED"—THE STANDARD—"HUMANITY"—DEATH OF HENRY FROST.

JOHN TOOLE.

LONDON, April 17, 1882.

I do not profess to give up a report of everything which occurs at the Egyptian Hall. Pantomimes, burlesques, monologues—all kinds of dramas are produced. I can only be in one place at a time. I will merely give you, therefore, the novelties worth talking about.

The "Parvenu," at the Court, was a success from the rising of the curtain. There is only one new incident in it; but that is well managed. Here goes for the plot. The scene is in "Sir Mark's Land," on the borders between the estates of the Proligraves and the Ledgers. The Proligraves are a county family, their chief, Sir Felix, as in Bart. They are very poor and very proud.

The estate is mortgaged in Mr. Ledger, who has made his fortune in the Stock Exchange. Lady Proligrave encourages Mr. Ledger to hope that he may gain the love of her daughter, Gwendoline. So far all is commonplace, and has been done on thousands of comedy stages innumerous. The delicacy then which stared Mr. Godfrey in the face was how to treat this old matter in a novel way. He has succeeded remarkably well. He makes Ledger, the self-made man, a true admirer of genius and worship. If he has no culture himself, he keenly appreciates it in others. He is cardboard, but a good fellow amiable, generous, and good-hearted. He has succeeded in the notion that his life, hitherto commonplace, Philistine, nonsensuous, would gain charm and color if such a lofty one as Gwendoline were to be the mistress of his home. Gwendoline, who has no suspicion of her mother's suggestions, or of Ledger's day dreams, treats him kindly and prettily. He is just about to make an offer of himself when circumstances are opened. Gwendoline, while strolling about the country, had been rudely insulted by a tramp, and was rescued by Claude Graham, a young artist. Of course, he is introduced to Lady Proligrave, who makes him forcibly till she sees him in possession of a rich studio, a box with a crest and an earl's coronet on it. Lady Proligrave, if not acquainted with Tennyson, knows her Burke. She has heard how the Earl of Edinburgh won Miss Burdett. She knows that sometimes Mr. Claude is a nobleman in disguise playing the artist. When women jump at combinations they jump plumb. Lady Proligrave considers that Ledger overheard and smiles kindly on the lucky Claude. He duly falls in love with Gwendoline, and she duly falls in love with the romantic and romantic. She is just the girl to refuse to marry a wealthy cad, because she is herself poor. Lady Proligrave does not, therefore, confide to her her suspicions as to Claude's nobility, but allows him to woo her as an artist. The love scene between Mr. Forbes Robertson and Marion Terry is charming, and played with great delicacy. Then, of course, just after they have vowed eternal fidelity, is led to explain that the silver match box was given him by a friend, Lord Clydesdale. Here dismay on the part of Lady Proligrave. She sends poor Claude packing, and Mr. Felix tells Gwendoline that their estate is mortgaged to Ledger, and that they will be ruined unless she marries him.

But yonder to all this is another love story. Ledger has a daughter Mary, which Lottie Venne plays admirably—that is pretty enough for anything—and the Hon. Charles Tracy is reading for their brothers. John Clayton is very fine as the unsympathetic lender, who is orthodox because he is not clever, and whose real heart is devoted to horseflesh. Mary is very fond of Gwendoline, and very sorry indeed for Claude. Her love for Tracy, who, by the way, is Gwendoline's cousin, makes her wondrous kind. She contrives to bring matters to a generous Ledger hands the mortgage deeds over to Gwendoline, and of course the two pairs of lovers are rendered happy.

As for the representation, place aux dames. Miss Marion Terry in the love scene was, I must repeat, simply charming, tender and grateful I liked her better than in the more ambitious scenes. Mr. Forbes Robertson as the Parvenu, although she displayed in it great feeling and pathos. Lottie Venne was as bright as ever, sparkling with vivacity and fun. I regret to say she sang Grandma to a tune. But her humor was natural and her glory unbridled. I would say that Lady Proligrave was performed by our favorite Miss Larkin; I need add nothing.

Mr. Aiison as Ledger had the most difficult role. It requires very fine handling. Mr. Aiison succeeded admirably in avoiding vulgarity for the self-made man in spite of his deficiency in many of the points which polite society prides itself on. He is natural, but never coarse: you ought say, never vulgar. He is prosaic and ostentatious. But he is keen in his insight into human nature. He sees his own weakness and also sees the weakness of his aristocratic neighbor. The ostentation of birth seems to him not a bit better than the ostentation of wealth. He is warm-hearted and generous, and his generosity is shown as was Mr. Aiison's work, in perhaps exaggerated a trifle. Mr. Forbes Robertson and Mr. Clayton were both good. Mr. Bancroft was Mr. Bancroft as the old Baronet.

The scenery was lovely, and the effects of the fading light, the boats in the stream, and the moonlight were well managed.

La Parvenu partie pleure.

I cannot tell you of any more Easter Eve pieces. But a new edition of "Babil and Bijou" was given at the Alhambra, and "Cast Aside," at Sadler's Wells.

The Royalty produced on Monday a stupid mass of nonsense called "Not Registered." There is a country Postmaster and his daughter. She is in love with a young man who hasn't a cent. As backing horses will break the rest of the Bank of England, he tries to borrow money from the Postmaster. He knows down that a certain letter contains a hundred pounds. He resists the temptation to open it although it is "Not registered." Carey opens it, and gives the ten tenners to her lover. He has, however, backed an outsider and pulled off a good sum. The notes are replaced in the envelope. Nobody is sent to the penitentiary. This precious production is by Arthur Matthews.

The Standard, the same night, produced "Humanity; or, A Passage in the Life of Grace Darling." It was produced in the provinces a week or two ago. Grace Darling has had very little to do with stopping the character of the heroine or the actors of the piece. She puts off in a boat and rescues her lover. The rest is a bit of the Tichborne case. The sensation of the piece is the fight between the villains Mr. Frost and Langley. The fight is carefully studied after the real row that took place in Northumberland Street between Major Murray and Rebecca, the brother of Colonel Boehm. Years ago, when you were a boy, I fancy. I remember it well. The two Roberts were as big scoundrels as ever appeared in London. The room in the Strand as one rented by Roberts, but seldom used. Both of the combatants were found badly used up and Roberts died. As far as I can remember the irons and champagne bottles were the weapons.

I regret to see the announcement of the death of Mr. Henry Frost, better known to the public by his stage name, Henry Forrester. He was the original Charles Surface when Sidney, Colonel brought out the "Sir of Two Coins." He was the original Paul in Boucicault's "Streets of London." He was the Marquis of Rivelly, in "Charles I.," at the Lyceum, but played Cromwell during Irving's provincial tour in 1878 he played Iago to Irving's Othello, and in 1878 took Irving's place as Hamlet, for three nights, with great credit. Latterly he has not been seen much before the public. ORLANDO.

Drama in Paris.

"NADINE"—THE ODEON—" OTHELLO "—THE CAST—ITS DEFECTS—ITS WANT OF SUCCESS—THE ACTORS.

PARIS, April 20, 1882.

"Nadine," the drama of Madame Louise Michel and M Gelipps, will appear posthumously on the 30th. I cut from the Voltaire of the 19th the card: Ambassade, M Bernard; Nadine, Mme. Michel; Serge, M. Fernand Conte Troupf, M. Renaud; Prébois, M. Lasnt; Mordecaïs, M. Jean bel; Tzela, M. Bernard; Ivan, M. Gelipps; Mme. Michel, M. Dolet; Hajj, M Dourville; Achmet, M. Mackett; Tzapf, M. Cavalon, Princess Nadine, Mme Marie Laurent; Mme. Lemercier, Mme. Lemercier.

May I be there to see.

The Odeon, under the management of M. de la Rounat, has given "Othello," Shakespeare's "Othello," translated by M. de Gumont. Let us begin with a few words respecting this translation. You know that the Shakespeare plays are not to be read. You know, too, how soft, cramped, calmed and confined Racine is in the translucent of the French stage. Well, in Racine, Moliere, Lafontaine, Victor Hugo, Casimir Delavigne, Alexandre Dumas, and in fact in almost every Frenchman's work, the French Alexandrine is to die a substance around the Shakespeare's soul. Translate Shakespeare into French verse, and you run to see prose in translating verse, it is in translating Shakespeare into French. Translate Shakespeare into French prose, and you are compelled then on each an occasion. To try to translate Shakespeare into French verse is to attempt the impossible and to succeed.

The effect of M de Gramont's labors is painful to the listener. To hear the lines is like watching the performance of a night-race dancer. You, perhaps, admire the skill of the man in making his rhythm keep all right at the end of every pair of lines. You expect to see him fall and fracture his skull every moment. You are relieved when he has come long and there, how they elongate themselves, abridge themselves, puff and blow, and contract and expand. So, too, the lines in playing cup and ball, and catching the ball on the spike. Infinite patience and practice must have been spent on the work of the translator.

This verse translation has had a very disastrous effect on the acting of "Othello." It has been one of the chief causes of the inordinate length of the representation. Last night the curtain lasted till 12.30. Without rhymes it could be finished by midnight.

Now, then, for the cast and for the length of the play. Here is the announcement of the performance:

Othello, M. Mounet-Sully; Iago, M. Silvain; M. Richet; Le Duc, M. Sicard; Roderigo, M. Jolivard; Cassio, M. A Lacroix; Brabantio, M. Gemmaire; Montano, M. Dumaine; Gratiano, M. Duquesne; Lodovico, Mme. Yeuvadier; Emilia, Mme. Dethesse.

"Othello, le Maure de Venise," par M. Jules salle du Conseil. A. Lhôte Cyprus. A. Lhôte; Desdemona, Mme. Sarah Bernhardt; Une Suivante de Desdemone, J. Un carrefour de Cuypre à la citadelle d'Othello.

Observe the right tableaux. Between each was an entr'acte. You remember the entr'acte in Hamlet, when the players are ordered to go out and see a map, but to smoke a couple of cigarettes as well. This division into eight tableaux not only makes the representation interminable, but it destroys the unity which makes all the interest and movement one of the play. The Odeon entirely loses the contrast produced by shifting scenes. Shakespeare has announced that each Engagement it was to lie his audience w'ot yet possible. Without it, it seems as if the whole play were a long tableau. Now what a comparison has not divided "Othello" into eight tableaux. He only gives you breathing time with the fifth. The audience ought not to fall till he gives the signal. You must obey him if you want to feel the spell. If he chooses to pass from a "Street in Cyprus" to Desdemona's bed, you must do such passage in continuous interest. If you do you come back chilled, as one French critic says: "Behave in a theatre to see before a theatre." You have to make a complete change of scene between the Creed and the Elevation, and Shakespeare is as good as a mass any day."

The French, you see, are becoming profane.

The company of the Odeon deserve the highest possible praise for the efforts they made to achieve success. They struggled nobly beneath the crushing load. Talbade, as Othello, was got up in a most extraordinary manner. He was dressed as a Moor, before, as Iago, looked like Mephistopheles, and had long, waxed moustaches. He declaimed splendidly. Mme. Sarah Bernhardt was a Proper Desdemona.

It cannot be called a success. The public undoubtedly failed to appreciate the grandeur of the play. It was not interested in the noble sentiments of all French dramatic canons in which Shakespeare indulges. It was a mistake, I think, to commence a series of Shakespearian productions by "Othello."

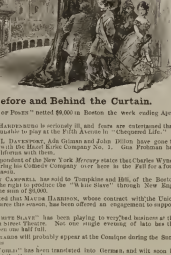
After the first night the entr'actes have been shortened, so that now the play is over by midnight.

Alphonse Daudet invited his friends the other day to the Avenue de Villiers-sur-Seine, to hear the reading of a new play. It is taken from his well known book, "Les Rois en exil," and contains some bold scenes Coquelin aîné read the play, which created a very favorable impression. Mlle. Judic is going to create the part of Sidonie, and has organized a good company.

Madame Samary, of the Francais, will soon have to take a vacation, for strictly private conjugal reasons.

The Theatre Cluny will give, on the 16th, a new piece by M. Bisson, "Ils Ror Pignle," in three acts, with the following cast: Jarlot, M. Gaillard; Quiquenard, M. Montpassier; Bernard, M. Mobray (debut); Frederic, M. Dupuy; Chambon, M. Lecour; Mme. Truphu, Mme. J. Aubry; Mme Jarlot, Mme. Kid; Valentine, Mme Jane Morel; Hetese, Mme. Lebrun; Virginie, Mme Richault.

The Union Française de la Jeunesse gave its annual matinée next Sunday. It will produce several novelties. "Narcisque," one act, in verse by M. Pallieron. "Rico," a monologue, by M. E. Morand, and for the first time in Paris, Ayrard's "Duennah," with Got in the title role. The play was first produced in London when the Comedie Française paid its visit to England. MARGUERITE.



Before and Behind the Curtain.

SAM'L OF POSEN" netted $6,000 in Boston the week ending April 22d.

FRANK HARRINGTON is seriously ill, and fears are entertained that he will be unable to play in the Fifth Avenue's "Chequered Life."

MISS E. L. DAVENPORT, Ada Gilman and John Dillon have gone to California with Dr. Hoff Alvin Company, No. 1. Gus Frohman has gone to California with them.

A correspondent of the New York Mercury states that Charles Wyndham will bring his Criterion Company over here in the Fall for a four months' season.

BARTLEY CAMPBELL has sold to Thompkins and Ellis, of the Boston Theatre, the right to produce the "White Slave" through New England, for the sum of $5,000.

MR. and MRS. HARRY HARRISON, whose contract with the Union Square theatre expires soon, has been offered an engagement to support Mr. Mayo.

"THE WHITE SLAVE" has been playing to crowded business at the Fourteenth Street Theatre. Not one night evening of late has the parquet been one half full.

THE LEICESTERS will probably appear at the Comique during the Summer months.

"THE WORLD" has been transferred into German, and will soon be produced at the Germania.

ADA D'ENNA LEONARD goes to Europe on the Servia, May 17th.

THE KELLYS will revive the "Black Crook," at Niblo's, early in the Autumn.

MR. M. W. HANLEY has selected a strong company with which to take Harrigan and Hart's "Squatter Sovereignty" on the road.

THE WILSON TROUPE will close in three weeks for repairs, and open about the middle of August with "The Danites."

THE account of the estate of Charles Edson Forrest will come before the Orphans Court, in Philadelphia, next month for final settlement. The balance in the hands of the surviving executor and his account state that the estate of the late tragedian, including appreciation in value and the income since Mr. Forrest's death, amounted to $25,192

OWING to the continued indisposition of Ellen Plympton, changes have been made in the cast of "Executor." Belden's part, Henry Hyde, E. A. McDowell; Jack Desmond, Edwin Knowles, and George Drew, Lewis C. Hyde.

THE AUTHOR FUND has already reached the sum of $26,000. Mary Anderson has contributed $1,000, Lawrence Barrett $500, and Joseph Jefferson $1,000. Edwin Booth added $5,000 and Lester Wallack has donated $500, his net share of the receipts of the Emmet performance for the benefit of the fund.

RUDOLPH ARONSON'S orchestra for the New Casino will include Adolph Neuendorff, Jacob Wetzler, Arthur Bergh, Schwarz, Weiner, Idler and Bronisch, in addition to members from the Philharmonic Society and Mr. Thomas' Symphony Concerts. The Casino Theatre is now progressing favorably, and as soon as the building is roofed in the work will be pushed rapidly. The opera "Pinafore" will be played by Lucy Rushton and company.

THE UNION SQUARE COMPANY are now playing a six weeks' engagement at Wood's Museum, Cincinnati, and will remain there for New York and not for three weeks. They will then have a few weeks' time previous to the Fifth Avenue's opening to better their position in the works. On the seven trip they will wear SAM LEE, Dorrer, and play a short season in Chicago. They will then return to New York, where they expect to going to San Francisco on the ground that they were not consulted when the change was made.

AUGUSTIN DALY was arrested at the St. James Hotel, Boston, last week upon the affidavit of Lawrence Barrett, a compositor on the Transcript Street. Gumbiner is a partner of Wolcott Morse in the miner's Theatre, Boston. Barrett claims that Gumbiner owes him $100 for press work. Gumbiner's counsel will move to-day in New York and in other cities. It is alleged that Daly has been very backward in the payment of printing bills, and that a writ was issued once before the action. It is also rumored that Daly, of some one representing him, returned to Boston the $1,000 which Mrs. Langtry received when she replaced Ada Rehan in the play, and that Mrs. Langtry refused the money, as certain long parts in being very small, when the fact was that the $1,000 was given to her to induce her to play parts beside Ada Rehan. Messrs. John Schoefel and Winsor Nickerson being his security. Mr. Daly does not deny that the Pinafore matter, but says he forgot the amount owed.

THE following is the record of the season at Booth's: Michael Strogoff, six weeks; Edwin Booth, Forrest Season, two weeks; Rice, one week; the Florences, one week; Stetson Patience Cooke, one week; Lotta, one week; Kate Claxton, one week; Mary Anderson, four weeks; the Boston Ideals, one week; Dion Boucicault, one week; Rice's Surprise Party, one week; Barrett, one week; Salvini's Tragedians, six weeks; Edwin Booth, two weeks. The final engagement of Edwin Booth was the most successful of the season, the receipts averaging $1,000 per night. Harry Sargent, Kate Claxton came next in attractiveness, and then Mary Anderson, Michael Strogoff, Salvini, Barrett, Lotta, Rice's Surprise Party, Michael Strogoff, Florences, Stetson Patience Cooke, Dion Tayler, and the Stetson Patience company only did fairly well. Rice, Howard and the Florences parties were by very light houses.

JUDGE LAWRENCE, in Supreme Court, Chambers, on Saturday last, rendered a decision concerning an injunction, restraining Mr. Thomas E. McDonough from performing the play, "Taken from Life," which has been running at the Bijou Opera House in Boston since last December. The case came before the Court on a motion on behalf of defendant to vacate a temporary injunction granted against him at the suit of Gustave Amberg. The plaintiff's counsel argued that since the defendant had produced the piece in Boston, he had, in effect, sought the forum of that State for it. It was claimed on the part of McDonough that Henry Pettit, the author, had offered the play to him for $5,000, and that the offer had been accepted by exchanging many weeks before the Colville purchase, and he accordingly advertised the piece for production in Boston. Judge Lawrence said: Yesterday Judge Lawrence decided that the law to be as stated by counsel for the defendant, I am of the opinion that the defendant should not be enjoined from the production of the piece, which under such circumstances he had placed $5,000 in the hands of a certain party in London who was to receive that amount to the author, a very different case would have been presented.

Serenade.

O listen to my gentle tale
Of love that burns for thee,
The sounds of earth are hushed and mute
(I dare not move or sigh,
The moon is floating in the sky
Confounded pale is she,
O lassie, my sweet, your lover's sigh
(I vow I'll have to "get").

The stars are gleaming, love, to-night
(Lumbago's got me, some),
The world is hushed in silent sleep
(This pain I can't endure).

O listen to your lover's lay
(I hear the old man's tread),
O yield to it's impassioned sway
(I'm going home to bed). D.

New York, May 6, 1882.

OUR FESTIVAL NUMBER.

Our paper has made great strides in the four months that it has been issued. We think this will be generally admitted. The only question that can possibly be raised is as to whether our enterprise has been appreciated, and whether the paper has or has not advanced to the leading position it aspires to. We are proud to say that we have had an excellent reason to understand that Music and Drama is recognized as the leading journal of its kind in this country. In our last issue we stated that the publication of our Festival Privileges for the May Festival had cut down the complimentary assignments to thirty, and we also stated that one of these thirty had been sent to us. This recognition of our paper is most valuable. Not only do we the only musical or dramatic paper in the country so honored, but we are the only weekly paper in the United States so honored, with the exception of the German paper, the Deutsches Journal. We append the official letter of invitation:

> MUSICAL FESTIVAL ASSOCIATION,
> NEW YORK, May, 1882.
> NEW YORK, April 26, 1882.
> DEAR SIR:—Please find inclosed ticket for Music and Drama, which the Committee on Press and Privileges of the Music Festival Association has allotted to you.
> Will you kindly acknowledge the receipt of the same, and oblige yours very truly, JAMES OTIS HOYT,
> Chairman of the Committee on Press and Privileges,
> 158 Broadway, N. Y.
> To the New York Music.

When it is remembered that our paper has scarcely been in existence four months, the marked recognition is highly gratifying; and when we add to this the fact that we are the only New York paper so honored outside of the six great dailies, it is all the more noticeable. It is, therefore, apparent that hard work and enterprise do tell, and tell at once.

In order to be equal to the occasion and worthy of the recognition we have obtained, we have issued the present Special Festival Number. The edition printed is 20,000 copies; of these, 900 have been sold on the news stands, 3,700 have been mailed to subscribers, 610 have been sent to foreign exchanges and subscribers, 1,200 in special agency in this country, 11,000 have been sent to the news companies and to fill special orders, and about 2,000 copies remain in stock. The paper consists of 32 pages, all on fine supply paper, entirely devoted to the Festival, and in addition we have a handsome double page lithograph engraving representing all the soloists. The entire cost of this number is $2,400, including the sum expended in advertising. The paper was specially made for us by Messrs. Miller & Flinn, of Beekman Street, for this issue alone, has cost us nearly $700. Work was only commenced on the paper at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, and at 5 P. M. on Thursday morning we commenced delivering to the news companies. During the time the production of the paper has taken up the labor of one editor-in-chief, five principal editorial writers, eleven New York contributors, fifty-seven home correspondents and six foreign, besides the constant labor of our artists, under the direction of Mr. H. A. Thomas, of Fourth Avenue. The mechanical portion of the work has been accomplished under the management of Mr. James McWilliams, of Centre Street, by twenty compositors, one foreman two proof-readers and four pressmen; assisted by three lithographic pressmen, under the management of Mr. H. A. Thomas. We must also add be force used by the Photo-Engraving Company, of Pearl Street, to whom is due the credit of preparing the excellent cuts, exclusive of the lithograph which we publish. In our own office we have had constantly at work one bookkeeper, with five assistants, two canvassers and three persons to attend to the proper distribution of the paper. The binding and mailing of the paper occupied the labor of 13 girls, uninterruptedly, for 48 hours. We publish these facts to give those unacquainted with such details some idea of the effort put forth to produce a Musical and Dramatic paper worthy of New York's great Musical Festival of the year 1882. We desire to acknowledge the enthusiastic co-operation of all engaged, and beg to render our thanks to Mr. Sanger, Mr. Mora and Mr. Fale, the photographers, for valuable aid given, especially to the last named, to whom we are specially indebted.

The influence of Music and Drama is evident from a recent incident. Two weeks ago we called attention to the very flabby and useless condition of a Mr. T. Percy in our daily contemporary, the Star. This week we are officially informed that the resignation of Mr. T. Percy has been required by the editor of the Star. This, if our information be correct, is very quick and effective work, although, of course, the result depended upon the exact justice of our censure.

It is a curious fact that the raft scene in "The World" has been fatal to Hamlet's father's ghost, two other actors employed in it. The scene gives a realistic idea of the sufferings of ship-wrecked people, and the actors are actually chilled through by the cool breeze. Mr. Crisp died from pneumonia, caught upon the raft. A stage manager explained to Music and Drama that the doors and windows about the stage are opened just before the raft scene, to permit the escape of the smoke from the calcium scene which precedes it, and that a draft is thus created which the working of the waves makes even more dangerous to the actors concerned.

The Cincinnati Dramatic Festival is meeting with some difficulties. In the first place, Booth will be in Europe for the next two years. Mr. Lawrence will be prevented from taking part by other engagements. Mr. Raymond will appear if his engagement with Mr. Abbey for Mr. McCullough fears that most actors, like himself, have other engagements. Mr. Raymond explains that not only all the actors must be free at the same time, but that the consent of managers who hold contracts must be obtained. He adds, too, that there would be no profit to the management, as the cast of plays agreeable to all concerned, and last, but not least, a competent house, could not be obtained. We are not here speaking for himself, that if a happy time far distant be secured, and generous co-operation secured, he will go as far as any of his comrades.

The gentleman whose virtuous indignation boiled over lately at the Paris Opera House, and led him to fling his torgnette at the very inoffensive head of Zola during a performance of "The Huguenots," has been pronounced sane by a mad-doctor. As the gentleman moved by the magnetrate before whom he was brought, it is difficult to understand why he should not be pronounced sane after such an examination. Naturally, M. Vaucorbeil loudly affirmed that he must be out of his mind to disapprove of anything which was done at his house. The manager on one hand is not any doubt about it. M. Damaus was known to be perfectly sane, and yet he declared that Zola's novel was foul and held his action to be quite justifiable. We suggest, however, an opera glass in future performances. It is hard to play Hag of a dead-a-cat" under these circumstances. But then a gentleman must defend himself with a dead cat when he goes to the opera. We would suggest that the florists supply the floral tributes might keep a stock of defiant feelers for the occasion. They will be sold with the liberal.

Gross injustice was done to Manager Daly on Sunday by the publication in all the papers of a paragraph headed: "Arrest of Actress." The paragraph implied some shocking criminal, but, upon reading the paragraph, it was seen that Mr. Daly had simply given bonds in Boston, as a non-resident, for a lawsuit brought by a custom house official concerning certain dresses purchased in Europe by Miss Rehearsal, Mr. Daly's reputation will suffer accordingly. The daily papers are notoriously careless or unfair in their treatment of professional men. A vile variety woman, who flaunts her tawdry charms upon some country museum stage, is paraded in the papers as "An Actress Accused of Robbery," when the reporter, editor and proprietor of the paper well that she is not an actress at all. The Herald is a conspicuous offender in this respect, and the Sun follows in imitation his staff against the practice. It will pay Mr. Daly well to ascertain and put the libellers of the paragraph about his Boston business; for it appeared alike in all the papers and was evidently the work of one person.

A Philadelphia contemporary writes that grand opera is as much an exotic in New York as it was before the first opera house was built, and that Cincinnati has adopted a better course in successfully establishing a College of Music. We hope to see one day New York in possession of a College of Music, worthy of the name of a college, and worthy of the name of grand opera as the metropolis of this continent. We hope, however, that it will always, at the same time, retain its devotion to opera. That Italian Opera is an exotic everywhere but in Italy, is a truism. But there exists Grand Opera which is not Italian, and we shall not be surprised if Grand Opera, as it is understood in France and Germany, be naturalized among us. A College of Music will undoubtedly be one complements to each other. A college may give the best possible instruction, but without the stimulus of industry, but unless they have good opportunities for hearing the best artists and the surroundings they have not completed their musical education. The performances of great works by great artists in a style worthy of them not only constitute the best of all musical lessons, but inspire the student as no collegiate lectures ever can.

We desire to call attention to a petty fraud which is becoming prevalent at our theatres. We allude to the insufficient supply of programs even on nights when the houses are but one-half or even one-third full. In nearly every case the programs are furnished by speculators, who pay so much to the manager for the right to furnish the programs, reimbursing themselves for the expense by the advertisements they obtain from piano makers, furniture dealers, etc., etc. Naturally, the fewer programs they print, the more money they make, but it is obviously an outrage upon the public and a fraud upon their advertisers when they cut down the supply to a point where it is utterly insufficient. The other night, at Niblo's Garden, the house was but one-third full at the last representation of "Hazel Kirke." A lady and gentleman entered the parterre and encountered the genial usher for a program. The dignitary replied: "They're out there on the sidewalk." When the ticket was returned and said that he could not find one, the dignitary blurted out: "I guess that's all the use of bothering me, there ain't no more, I 'spose. You'll have to get along without." We commend this case to the notice of Mr. S. G. Gumbee, associate manager to Mr. A. H. Haverly.

The relations between Mr. Mapleson and the London "Royal Italian Opera Company" (limited), seem rather uncertain. The London impression appears to be that it will have the virtual control of Italian opera in Great Britain and the United States. "Virtual control" is one of those stupid-head expressions which mean anything or nothing. What we want to know is who is to have the actual control of opera in the United States. Mapleson replies that the London company cannot control opera here, or give a single performance, without his written consent, nor will he relinquish the call he has on certain singers. "Opera in America is my business," he says, "and give control interfere. He is just as positive and explicit on his side as the London company is that there seems to be some financial hitch in the affair. The company has not yet paid Mr. Mapleson the $400,000 for the good will of Her Majesty's Theatre, and has removed from the scenery, property, books and the like from the building "as a precautionary measure." The London Herald has also declared another of the London enterprises in which he was engaged, "The Nibelung's Ring," which will be produced solely by Herr Neumann, at his own risk. The London company has issued its prospectus. The capital is fixed at one million of dollars, for the purpose of purchasing Her Majesty's London Opera House with the plant and contents, and the lease and good will of Drury Lane. A large amount of this capital is said to have been subscribed, but till it is nearly all paid in, the contract with Mapleson will hardly in carried out.

Our English friends are making a good move. They are organizing opposition to charitable blackmail. In England, as in America, there is not a great undertaking of charitable people who have a curious notion of charity. It consists chiefly in having a number of balls for the poor. They come before the world as beneficent and benevolent persons, after getting up a concert, a fair, or something or other for the benefit of some deserving object or other. The charity comes in by their asking artists to give their services for nothing. Fine doing a performance of "The Huguenots," has been pronounced sane by a mad-doctor. As the gentleman moved by the magnetrate before whom he was brought, it is difficult to understand why he should not be pronounced sane after such an examination. Naturally, M. Vaucorbeil loudly affirmed that he must be out of his mind to disapprove of anything which was done at his house. The manager on one hand is not any doubt about it. M. Damaus was known to be perfectly sane, and yet he declared that Zola's novel was foul and held his action to be quite justifiable. We suggest, however, an opera glass in future performances. It is hard to play Hag of a dead-a-cat" under these circumstances. But then a gentleman must defend himself with a dead cat when he goes to the opera. We would suggest that the florists supply the floral tributes might keep a stock of defiant feelers for the occasion. They will be sold with the liberal.

Gross injustice was done to Manager Daly on Sunday by the publication in all the papers of a paragraph headed: "Arrest of Actress." The paragraph implied some shocking criminal, but, upon reading the paragraph, it was seen that Mr. Daly had simply given bonds in Boston, as a non-resident, for a lawsuit brought by a custom upon the so-called opera, "Cinderella at School." The public will remember the dance of the Hours in which they have forgotten the innocent paragraph, and Mr. Daly's reputation will suffer accordingly. The daily papers are notoriously careless or unfair in their treatment of professional men. A vile variety woman, who flaunts her tawdry charms upon some country museum stage, is paraded in the papers as "An Actress Accused of Robbery," when the reporter, editor and proprietor of the paper well that she is not an actress at all. The Herald is a conspicuous offender in this respect, and the Sun follows in imitation his staff against the practice. It will pay Mr. Daly well to ascertain and put the libellers of the paragraph about his Boston business; for it appeared alike in all the papers and was evidently the work of one person.

GIFT OF
LOUISE ST. JOHN WESTERVELT

while the Thalia has not, we suspect, made a fortune for Messrs. Amberg and Hermann. The French population of this city is much smaller than the German and much less wealthy. It alone cannot support a good French company. The native population will not. Our wealthy theatre-goers know every theatre in Paris and have seen the best companies of all the best houses. The majority of our theatre-goers either do not understand French or do not want to be bothered with it out of business hours. The real managerial bonanza is English opera, or, if you like it better, opera in English. It must be given well, with as good artists, as good ensemble, as good mounting, as can be procured, and with all the care and elaboration which is displayed in the production of grand Italian opera.

A very interesting article appeared in the Evening Post some days ago, contrasting the Italian school, in which Signor Patti reigns supreme, and the German school, of which Mme. Materna is the high priestess. Lyric music, the writer argues, is as much out of place on the operatic stage as lyric poetry on the dramatic stage; but it keeps its place so long because it is easier to appreciate and to follow than harmony, and it has been cultivated by the Italians on account of their mental indolence. That we have outlived this stage of art development is seen by the decline of Italian opera everywhere. The Italian season this winter in Berlin was a failure; there will be no Italian opera this year in Vienna; in Paris the stage is occupied by Meyerbeer and French composers. In Italy, itself, lyric operas fail, while orchestral treasures are imported from Germany wholesale. It is very obvious to seen how a full and definite expression to our emotions can only be given by harmony with its alternation of music, of concords, and discords, of gay or sombre instrumental color. The two schools necessarily require different styles of singing. Modern dramatic and declamatory music requires a totally different vocal method, which in itself is quite as natural as the Italian style, being simply an artistic elaboration of the natural emotional cadences of the human voice in speech. In fact the difference between lyric and dramatic opera is the difference between mere virtuosity and real art. Italian arias written to exhibit an artist to display vocal technique, are mere unhealthy hot-house flowers, while the melodies of the modern school are the natural and the healthy soil in which the songs and dance rhythms of the people grew.

A quaint testimonial banquet has been tendered by fifty admiring citizens of Cincinnati to Colonel George W. Nicholls. It was given to him as the author of "Shakespeare as a public benefactor and patron of music, and expressed the gratitude of all Cincinnati in the way in which he had shaken off Signor Villa, Theodore Thomas and Carl Marzitzki. The Colonel occupied the most conspicuous seat, but like all truly great men he was modest and unassuming. The guests occupied three hours in what the Cincinnati Enquirer describes as a "delicious feast with the toothsome viands and sparkling wines." When the troughs were empty the evening began. Then the toast to the host was given, and that gentleman, struggling with inexpressible dignities, created audacious and spiritual desires. He remarked that "the physical wants of man were amply provided for" as long as pork grew and Cincinnati had packers. Too much cannot be said in praise of popular education, but alas we have no school of music worthy of the name. "When, by some act of Congress, temples of music of temples of music adorn our streets and lifts its graceful spires to the skies, or the people, by taxation or even by museum surmount the neighboring heights, many citizens will be proud to say: 'This edifice is not created from my hard earnings; it is a free gift we helped him to do it for the ourn; we save it, it must be guarded and perpetuated."

The grey mists of dawn were beginning to appear before the company separated; the hours having been filled up by facetious reminiscences of Shakespeare and the graceful statement that the "factories overlooking our city are supplemented by the beautiful influence of music, making this, indeed, the Queen City of the West."

THE musical season is about over. It has been upon the whole very satisfactory. The Philharmonic and Symphony Societies, as well as the Oratorio and Arion Societies, have all been well patronized. The Philharmonic has had the most prosperous season they have known for years. The fate of the Philharmonic Club have been especially successful. Colt-Mapleson will have about $20,000 on the right side of the ledger, and all the comic opera companies are very prosperous. Of the legion of miscellaneous concerts that are given by dilettanti and "all stars," we will not speak except in a financial sense, for they are not given for that purpose. We have had the usual number—about a dozen—concerts this season, and in none of them has any talent been found unpublicly been brought forward. The only new attraction that seems to be drawing steadily from the masses is light English opera, if we except Strauss' "Merry War," at the Thalia Theatre, which, we understand, is still the exceedingly clever work should be given in English, we predict for it a great success. As at last reported Strauss' opera in the vernacular is what the American public will soon demand. We feel confident that if the Germans had English opera company was established in New York, they could play nine months in the year to paying business.

No trouble of a serious nature need be apprehended in regard to the artists; they will be forthcoming. Col. Mapleson affirms that they can not be had, but there are only a few fine artists in the world. So far as those of great reputation go, Col. Mapleson is correct, but there are numbers that would come to the surface, were English opera to gain a permanent foothold here. It requires a long and brilliant career of an artist make their reputation. Sometimes circumstances, and at other times influence, do a great deal. Influence also, in some cases, makes the artist's effect, and instead of being a help, proves a detriment to the aspirant. Materna as a conspicuous example. Her success and her protection can accomplish. Pauline Lucca was brought into prominence by circumstances. She was only one of the seasons a chorus singer in Vienna, and had been twice dismissed by the chorus master, as incompetent to sing in the chorus. After her second dismissal, the chorus master remained deaf to her entreaties to be retained, and she finally went to the director, who, at the time, was closeted with the director of the opera at Olmutz. The little Pauline bounded into the room and told her story to the director, and insisted on singing a tune for him. The Olmutz director was so pleased with her that he engaged her at once, and she made her debut at the heroine in Verdi's "Ernani," in September, 1859. Her success was immediate and great. We could enumerate many instances like the above.

TENNYSON.—Tennyson's new drama is said to be based on the story of "Robin Hood and the Merrie Men of Sherwood Forest."

COGHLAN.—Rose Coghlan will continue as leading lady at Wallack's next season. She signed a contract to that effect last week.

FRANKLIN.—Why does the Boston Transcript continually quote editorial paragraphs from MUSIC AND DRAMA without giving us credit?

REINSDYKE.—Anton Rubinstein will direct the music at the coronation fetes at Moscow next August. All the artists have to be Russian.

YOUNG.—Mr. William Young, the author of that fine play, "Pendragon," is now writing a play based upon one of Sir George Grove's stories.

SCHWAB.—Prof. Schwab has been in communication with MR. LANGEY, who writes that she will positively not visit America next season.

WALLACK.—Lester Wallack is in splendid spirits over his triumphant Boston engagement. This is his first great success outside of New York City.

RISTORI.—The great Italian actress has signed a contract with AUGUSTIN HAYWARD at Hyde Lane Theatre, London, July 1st, as Lady Macbeth in English.

ROGERS.—Katherine Rogers is in town under the doctor's care. She is threatened with consumption. Mr. Will H. Fiske's very successful play, "Clarice," in September.

WAGNER.—The state of Richard Wagner's health is such that he will be unable to go to London so as personally to conduct the Musical Festival at Her Majesty's Theatre.

LEAR.—The venerable Adele lately gave a recital to a party of English ladies. Nobody knew what he was playing, Lizzi himself could not tell. He said he had been improvising.

IRVING.—Henry Irving has accepted a new versified translation of Goethe's "Faust," by Mr. W. G. Wills. He will open his next season with that or "Much Ado About Nothing."

OSGOOD.—Has been engaged by Mart Hanley for Tony Hart's part, the Widow Nolan, during the provincial tour of "Widow Sovereignty." But the real star will be "Billy," the goat.

BOOTH.—Edwin Booth is said to have made $85,000, and his manager, Mr. Abbey, $15,000 out of his last season. The week in St. Louis netted $14,000. Mr. Booth sails for Europe on the 13th.

STETSON.—It is definitely stated that Mr. John Stetson has secured the lease of Booth's Theatre for another year, and that he will open it on the first of August with a spectacular melodrama.

BRIGNOL.—The Chicago Sunday Herald says that "the youthful Brignoli has dedicated an "Ave Maria" to Patti, who has pronounced it "perfectly lovely," and her maid has sent it to a relative in the country.

BARTON.—Carrie Burton is to remain the prima donna of the Standard Opera Company the next season, at the Standard. The season will open with Gilbert and Sullivan's new opera, if it be ready by October.

RENGADE.—Mme. Marie Renegade (Mlle. Rene Reignard), of Nahu's Opera Company, is to be married in June to Mr. Sargent, of New York, an American partner of the Messrs. Cook, the English excursion managers.

ODETTE.—Modjeska's failure in "Odette," at the London Haymarket, completes the cycle. "Odette" has now failed in Paris, New York and London, and we hope to hear no more of this very unpleasant play.

BACKUS.—Charles Backus, the well-known minstrel, leaves for Europe June 7, on the Catalonia. He returns early in the Fall. During his stay in London he will appear at St. James' Hall with the Moore & Burgess Minstrels.

NILSON.—MME. NILSSON has resumed her own name, and when visitors ask for MME. ROSEBAND the servant says, "You mean Mme. Nilsson, do you not?" She says she determined on this course shortly after her husband's death.

PRESCOTT.—Miss Marie Prescott, whose portrait we present in this issue, is a very rising actress, who has been engaged to support Salvini next season. She goes in June to England, where she will support Salvini and Ristori in tragic drama.

WARD.—Genevieve Ward has closed her season, and sailed for Europe on the Calabonia on Wednesday. She will play throughout the British Provinces up to Christmas. After that she may return to this country.

MANSERS.—Miss Minnie Maddern will act during two weeks at the Park Theatre, beginning on May 15th. She will appear in "Up a Ferry," and will have, or her manager, John Hanlon, states, the assistance of a good company.

MILWARD.—Miss Milward, the daughter of Charles Milward, of the Liverpool Porcupine, has become the favorite actress, next to Miss Litton, at St. James' Theatre, London, and intends coming to New York next year.

MARTIN.—Henri Martin, the first and greatest of the lion tamers and animal trainers, died at Paris. Martin Duchez Nodier said of him that, "at the head of an army, he would have been a Napoleon." He was the Napoleon of the menagerie.

WHEELER.—Andrew C. Wheeler (Nym Crinkle) is continuing his fight against Sothern with the English newspapers. His latest effort is the composition of "off color" advertisements for Grundy's play, "After the Opera," now running at the Park.

THOMPSON.—Mr. F. H. Torrington has secured the right of first performance in Canada of Gounod's "Redemption" for the Toronto Philharmonic Society, and it will be presented as soon as possible after its production at Birmingham, England.

RAYMOND.—John T. Raymond's agent, Mr. Frank Farrell, says that during the thirty-five weeks of his present season Mr. Fresh has cleared nearly $40,000. Next season Mr. Raymond will be supported by Frank A. Bates, who intend to present him in two new comedies.

THOMPSON.—Mr. F. H. Torrington has secured the right of first performance in Canada of Gounod's "Redemption" for the Toronto Philharmonic Society, and it will be presented as soon as possible after its production at Birmingham, England.

RAYMOND.—John T. Raymond's agent, Mr. Frank Farrell, says that during the thirty-five weeks of his present season Mr. Fresh has cleared nearly $40,000. Next season Mr. Raymond will be supported by Frank A. Bates, who intend to present him in two new comedies.

LOUDON.—Charles Loudon has astonished everybody, including his manager, by making money with "A Member for Slocum." He has been personally handling the day-clearing for months that there was no money for theatricals in San Francisco, and that "A Member for Slocum" did not draw.

BERNHARDT.—When Thirne, the well-known actor of the Theatre Français, played the rôle of Sarah Bernhardt's marriage to M. Damoie, he is said to have writhy exclaimed: "Ah! mon Dieu! mon Dieu! Enfin, donc, Sarah; s'est attaken de Grace" (grosse).

LEGRAND.—Eugene Legrand is stated to be the wife of Kyle Bellew, and it will be a great comfort to everybody else to understand; for Mr. Bellew is not known here, and consequently he can be pointed out a juvenile stock actor, while Miss Legrand is a star.

BLAKE.—A young lady from the Southern States, Miss Blakely, made a great hit in London as Sarah Bernhardt in the last of Rooney's Ballad Concerts. She has a fine soprano voice and sang Balfe's "The Dearest Heart" to the approval of a very critical audience.

CARY.—Annie Louise Cary has been seriously ill for a fortnight, and will be kept quiet for a week or two more, and she rarely speaks above a whisper. Her last engagement is that of Lucia at Chicago, and she was unable to appear at the opening night of the festival.

DAVENPORT.—Fanny Davenport announces her farewell appearance at the Grand Opera House next year to a professional tour of England; but our English contemporaries entertain serious doubts of her English appearance, and her name appears in no provincial programme. Is it at the Crystal Palace that she is to make her London debut?

KENDAL.—Mrs. kendal (Madge Robertson) has invented a new dramatic facial expression in "Far from the Madding Crowd," which Percy Fitzgerald, the London critic, calls "a smiling grief." In the last act of the play, when she is overwhelmed with sorrow, "her despairs show her face to break into a series of almost ecstatic smiles." This is singularly like it at Booth's.

THOMAS.—Theodore Thomas will not go to San Francisco, as it has been decided to turn the "Crystal Palace" into a Horticultural Hall and abandon the musical season. After his various festivals Mr. Thomas will go to Bayreuth, but his orchestra will be kept together for a short season, and under the leadership of Mr. Dietrich will give a short series of concerts in New York.

SALVINI.—The great Italian actor will begin his American tour in October, and as he is under contract to play with John Stetson in Booth's Theatre, and Booth, we will probably appear at Booth's, as Mr. Stetson has secured a new lease of that house. Mr. Chizzola has gone to London to select a juvenile woman to support Salvini, who is now in St. Petersburg. It is said that Mr. Chizzola has no ample capital, and will run the tour on his own responsibility.

GRUNDEL.—Mr. Amberg, of the Thalia, has engaged the excellent singer Grundel for the season in this city. Fall. During Mr. Amberg's absence in Europe all business relating to the tour will be transacted by Mr. Hermann, who will be remembered as one of Mr. Josefi's aids. Judging from a photograph we have seen, Mr. Grundel is a very handsome man. No arrangements have as yet been made with any piano house.

ABBEY.—Mr. Abbey leaves for Europe next Thursday. He goes to see Nilsson in person. In a recent interview with a reporter he declared that he knew nothing to the effect that she would come over this Fall. His failure to obtain Patti is ascribed to the fact that Mapleson had overbid him, having promised $400 more per night than he did. It is very certain that when Mr. Abbey ignored Mr. Pisanchi, Patti's manager, he was very angry with indifference to the issues of "mistake."

CAMPANINI.—At the performance of "Lucia" on Saturday last at the Academy of Music, Campanini, though advertised to appear, did not do so. He should never have been advertised. The fact is he is utterly overworked and needs rest. This has been painfully apparent of late. He has sung ninety times this season in operas and concerts, not counting rehearsals. After the May Festival it is probable that he will take a rest of a year in Italy, during which he will retire from public life entirely. He has signed no contract with Mapleson for next season. He sails on the steamer D'Amerique, May 31-4. Before he leaves he will get up an entertainment for the benefit of the Italian poor of this city.

Individualities.

Montrunfino.—Mr. A. Daly has engaged this gentleman for next season.

Cowpenn.—Mr. Edward Compton directs the Stratford-upon-Avon performances this year.

Gounod.—A duet for female voices was given for the first time at a late Odeonne concert.

Sophie Menter.—This "queen of pianists," as Liszt calls her, played in London, May 1.

Jurgenson.—The well-known Moscow publisher has a train to "Paris, Vienn and Chicago," by Tchaikoffsky.

Ryley.—Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Ryley (Madeline Lucette) sail for England on Saturday. Both are engaged by D'Oyly Carte for this country next season.

Mirallopian.—An opera by this composer, "Wieland der Schmidt," is said to be accepted at Dresden, owing to the success of his "Hagbart und Signi."

Henderson.—Mr. Ettie Henderson has returned from Europe, and has not disposed of her play, "Almost a Life," as was reported, although it is well worth the attention of London managers.

Lewis.—Miss Catherine Lewis, now that the injunction restraining her has been dissolved, has been playing in Cincinnati, and is this week at the Arch Theatre, Philadelphia.

Stephens and Solomon.—A new comic opera by these gentlemen, "Lord Balcomen," was produced, April 29th, at the London Gaiety. It is to be hoped it will be better than "Claude Duval."

Szosun. Zelda Segnis will create the part of the Widow in Lavallée's new opera, which the Bass Company, now playing at the Standard, have in rehearsal.

Sims.—"The Romany Rye," by Sims, to be produced this month at the London Princess', has been secured by Brooke & Dickson for this country.

Rosini.—Mlle. Rosini, with Campanini, Galassi and Mme. Lablache, will sing in the "Trovatore" performance at the Academy next week.

Jozeff.—Rafael Joseffy will remain another season in America, and will again be under the management of Henry Wolfsohn. He will principally play in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and Cincinnati, giving in each of these cities four grand concerts with orchestra. He intends making his debut in London in May, 1883.

Wallack.—Lester Wallack's reception during the Boston Museum closed on Saturday night. It was one of the most prosperous of the season. Mr. Wallack's reception during his stay in Boston was of a very flattering character, and his appearances at the Museum were attended by most fashionable audiences.

Elsler.—Miss Effie Elsler, who has been playing Hazel Kirke in "Hazel Kirke" for three years, having originally created the part, left for San Francisco, where the other of the company's engagement at Noble's last Saturday. The constant strain seems to be telling on her, for her acting is becoming "forced."

Colville.—Sam Colville has legally demonstrated his American rights in Henry Bellair's new melodrama, "Taken from Life." Tom McDonough contested these rights; but the decision of Judge Lawrence leaves him on equal grounds. The contest may, however, be renewed in Philadelphia, where McDonough compromised a similar controversy in regard to "The World."

Gilbert and Sullivan.—It is rumored that in Gilbert and Sullivan's new piece the principal character is that of Chancellor, who is in love with the ward of his own wards, and is obliged, therefore, to obtain his own consent to the union, and satisfy himself that he is all that can be desired. Finally he overcomes all scruples.

Gerstinger.—Marie Geistinger sails for Europe Saturday May 6th. She will carry with her nearly $40,000, the net proceeds in this country having been uniformly successful. Her Miss Praecox engagement proved very remunerative, and so did the last one at the Thalia Theatre here, where her terms were $500 a night guaranteed and a clear third of the excess over $800.

Dolaro.—Mme. Sellina Dolaro's season begins at the Bijou, on the 8th, with "Cups and Saucers," and "Not a Night." The leading man is Mr. Harry St. Maur; the eccentric, Mr. F. M. Holland; the "old woman" is Miss Zelie Mortimer, and Mr. Clinton Stuart the juvenile.

Wertheimber.—Henri Wertheimber, who, it was falsely reported, had committed suicide in Egypt, has returned to America next season, under Brooks & Dickson's management. She is to sing in English the repertoire of fifteen operas.

Levy.—Mr. Levy, the cornetist, has returned to New York, and will delight them with his playing at the Academy of Coney Island. His wife remains in Paris studying for the operatic stage.

Norcross.—Mr. Norcross Jr., has taken possession of the Germania Theatre. His opera company company open next Monday with "The Mascotte," with Mr. Carleton as Pippo. An English version of "Der Lustige Krieg" is promised. The chorus of the Standard is engaged.

Mose.—By an unfortunate printer's error, in our opening article on the editorial page, we gave the credit of the production of our cuts in the paper—not the lithographic—to the Photo-Engraving Company. It should have been to the Moss Engraving Company, who have always done all our work in the most creditable manner.

A Sympathetic Word.

DEDICATED TO CERTAIN CRITICS ON THE DAILY PRESS.

O, ye critics, how ye're worried
With your spiteful daily work,
For indeed you're sorely hurried,
And whene'er you try to shirk
You are full of apprehension
Lest some prying eye may find
In your critical brief mension
Grave mistakes of facts kind
That the public, though so lenient,
Must censure, for you see
That you fellows find convenient
When you don't know whom to praise.

Such a multitude of singers,
And of pianists such stacks,
That you wonder where the stingers,
Most find concerts quite a tax.
For you must fault your invoice
To retain your little knack,
And the paper's first edition
Must contain your positive sayings.

So you take a fuse of action
That a certainly quite neat,
And if say Lehmann
Need be made, your safe retreat
Most afford you shelter
When you sit together next
At the feast of Apollo
(To say nothing of worse host,
You can give a word to praise,
You can nod, and grin and sneer,
As you fix the fine position
Of the terms you have tried
To succeed in their ambition
In the field of more than note-role.
But, alas, that deed is morrow.
When your reviews will begin,
And you'll find out to your sorrow
That your article's too thin.
For Miss Howler wasn't present,
And Herr Stonkang don't play.
Which, of course, makes your unpleasant,
And you don't know what to say.
So, I'm sure that our profession
And our sympathy you enter
If you're bothered for your column,
You will find an early grave.

The Mozart Musical Union.

On last Wednesday evening occurred the concert of the Mozart Musical Union, in the Lexington Avenue Opera House, in Fifty-eighth street. The house was crowded in every part almost sixty-five months here, with a number of associates. The conductor is Mr. F. Panzetti, the concert-master, Mr. Carl Bergmann, and the accompanist the assistant vocalist was Signor Carlo Orlandini. The concert was a good one, and carried out an excellent programme. The large hall is a very complimentary fact, considering the very disagreeable weather. The orchestra played the overture to "Der Freischutz" and "Le Siege de Corinthe" (Rossini); the Andante from Mozart's Ninth Symphony; a Notturno, "Grieux Dance," composed by the conductor, and Gounod's Marche Funebre d'une Marionette. Besides these numbers, the string band gave the "Serenata Notturna" of Mozart, and the well-known "Minuet de" Boccherini.

The playing was reasonably good for amateur work. Of course there was a certain amount of unsteadiness, and the entire body of instruments where you quoted rhythms and catchy double runs are abundant, and false intonation is to be expected in the violin concerto on the part of the drum players were occasionally noticeable, but generally the shading and attack were highly commendable. The Mozart Andante was the most successful number from the point of view standpoint. The fantasie, by Mr. Fanciulli, showed appreciative practice, and was well rendered. The piece is pleasing and not difficult to play, and depends for its effect largely upon unexpected pauses and changes of time. It is light and pleasing, and for a drawing room minor fellows a most major chord without any apparent occasion. Mr. Fanciulli proved himself a most respectable violinist, and his concerto and drill manner He might, perhaps, have secured a more perfect ensemble by placing his desk a little to one side in order to prevent its concealing so many movements of the leader, but this is a matter of no large portion of the orchestra. The Gounod March lost seriously in effect by the slowness of the tempo taken.

Signor Orlandini contributed two numbers to an encore His singing of Mattei's "Si e scritto" and Tosti's "Ideale" were telling in taste. The recall was not exactly unanimous or emphatic, but it was well for the singer that he responded, for his rendition of the "Largo al Factotum" was certainly the most enjoyable. The voice is powerful, but throaty, and lacks variety of expression, particularly in shading; but such fire was shown in the "Largo" that the result was admirable. The "Non Piu Andrai," from "Nozze de Figaro," was still better done, and was received with the most unbounded demand of the audience. The concert did not begin till nine o'clock, but was very creditable to the society and enjoyable to the audience.

The Jersey City Philharmonic Society in "Elijah."

The performance of "Elijah" Tuesday two weeks ago, by the Jersey City Philharmonic Society, at the Academy of Music, was a very creditable to the chorus and to conductor, Mr. Louis C. Jacoby. The first part was sung entire, and the last part "cuts" of minor importance were made in the interest of time, the numbers most noticeable by their absence being the choruses, "He That Shall Endure to the End," and "But the Lord From the North Did Stir Up One."

The chorus distinguished itself throughout by promptness of attack and careful attention to shading, and by vigor and accuracy also. In the "Thanks be to God," the tempo seemed a little slow, resulting in a sluggishness which was particularly objectionable in this number, marked by Mendelssohn, "con fuoco." The chorus, "Behold! God the Lord passed by," was the finest thing of the evening and should have been encored. Occasional lack of the unaccompanied measures had not been sufficient to allow the voices to drop noticeably from the pitch. In the unaccompanied choruses, a failure to make the pianos and pianissimos soft enough was noticeable, and there was frequently apparent a sort of feeling after the pitch on the part of a portion of the voices in each group, which seemed to indicate the presence of new material in the choir that had not been thoroughly assimilated.

Mrs. F. J. Grant sang the soprano solos very beautifully. Her voice is smooth and clear, rather strong, but of not very great compass. The lower notes were often lost, and the lady has the fault of striking below and gliding up to the pitch when she has a high note to attack. Her singing of "Hear ye, Israel," was especia lly good. Miss E. Duff sang the soprano parts in the concerted music for solo voices very acceptably. Mr. Miss Lena Little was the contralto, and sang all the parts allotted to that voice except, of course, in the double quartet, where Miss H. Bixby was heard. Miss Little has many pleasing qualities Miss H. Bixby was heard. Miss Little has many pleasing qualities Miss H. Bixby was heard. Miss Little has many pleasing qualities

Boston.

MAY 1.—I can say, as the needy knife-grinder, "Story, God bless you, I've none to tell, sir." The serious half-hour, one of the musical fish, and nothing is left, save the remnants of a once fair and majestic programme.

The chief musical event (according to Fate) of the past week has been the Emma Abbott Opera Season. Various works have been given with cases which have been "marvelous," superb," "marvelous, yet true." I can speak of the singing, as a noted French general did of one of the charges of the Light Brigade, "It is magnificent, but it is not war." It was far below the thought of it, and shrewdly replied, "Success we have never seen before," and both the inquirer and his own answer have been seconded. "Such a prima donna I have never heard before." The distance between her claims and her attainments is insurmountable.

Miss Abbott has a voice of considerable compass through a lot are, counting for nothing when her peculiar manner of advertising are taken into consideration. The best work of the season has been done by the chorus, and to imitate at least a good model, but with a diligence which will one day give a very slow tempo to the "mad scene," and gave a series of gestures that suggested to Yorick the famous dancing bear. Her first effort was the "Bohemian Girl," the difference between the notes. It might be called the "Bohemian Girl" and the "Bohemian Girl," and no one would notice the other. Her staccato work is not bad point, and she can also efficiently in the upper register.

Lucy is the best singer in the troupe. How I pity the bass who's cast for Simmonds in "Lucia." He is continually invoking heaven, and the gallery gods, and the stage hands, and the prompter, and the stage military. There is but one other part in Italian opera which equally distressing. It is the patriarchal Isaiahs in no means a "and Jeremiah" in "Athalie." Let us pass on to Aida.

Castle is one of the strongholds of this peculiar troupe. He does not sing, but he has a voice, and he can act, and he proved it in the part of Don Cesar de Bazan. Farlow is good and bad by turns; possibly he is in a transition state and under some influence, for he is not up to the level of his associates.

And now, to speak of musical matters. The Apollo Club gave a fine concert in Music Hall on Wednesday evening. The programme was the subject, but the selection of the programs, which contained some important numbers, was the fault. Let us not be too severe on the musical concerns of the club.

It began with Brosch's "Salamis" (given with orchestral accompaniment and ended with the "Hallelujah" chorus from Handel's great composer. I think the former work is by far the most natural and effective. It is a fine piece of writing, and was well rendered. Those which the "Song of Triumph" was given, and the "Hallelujah" chorus the brutal hilarity of the Roman Grand Triumph, or even the more sensible. The hero rises of cymbals and a clash, or something equally enough. The soldiers of Caius went before the clarinet singing might be the Salvation Army, and the "Hallelujah" was the Amen. Perhaps wish of the words interpreted would, however, help it.

A fine part song, by Mr. Parker, was rendered by the club in the second number. It is a fine combination of harmony and melody, and, if I am not mistaken, is the first time that the composer has appeared on a programme.

Following this Mr. Hay sang a baritone solo with good tone. Storch's "Serenade" was the only selection of importance.

Now followed the chief work of all on interest, "The Summons to Battle," by Mr. Parker. The composer has written a fine work in the orchestral parts, though I believe, from the manuscript, a confuse shade of disappointment. The chorus work is not up to that of last work, almost fitful for good work, and "Gideon" is not to be taught, the resemblance between the two is striking. Not, to be sure, in tones or phrases, but in general effect. Rosebuds and half-blown pansies only remove the resemblance temporarily. In the "Summons" the orchestration is more varied, and the instrumentation of Professor Paine to have inserted his name in the list of authors of the peerless, but to open such a noble vein of work to such a low poem as this is a blessing. Anthony on a kitchen, or "Cleopatra" compared with a Kreppy cracker. The work was not as well executed as some of the previous numbers, but it is quite difficult to say why it was not good.

The second part of the programme consisted of works which have received in previous letters the highest praise which I can bestow upon them.

The Apollo sing as no other club in America, or (to my knowledge) anywhere else can sing. I wish that some of your Knickerbocker acquaintance could imagine the glory of their perfect attack and finish. New York. I assure you it would be a needful treat beyond anything that could be given you. Not that the work was perfect, but that the light was refined and recognized in the performance of a perfect Aria, but the voices seem somewhat jaded and worn.

One more concert and I am done.

Professor Carl Baermann has given his first piano recital here this week. He is a pianist of many excellent qualities, and a musician to his fingers' ends. He is not in any sense a player who thrusts his individuality upon the composer, but he is not lacking in individuality. His performance is somewhat cold, but it is that of a musical worth. In the Sonata Appassionata he gave a reading which I would commend as a model in many respects, and which was unsurpassed by one this week. He was broad and noble, and delicate and graceful when the work called for these qualities. His technique is of the highest order. Indeed in working up his climaxes, and in the use of the pedal, he seems to do in the first movement, of which the supposed stretto at the close, and the second movement, are the most beautiful.

His performance of the "Carneval Scenes" (Schumann), was very fine and highly enjoyable. He took the work at a good pace, and generally found it, inserting filling into prominence the general hilarity of the piece. His rendering of the Chopin numbers was also very good, except that he did not add to the delicacy of the work by a proper use of his displays of pure technique and virtuosity, such as Liszt's arrangement of Jean Paul, or of the Hungarian Rhapsody.

The recital of the concert was Mrs. Poznanski, who sang with full appreciation of the work which she undertook, and with a voice of a lacked something of richness and power. Her selection was a good one for such a showman's "All Night I Lie Dreaming."

The week promises to be busy one, from a musical point of view. But after this we are to have our Operatic Festival. Opera. In Mechanics' Building is a fact for which we cannot be too grateful. It is a hard task for the horse, and the singers will have to strain their voices to fill the space.

I see that your fulminations against the Symphony Concerts of Wachtes are fruitless, and says that they are "only evasive." Well, a poor excuse is better than none. Can you not find a better one for him, or are?" I believe that sentiment is strong enough to save me.

DRAMATIC.

MAY 1.—We have just been visited by Mr. Augustin Daly's "Passing Regiment." It was sent through the New York Academy of Music in its metrical audience. The piece is a well known one, so light and thin as the boy balloon that sways as the end of a string. Like it, however, it is very showy. Without scenery, then, but it possesses childish melody. Plot it has none, and its characters are suggested, rather than clearly described.

There is just a shade of humor in the dialogue, but it leaves no lasting impression. It has nevertheless plenty of picturesque incident loosely strung together, and it has the "military." The cast would carry it if it had no other merit. All the actors suddenly go to see it, with their sisters, their sweethearts and their wives, to say nothing of the irrepressible boys who always follow the same bands. Of the people in the cast, Miss Ada Rehan was the best known here. She made a favorable impression, though she is far from being a cultivated act ress; she is, however, graceful, and has a certain girlish grace that does not smell entirely of the footlights.

With the exception of Mrs. Gilbert and Mr. Henry M. Pitt, the company was not particularly strong, though, perhaps, good enough for the piece. Mr. Daly's wife was one of the dramatic lions of Byron Hall's house last Winter, but her adaptation of the name of Mongel the Bletchley ability which she showed in the part of Lady Gay Spanker in her mother's entertainment is not apparent in her. She has not the manner. Mr. Lester Wallack concluded his three weeks' engagement at the Grand Opera House on Saturday night. With the exception of the last three nights of his stay, he played Kint here in Brooklyn, the hero who is the hero of the piece, and who is the hero of the piece, and who is by does he not write another play in which the hero will be a man who has experienced the brass and colds of six decades. He might have a touch in Lord. Wrong, however, of the city, and an old bachelor of sixty, who is about to marry Clara Kellogg Clement, whose voice is not what it was when she was a young woman.

The evergreen Lester would have appeared well in "My Awful Dad," in which the limbs of his art were painfully apparent. In this unfortunate farce of three acts he is merely absurd from the cover, and the sources of the well-known dramatic tricks-and of his monotonous elocution. The piece is not worth discussing, and Mr. Wallack will be fortified as far as he goes, but he has not the power to cut an old hat as a concert does." His resources, though, fit him superbly. Neil Burgess came back to Daly's Theater last week with the "Widow Bedott," in which he gives a funny performance that accords of the Dancing Academy. Nothing more need be said, and he tries to excite an interest in the piece.

Tony Pastor was at the Howard Athenæum with his topical songs and his variety troupe. He came out in his own three curtain box through his a pair of aniseeny eyeballs. We leaned poor Barry Craig was not with him. He is dead, and we have yet to perform a similar office for John Jackson, a black-face man, who was there as well as one, and the last named was a native of this city. He sang "Uncle Daniel Retired" at Canterbury Hall, Lambeth Company at the Park this week, with Mr. De Bellecille in place of Mr. Farnie. The latter is ill, and has been for some time. Let us hope that he will be better soon and the drama saved.

Miss Rhea will be at the Boston Museum, and we hope to say before the conclusion of the engagement something about her handsome face. She will appear in two new parts at Hooley's, Bedouin, in Much Ado About Nothing, and Pauline in the Lady of Lyons, and she is to be tried. The prospects seem not merry, and, of course, it does not apply to the Boston Museum, which is always good. Miss Rhea's engagement is for one week only. Mr. Lotta has left the Park. Mr. Lotte has the "Black Crook" boldly, the dairy "Pinfore," and the Harrisons the "Mikado" and "Pinafore" at the Boston Museum. Nothing very exciting fresh, you see, but then the Spring has been rather backward.

Chicago.

MAY 1.—The musical events of the past week have been numerous, rather than important. The Boston blacks have made a splendid "hoax run" at the Grand. Their repertoire—"Pinafore," "Mikado's" "Pirates of Penzance," four times, and "Gilberto" once. Whitney left for New York on Saturday, and Mr. Hamilton, the Boston manager, will remain here for a week or two. Mr. Whitney has been very successful, and, for details, that I have ever seen here. There are still too many excuses granted, and there is a lack of system in the general exercising. My position at the performances has been at the very rear of the parquette, and I have been unable to hear the singers with any degree of satisfaction. Mr. Whitney has been very courteous to the Press, and Mr. Hamilton was not with doing by his company. "Olivette" will be the next, and "Pinafore" will be given a week's run during the season.

On Monday evening there was a concert for the benefit of the Foundling Asylum, at Hooley's Theater, under the direction of Mr. Hooley and Mr. Herbert Gould, the organist. The chief features of the evening were Signor Brocolini and Miss Hinman.

On Tuesday afternoon the Chicago Orchestra gave its fourth symphony series cause to an end. The programme rendered the Andante from Beethoven's Symphony in C minor, the Overture to Mozart's Magic Flute, Raff's first symphony, an arrangement of Rossini's "Cheriffi" for piano, organ, and string orchestra, and the Overture to Weber's "Der Freischutz." Mr. Hamerik conducted the "Magic Flute," and the Andante and Adagio from Raff's piano quintet, Op. 107. As you will see, the programme was unusually strong, and was well rendered. This is for the case of variety. On the present occasion I was fortunately prevented from hearing more than a few bars of the "Der Freischutz" overture, owing to the crowded condition of the house. The song quartet went very well.

The soloists were Leach, Pellegra, Allen and Erdman. The latter was Miss Hopekirk. The Raff quintet I did not hear. The arrangement of the Rossini overture for piano, organ, and string orchestra was by Mr. Gould, and was well received. The piano part was rendered by Mr. Gould himself. Axe Marie, the chief composition was rendered by Miss Hopekirk, and was received with great applause. Miss Hopekirk showed in itself a ample testimony to the value of this work of Mr. Leeb's and of her ability.

On Thursday evening there was a concert given in Central Music Hall by the Apollo Club, assisted by Miss Emma Thursby and Mr. Whitney, and this has been the most successful concert of the season. The club sang Sir Arthur Sullivan's "The Martyr of Antioch," and Mendelssohn's "Lauda Sion." All three in place and origin accompaniment, the papers being rendered by Mr. Gilbert. The singing was very good, but not the critic's best work.

Miss Thursby took appeared in Rieck's "Echo Song" and two songs by Mr. Gilbert. She was making a very good voice and, to tell the truth, sang better than she looked. Her appearance is not in her favor, and her dress was not calculated to improve matters. Her singular features of the greatest of your numerous eyes too near. she will not do on concert stages. Mr. Whitney sang Rubinstein's "Asra" and Gilbert's "Asra," both are played her vocals and accompanied herself in two little songs. Mr. Whitney's voice is a fine one, and he sang very well. P. J.

The pianist of the occasion was Mr. Constantine Sternberg, who played Chopin's Polonaise in A flat, Op. 53, and Liszt's "Rhapsodie Espagnole," for piano, by Scharp, by Schumann, and something else. I've forgotten it. I have had occasion to speak of Mr. Sternberg as a good, and, under a pressing supervision, as that I would be glad to hear him as selections from his repertoire. He is a pianist of the first class, and has a fine technique. His playing is brilliant, and he will soon, in my estimation, be a musician of the first rank. The program was of minimum length, played in the Auditorium, and the hall was not arranged so as to seem comfortable.

On Thursday evening there was a concert at Central Music Hall by the "Mozart Society of Bethlehem," under the direction of Mr. Sullivan Brown and Mr. "Samuel Society Longmore." No preliminary announcement was made of the programme, and I was unable to be present in the evening.

The operators were all Sprig with curiosity to know what these curious old pastoral tunes were. Mr. Longmore explained that they were at once that it was a German singing society of forty-five active members, and that they had been in existence for forty-three years. Not the late Saengerfest. Mr. Schmidt was formed, I understand, at Bethlehem, Pa., and the music was rendered in a manner which showed careful study. The first number was Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise." In the first passages they did very well, but the fourth passages were not sung with the proper expression. The work of "Calliope's mediocre" is an allowable term. But if this is to be said of the chorus work, what shall be said of the soloists? I refer to the tenor soloist. It was I admit that the term is extreme—it was simply a disgrace to the society that such a singer should be allowed to sing in public. The tenor was not only unmusical, but only unfortunate sing in which it stops playing.

Mr. Schmidt appeared as a solo pianist, and played Mendelssohn's G minor concerto, with orchestral accompaniment. He played with fair technique, but was unintelligent and mechanical. He is not a virtuoso, but there is probably ground pedestal to be. If he could direct as well as he can play, he would be a valuable man. The vocal selections were by Mr. Schmidt himself, Mr. Broderick and Mrs. Rebecca Baker, which, in comparison with the society work, sounded prosaic.

On Wednesday evening there was a violin concert at the First M. E. Church, but as the tickets furnished the press required an "aisle" of the church, and as the audience was of the superior kind, as exemplified by the door-to-door man, who had no ticket, and I haven't since sent for and about it.

On Thursday evening Mrs. Arnold-Cobb gave a very pleasant entertainment of readings in English, German and French; appropriate, and musical numbers were furnished by Mr. George R. Carpenter and Mr. Liebling. Mr. Liebling played with his usual ease and taste, but he is plainly out of practice. Mrs. Carpenter sang two songs, by Rubinstein, and Schumann's "Spring Night." Mrs. Carpenter is one of our most cultivated amateurs, and I am glad to say that I have heard her often, and has learnt a rich pleasure from her a vibrato, but she has also a fine voice and much musical feeling.

I believe this exhausts the list for the present. FIDE CHORUS.

MAY 1.—Dramatically, the week was very barren. At Hooley's there has been no alleged "comic opera" raised. "The Jolly Backers," which is prescribed by everybody the very worst yet. Musically and dramatically it is a miserable production, and it is a wonder that it was ever produced. Its name should be rescinded, the script run in the flames and never a letter to the paper, in which he demands "fair play," and says that the affair is only an "amusement" anyway. The playing of the voices and orchestra nearly a century containing the comedic pranks of all the poor performances that I have ever heard. The "Jolly Backers" is a disgrace to the dramatic criticism of the country, and the sooner it is withdrawn the more we see it, but couldn't understand it. Probably I am one of those persons who cannot take a joke without a club.

At Haverly's "My Partner" has been running to a good business for the week, and will be succeeded next week by "Our Boys."

The "World" has been at McVicker's all the week.

Next week I will try and behave myself. FOTAN.

Chelsea, Mass.

MAY 1.—Hagen's British Minstrels appeared at the Academy, April 24th, to a small house.

Thursday evening, April 27th, John T. Raymond (personal "Fresh," in "Colonel Sellers," with a good company, played to a fine night, and but very much entertained audience.

Saturday evening, April 29th, Miss Helen P. Hood, a promising young organist of this city, and a pupil of H. J. Lang, gave a very creditable organ concert at Tremont Temple. Boston, conducted by Mr. Lang and Miss E. Hungerford Allen, organist.

Next Monday evening, Mr. J. B. Field, the Manager of the Academy, will give a benefit benefit, when the talented Tourbadours will perform on the Brook.

Brooklyn.

MAY 5.—The only important musical attraction the past week was the Philharmonic Society's concert on Wednesday evening, together with the soloists a company appeared in "I Barbiere" at the Academy, before a fairly large audience. The performance was not up to the standard of the Philharmonic Society's concerts, and was not given with much spirit. Mme. Gerster, who was heartily received, gave a splendid performance, while the tenor (whose name I forget) was a good share of well received. The balance of the company was only fair.

The Philharmonic Society's concert, with the exception of a few new numbers, was a repetition of the concert given in New York some until next Fall. The Kennedy Family will give a concert of Songs of Scotland on the evening of May 15th. This will be their first appearance in Brooklyn.

The Tabernacle Episcopal Church, in the Eastern District, is without's organist, and the position is open to competition for the next three months. The facts are brief, Mr. W. S. Bates, a wealthy merchant of Brooklyn, has presented the church organ to the church, and placed in charge some of money out of the interest being the engagement of a first-class organist. Mr. Bates has also given the church a chime of bells, which will be placed in the tower of the church. Several other prominent members, has withdrawn from the church that he with Mr. Bates's gift to the church. The affair has caused considerable local excitement.

The Park, Mme. Fay Templeton and her opera company are doing a fine business this week, and will no doubt make a rousing benefit. displays good vocal ability and shows a fair share of histrionic talent. Mr. Scott's company at the Novelty Theater is not doing well, and one of the best seen in this city while the other members of the company are not worthy of praise. Next week the Vokes Family in Fun in a Fog and Mr. Scott's company in Pinafore.

The Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences at Historical Hall they appeared Monday in "Cinderella at School," much to the amusement of a large audience. Entertainments of this character will be given here in the week. Mrs. Mac Lillian Olcott, her first appearance Rehearsal, Tuesday night, Fanny Davenport to follow.

Next week will be a busy one for the theatrical and operating situations, writers by Mr. Bartley Campbell, with a burning play, "The Galley Slave," Miss Fanny Davenport in Fedora, and Mr. Lester Wallack in Rosedale. Mr. Lester Wallack in Rosedale. Mr. Lester Wallack in Rosedale.

in the usual quiet manner for an audience, who roared with laughter at the interpretation of the versatile Yankee from the rural districts. The support was good, but the orchestra were as weak in their accompaniments as they were in number few.

Many of our people are going to Gotham next week, to the Festival, and I know, too, that a glance at the program awakens a sigh of envy in the soul of your devoted servant. HOUSE.

Hartford, Conn.

MAY 1. A mere trifle, and that a gem, to mention in regard to music during the past week. This was the exceedingly fine concert, for the benefit of Mrs. Bartlett, at the Asylum Hill Congregational Church, on last Friday night. The program was of a very high character, and the artist to meet the different needs of all present; in fact, the different numbers were so well chosen that it would be unfair to single out any one but to be received. Mrs. Bartlett's voice is a rare one, regarded as one of the best lady violinists in the country, gave an exceedingly fine rendition of the salon piece by Wieniawski, and Mr. Bartlett's delicious, which called forth professional applause. Miss Bartlett gave a solo on the harp, and was encored. Mr. Bartlett's solo on the violin, and by Mme. L. Lehr, Mrs. Martin and Mr. Bassett were also of the highest order.

The past week in the dramatic line has been made memorable by the debut of Miss Lillian Grant, a young lady of Brooklyn, N. Y. She appeared at the Opera House in the role of Pauline, in the play of the Lady of Lyons. Naturally, she was very much embarrassed on making the first night, but she showed herself to be an opponent of the highest dramatic talent, and bound to win favor and praise by her conscientious skill. Her pronunciation is very clear and distinct, and her subdued tones are very pleasing to the ear. Her support in the play of the Lady of Lyons" is a good one, and all deserve credit for their presentations of dramatic art, but Miss Grant is the star, and the audience knows it. Not so with Mr. Sothern, who appeared here on Monday; afterwards, she was never inclined to rant and never stagey as those parts where any exhibition would be natural. Mr. Sothern made his first appearance as Dartbrook in "Bigamy," with even better results than in the character of Lord Dundreary. He was received with unbounded applause at the close of the play, and was recalled before the curtain.

Anthony and Ellis' "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Company played to full houses on Saturday afternoon and evening.

MR. T. F. Seward, of New York, will give a free lecture upon the Tonic Sol-fa system at Unity Hall, on the evening of May 4th.

Maggie Mitchell plays "Little Savage" at the Opera House on Thursday night. Minnie Hauk as Marguerite in "Faust," with Signor Campanini as Mephistopheles, and the Emma Thursby Company, "Wotto" on Saturday afternoon and evening. AMOS.

MAY 1.—City Hall, Jean Jacques, manager. Buffalo Bill, in "Prairie Waif," played to a large and appreciative audience, April 26, despite the fact that a circus was here the same night.

Maggie Mitchell in "Little Savage," April 27, and although the night was quite stormy, played to a good house and gave general satisfaction.

Anna Dickinson closed her course here, 28, playing "Hamlet" to a small house. Any comment is out of question, as the lady is not on the American stage." Any attempt at criticism on her work in this line is no act were a waste of effort, and we can only regret that a woman of brains and genius, capable of doing such good work in her own work in her own field, should preside in the fatal imitate of attempting to play Shakespeare. ARGUS.

Coming: The Parlocas, May 1; Lotta, Albert, May 4; "The Chimes of Normandy," instead of "Mantana." MONTE CRISTO.

Winsted, Conn.

APRIL 29.—Frank Mordaunt played in "Faded Edelweiss" to a fair-sized audience at the Opera House the 11th. Sol. Smith Russell in "Edgewood Folks" on the 13th.

Coming attractions: George Holland in "The Colonel," May 1st; Prof. Wizard to present "Patience," in character, the latter part of May. Mrs. Barry Howe, the best soprano in town, is to receive the benefit. ORPHEUS.

APRIL 22.—Music Hall—Concerts by Mr. Lunt, 20th, in "Forget Me-Not," to large house. Kinsley Brothers' "Black Crook," 21st, to crowded house. Sidney Kinsley's Comedy Company, 24th, in "Among the Breakers." Mr. Kinsley is a native of Woonsocket, and has many friends here this season, 28th, in "Fresh, the American," to good business. Mr. and Mrs. Mayo, of Providence, Albany, N. Y.

Albany, N. Y.

MAY 1.—The "Colonel" drew a large house at the Leland, Monday and last night, employing the entire company in the presentation of the comedy of an old man of fashion who has the largest house of the season—standing room only.

If R. Rhin's Opera Company had been in existence in the days of Rameau, "Zaïre," and "Bonne Maman," at Music Hall Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, they would have been received with open arms. As it was, the audiences of Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at Music Hall say that they enjoyed the performances of the Rhin Company, but knowing ones imagine that her sudden cool hail something to do with her cold reception. The Albany public is very conservative, and will not fall fancies from by their nests.

The Rhin Company has had a poor performance in your business on Tuesday Hall on Friday. Miss Rhin's voice is not suited to the same place the following night. She played Ophelia.

To-day, Saturday Matinee, "Pinafore" at the Leland; also Tuesday and Wednesday. Seats are not to be had. "Sort of Posse."

Grand Opera House, Lotta in "Musette."

Gerard Tom Thumb and troupe are to be here next week.

The San Francisco Minstrels are booked for Tuesday last, Thursday night, and Barry & Fay's Company for Saturday night.

After a long progression of unruly seven weeks, partly under the management of A. S. Barker, of Troy, and partly under the new and trouge proceed "Patience" at the Leland on the 1st to an exceedingly large and select audience. The opera has been presented by a very fine opera company, and none present more than the assistant conductor, Mr. Barnum, who has been the life and soul of the company who succeeded in getting into the hall. Mr. Barnum is a better man than cane. Patience, as created by Mme Rita Sosman, fully justified the line of admiration and buttons, and was received with enthusiastic outbreaking its success. She sang remarkably well, and was cheered to the echo. Mr. Barnum's Bunthorne was excellent, and he was received here, and he ebi concert, which was attended by 600 people, some of the local talent took part and gave a good program very creditably.

The Zither concert at Lesbini's Theatre closed April 30 with Paul's Opera Company, who gave a week in good audiences.

APRIL 28.—A company styling themselves the "Madison Square Company," gave a performance of "Hazel Kirke" at Armer Hall on April 24, which was marred by screaming a large audience. Very few knew who were in the cast, if characters until after they were seated in the theatre. Miss Bella Pateman, who appeared as Hazel, and Mr. Salisbury, as Dolly Dutton, proved themselves clever actresses. Mr. Alexander, as Arthur Carringford, was a failure; Philemon Green was excellently represented by Leonard Lawrence. The rest of the company was so-so. It is a wonder that the old mill withstood the terrific rending of Dunstable's Mill, Mr. F. B. Hughes, who lent the company the use of it.

APRIL 22.—An interesting testimonial concert was given Prof. Charles Fradel last Tuesday evening at College Hall. The work presented an audience composed of the best appreciators of good music in the city, and the program was a fine one. It consisted of a few of his own compositions, viz: a duo for violin and piano, a violin solo and a quartet for strings. The latter was the work which recently gained the Professor the $300 prize offered by the Musical Club. The composition displayed an easy familiarity on the part of the composer, with the various instruments for which he had written, and the use of strong, and considerable original effects. The performance by each of the artists, Professor Fradel, Messrs. Schmidt, Heindl and Hahn, of their respective works was the best kind of discriminating testimonial that could be accorded to the merits of the deserving Professor. Kopp, who is fresh from her studies in Europe. This young lady will be heard in a piano recital at Pike's Opera House, and in her singing at the concert Tuesday night, she showed that she possessed a voice distinguished by sympathetic quality, and a style that was artistic, but not stiff, for an encore and a full, rich and flexible one. Her selections much character expression. I think Miss Kopp will be heard one of our most popular singers. Mr. Tom Sullivan, Miss Daniel and Mr. Meyers, Schneider, Burck, Jacobsohn and Brand assisted at the concert.

A number of prominent gentlemen of this city, friends of Lieutenant Ward Nichols, gave him a complimentary dinner at the St. Nicholas last Wednesday evening, in order to show their appreciation of the work he has accomplished in the cause of art in our city. The occasion was a very pleasant one.

The Valeri Family began an engagement at Pike's Opera House on Opera House last Monday night. They have played their old repertoire of "Battle of the Kilkenny," "Swiss Bell Ringers," "Fun in a Village," "Wrong Man in the Right Place," to good houses all the week. On Wednesday night, April 26, the Valeri Family presented a new piece, extravaganza entitled, "Ten Thousand Francs," which is their own property, and which they say has never been performed anywhere. The piece was written by their manager, Mr. Tom Sullivan, who played all their characters. The play has but one scene, and represents a ruined castle in the mountains of Switzerland. The performance was opened by Mr. Wright of this city, who sang a number consisting of forty minutes, and there are quite a number of verses to the song. The audience seemed to give the piece a fair chance, and the Valeri Family have since played to solid very nightly.

Haverly's Opera Co appeared at Haverly's Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights in "The Snake Charmer," and to very good houses. The company is a good one, and will be welcomed when it honors us for Monday, did not play on account of the illness of Miss Kopp, owing to an improvisation sick. But the pieced beverly a big cast when she did present herself on the Piano. Miss Kopp will appear in concert this evening, and at to-day's matinee.

Barlow's Minstrels, at Pike's Opera House, has played all this week at the Grand Opera House to good houses and fair performances. The newspapers on the morning after its first performance, signalized it as one of the mediocre productions of the season. The press is a powerful public, and this verdict was reiterated throughout the week. The company and the play advertised to appear at the Grand next week, which find something to do with the hostility shown them.

The Lyceum Bureau of Music, of Cincinnati, Ohio, on Wednesday night, last gave a fine concert at Pike's Opera House for the little child. Her physician stated that she had lost one child two years ago, by neglecting for the one to be saved. The following artists: Miss Mary Drake took Miss Clarissa's place in "The Two Orphans."

Miss Drake is a pupil of Professor Fradel.

Charles L. Davis appears at Buckeye Grand, week, in "An Accident," and Gabriel Ahearn will play "Humpty Dumpty" at the Grand next week.

Jacksonville, Ill.

APRIL 26.—If I believed there was another Rural School orderly of having no glee club, I would not write this letter. But there is a live seven purpose of giving Gospel songs and Sacred music, nothing about the one here. The idea is good, if not original with Grace Church, and the recital concert given in the church last evening was enough to deserve a repeat in Music. Its name, Grace S S Orchestra, and its members, the Sunday School of Grace Church, organized to support children's music in the singing, praising and thanksgiving we have learned it up to the plane of worship. Having the required compass and tone, they set to work to study the principles of music, and accomplish something worthy the name of music. Under the direction of this excellent Society, the children have learned to sing in a way quite from infancy to manhood. Their concert on Tuesday evening was a most delightful entertainment. Having the required number, intelligence of the business managers, and the proper conductor, the result was excellently filled. The orchestra includes several good pieces: E. G. Beecher, violin, leader 1st Violin; Miss Lizzie C. Jeffries, concert soloist; Otto Kriech, violinist, and the Sanderson Bros. It is hoped and expected that the next concert will be given in the new church edifice when a church.

Springfield, Ill.

APRIL 28.—The amusements offered to Springfield theatre-goers this week were "Virginius" and "The Colleen Bawn." The former on Tuesday and Wednesday nights, and a variety show Friday night. McCullough's manager asked more for the former than it was worth, and the result was slim audiences. "The Stranglers" come May 4th, and "The Two Orphans" May 5th. Both companies will undoubtedly play to full houses. Ben Hur" will appear here about the middle of May, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Lieut. Wallace is expected to be present.

Miss Ethel Lynton, violinist pupil of Professor Fradel, closed a course of Holmes's concerts, "Beethoven Symphonies," "Mendelssohn" "Musical Humoresque" and Kontski's "Awakening of the Lion." Mr. W. H. Sherwood was the soloist and played the Beethoven concerto in E minor, from Kullak, and a Nocturne by Chopin. In the latter he displayed a delicacy of touch and a sympathetic quality of tone which Dionysius was the superior.

Also, to begin at the beginning, the overture, "Tannhäuser," was handily played. The tempos at the opening were a little too slow, and from beginning to end it was a struggle. The leader, Mr. Waldauer, would like Theodore Thomas's baton for a week, or a drum-stick or a brass-horn, and it was altogether by the conductor's baton that the orchestra was kept together. The overture was correctly rendered, and it could hardly be believed that it was the same orchestra that the Symphonie was most artistically given, and the loud applause accorded was fully deserved. In the Symphonie Mr. Sherwood's work was of the most passably well done, of the Humoresque and the "Awakening of the Lion," the majority of the new people in the city. Mr. W. H. Sherwood, who came all the way from Boston to play for us, is a pianist of the first rank, although his selections from Kullak did not call forth great excitement. The Symphonie and Mr. Sherwood's work divided himself and he, aside on the grotesque order, while the nocturne is very nice and altogether a selection of a pianist who can play well. Vocal Course to it and arrange a quartet as a sort of chorus for my Lord Bishop to sing to.

The Quartet was the most difficult of the three, and here a whole the admirable select and finger-action of Mr. Sherwood's came in. Before and after the concert the gentleman was quite favored by the leading musicians of the city, a thing which is rarely done. I can assure you, as but few artists are ever treated decently. If four or five local musicians are ever polite that is all that can be expected. In Mr Sherwood's case he was the guest of honor, and was the lion of the occasion in the city. Mr. A. Beck, the musical critic of the Illinois State Register, obtained a tribute of respect to the late Theodore Kullak, the eminent teacher and composer, from the pen of Mr. W. H. Sherwood, which was published in yesterday's Sunday's Republican.

"La Zingara," soprano solo (Bohemia), was Miss Lizzie Sanderson's selection. This lady, I admit, is an accomplished musician and at one time had a fine voice, but in its present state it is unsatisfactory. Whether she knows how to avoid the breaks and did well enough, but was unsatisfactory nevertheless to the audience. The applause was weak and came altogether from friends. Taken as a whole the Union has done nobly, and if efforts were successful. Next season they will be in a position to secure artists and be able to stand it too.

The Philharmonic Society will give the second monthly of twenty pages. Mr Goldbeck is a positive writer, and much of it is very good. The work in typographic appearance is not handsome, there being too much display type on all its pages, and looks more like a newspaper circular, with so many lines of big type all over the reader and hardly a page of solid matter. The publication office is in Steinway Hall. The music, and is good enough to be worth the price—a dollar and a half a year.

The Globe-Democrat, a big daily, came out of its Police Court report, ren to the Musical Union's concert, and this is what heard of the concert: "The Musical Union gave a concert last night, assisted by a limited number, a piano solo by Miss Kate Chittenden, consisting of 'Barcarolle' in G minor, 'Nocturne' Grand Octave Etude in E flat, and 'Polonaise' in A flat, all by Chopin. Miss Chittenden played the music well."

Last Saturday evening, the third grand musical soirée of the Beethoven Conservatory of Music, at Conservatory Square, will take place at Memorial Art Hall. A fine program has been arranged, and the following artists will participate: Professor Carl Faelten, Mr. Carl Sentz, M. E. Church will take place. The best singers and musicians in the city will be present. The Beethoven Conservatory of Music is the only of a local character. Nevertheless, some of them deserve especial mention.

Mr. Jerome Zeller and company played a Quintette Cour in four because the poet week at Pope's Theatre. This is Mr. O'Neill's first appearance in this city, and his performance of the part was a pleasant one. The company is very good, and all deserve encouragement for what they do.

At the Academy of Music last week Haverly's Opera Company held the boards in the play of "The Colonel." It is a "get off" on soldiers' home, but it is not a bad one, and is well supported, although some nights the house was crowded.

The bill at Pope's will be as follows: Grand Opera Quartet Tuesday night; Miss Kate Forsyth, Irish comedy. We shall see Pope's Theatre second week of the O'Neill Company, and will play the Fashion. Haverly's Academy of Music second week, "Lost Arden." People's Theatre, Hyde and Behman's Specialty Company, in a week of variety.

Minneapolis, Minn.

APRIL 23.—The closing concert of the Philharmonic Club was given here last week, with one concert in St. Paul, and one also in Stillwater on the following days. The concert in Minneapolis was somewhat late in the Fall, consequently they drew crowded houses at two concerts in this city, and one in St. Paul. The Club has been organized for two years, and has given a concert every month in the Philharmonic Concert Course of the four concerts in question those the Club has given in this city, and the concert in St. Paul, the Philharmonic Concert Course has, and so the club was to give an enthusiastic welcome she is very entertaining, and has a voice of much power, but is not yet trained to control her tremors. Of the club there is very little new to say, as since leaving the city they have been heard here so often that their merits are well known. Their concert was a most delightful one, a great variety and tone, which it might and ought to be with the material constituting it. Let that one of Mr. Schultz's compositions be the last one they play, their ability willing to support them, that they are ambitious, and contrive to find new and better music than they have yet presented to the people of New York or Boston.

The fourth concert given during the week by the same talent, assisted by Miss Kopp, was given in Stillwater on Friday night. Mr. Hahn, director of the Mendelssohn Club, who departs for Europe in July of this year, to complete his musical studies, is a most enthusiastic, and deserved recognition of his earnest efforts to give the people of Minneapolis the opportunity to hear good music. He has done much for the musical interests of this city, and his departure will be a loss to many places, who play with an equal or large worthy of New York music. Mr. Hahn will be missed by the people of New York.

Robson & Crane have just closed a three nights' engagement here, and left every one laughing heartily.

Burlington, Iowa.

APRIL 29.—For the past year the interests in musical art have been widened in this city by the formation of a club which is to be a permanent feature. My little paragraph about voice-teaching in a recent letter to the Courier has called forth a host of letters, and I am glad to say that the subject is not dead, and so be it as a man of some emergence, as well as an excellent musician, I am in hopes he will give us a few more concerts before he leaves us. Among the talented arrangements with Prof. Clark for the production of the "Naiad Queen" by the Cecilian Society, which is to be given in May. Other composers are Mr. Hamilton S. Mathews, who will appear on Thursday evening. Lena Fell, of Chicago, was the organist. The other music was furnished by the Burlington Orchestra, Prof. Clark.

APRIL 28.—Barlow, Wilson, Primrose and West, the champions minstrels, played to a crowded house at the Grand Opera house last Monday night. The performance considerably above the average. APRIL 29.—The Governor's Guard, Company E, Aiken Troupe, have closed a week's entertainments, giving "Ticket-of-Leave Man," "Maud Muller," and "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room" to good houses.

The great exponent of modern melodies, Oscar Wilde, drew quite a large audience last Wednesday night. He has been too thoroughly reviled already to call for any expression at the time.

The Lincoln Dramatic Club, in a local comedy, was greeted by a large and enthusiastic audience last night.

There has lately come among us a Mr Carroll, from Buffalo, which has delivered several lectures on "Physical Culture," "Heroics," "American Americans" and a "Red-clad Issues," which is smacked as a "Red-clad Issues," which is smacked as a "Red-clad Issues," which is smacked as Detroit, Mich.

Last week was eminently brilliant in musical circles. Tuesday evening the Detroit Musical Society gave the third grand concert of the season, under the direction of Prof. Fred. A. Stock, assisted by Mr. Bischoff, pianist, but the chief part of the program, given in the Detroit Opera House, with orchestra, Mr. Jedenson's "Rondo Brillante," Op. 126, was the best rendered number on the program.

Wednesday evening Mr. J. C. Batchelder gave the second in his series of five organ recitals. Mr. Batchelder's playing is what might be expected from a fine, able, unremitting work in natural talent and scholarly instincts. He returns to Europe this Summer for further study.

Thursday evening the Harmonic Society gave an unusually good concert, and Friday evening Miss Nellie Stanley, pupil of Prof. J. H. Hahn, gave an enjoyable piano recital. Now Cole's playing is strong and delightful.

Saturday evening Mr. William H. Sherwood of Boston, gave a piano recital, which attracted the musical element of the city, as the recital had not been in Detroit for two years, and during the interval we seem to have improved in taste, and in the love for brilliancy, and while the fine technique showed to advantage, still the music had no need for the technique. The audience, naturally, were highly delighted. The program was made up of the Beethoven sonata, Op. 2, No. 3; Liszt's "Love-Death," from the opera of "Tristan and Isolde;" Scarlatti's "Capriccio;" Chopin's Nocturne, Op. 27, No. 2; Liszt's "Rhapsodie Espagnole;" the closing number a Mozart-Kullak pastiche and Mr. Sherwood's own "Concert-Caprice a Mozart." Thursday, May 4, Mr. F. A. Apel gives a pupils' recital. X. Y.

April 28.—Charles E. Ford's English Opera Company occupied the Lucy this week, Bellamy Storer's "Peep o' Day" being the opening bonne. The performance on Monday night was fine, and the principals were applauded to the echo. Miss Ford's singing of "Kathleen Mavourneen" was especially tender and pathetic. Miss Mancelle." E. F. Keokuk, Iowa.

May 1.—The ever popular Mitchell's Pleasure Party played "Our Gladiators" last evening at the Keokuk. The company is a good one, with but one exception, and the piece is highly mirth-provoking.

The celebrated magician, Thos. W. Keene, was greeted by a large audience at the Keokuk, Saturday evening. Macbeth" was the bill.

Coming: Miss Jane Coombs, Coffree Morgansen and Pastor's Gigantean Minstrels.

Murfreesboro, Tenn.

May 1.—The Madison Square Hazel Kirke Company No. 5, under the management of Mr. W. G. Hunter, Jr., appeared at the Opera House, the 28th, to one of the largest audiences of the season. They come the season at Rosseville, Ky., the 4th.

A grand concert will be given by the Murfreesboro Female Musical Club, the 9th. Will report in my next a full account of its progress.

April 29.—I have not a word to say in reference to the season that there has been very little interesting in our music circles. There or four weeks ago I sent you a letter with several important items but for some reason it failed to appear in print. I trust that the success of the benefit concert tendered to Miss Lizzie Hutchinson by some of our most prominent musicians will be sufficient to atone for the evil of her disappointment. Quartette and solo numbers, and of the first of the second part the Philharmonic club concerts

The next concert of the Philharmonic Club is arranged for the first week in May.

The Harmonic Society, under the direction of Prof. George P. Mayer, is rehearsing several fine choruses, which they will render during next month.

John A. Stewart's musical sensation of "The Jolly Bachelors," was played here last week, to good business. It received the censure of the press, as did his concert.

To-night, Willie Edouin's Sparks Company play the "reconstructed musical comedy," "Dreams; or, Blind Philosophy" at the Boyd's Opera House.

Next week Rendel, of the Stadt Theatre, has just closed an engagement with two accomplished German comedians, Edward Schultz and Otto Puls, for the Summer season.

It is stated that the old Academy of Music, which has been closed almost the entire season, will be opened next Fall by the manager of an Eastern troupe.

The following companies are booked at the Boyd: Aldrich and Parsloe's "Mr. Parsee;" May 1st; Mitchell's Pleasure Party, in "Gobbler," May 5th and 6th; Lawrence Barrett, May 11th, 12th and 13th; Jeannicke, May 16th and 17th. D. W. H.

The above cut represents the three buildings now occupied by us. The large one on the right, is the one that was partially destroyed by fire and with it nearly twenty-five thousand dollars worth of organs and organ materials. Our workmen all resumed work in the other buildings the next day after the fire, and this work has been continued night and day in a determined effort to see how soon the burned organs could be replaced. The fire occurred on the 8th of February, and on the 8th of March, only four weeks from the day of the disaster, we commenced shipping new organs. We have already completed the repairs upon the burned building and have commenced the erection of a new building seventy five feet long, five stories high. We shall increase our force of workmen largely, and in spite of the hindrance by fire we expect to produce a much larger number of organs this year than last. Now is a good time to secure the Agency for those Organs. To cash buyers and dealers of financial responsibility, we can guarantee strictly first-class organs, low prices, honest protection of territory and square dealing. Send for Catalogues.

The Music Trade

NEW YORK, MAY 6, 1882.

Messrs. Decker Bros.

From all parts of the country we learn of the growing popularity of the instruments of this house. Many of their agents have recently visited New York, and all speak enthusiastically of the great stride in public favor which the Decker piano has made during the last two years. Mr. Fiscus, of Philadelphia; Mr. De Zouche, of Montreal; Mr. Baldwin, of Cincinnati; Mr. Hamilton, of Pittsburgh; Messrs. Sprague & Carr, of Chicago, Messrs. Sherman & Hyde, of San Francisco, have all one and the same story to tell—that they cannot get pianos enough with which to fill their orders. As the firm are now turning out thirty-five to forty pianos a week and seem to be but in the infancy of their prosperity, it is very evident that they will soon be forced materially to increase their facilities, although they already have one of the largest and best appointed factories in the country.

The remarkable prosperity of the house is due as much as anything to the fact that its founder, Mr. John Jacob Decker, is a practical pianomaker and devotes his attention absolutely to the management of his factory, where not the slightest detail escapes him. If to-day the Decker piano has a reputation second to none, it is nothing but the simple result of twenty years of unremitting and conscientious labor.

The Mason and Hamlin Organ Company and the Centennial.

In a recent issue we referred to a circular issued by the Mason & Hamlin Organ Company, in which they spoke of the statement made by our editor, regarding the corruption prevalent at the Centennial, and we stated that we did not consider their answer to the point, inasmuch as our editor had in his Conclusions referred to the "Appeal Jury" and not to the original judges of award at all, and consequently a disclaimer, as regards the judges, would not by any means relieve publish this Appeal Jury, which was formed long after the judges had separated. Since the publication of our article Messrs. Mason & Hamlin have sent us a copy of their circular, from which we find that the paragraph we quoted was only an excerpt that had found its way into one of our exchanges. In order that our readers may understand Messrs. Mason & Hamlin's position, we reproduce from our Editor's original statement:

"The parties who stood behind this 'Appeal Jury,' having tasted blood, thirsted for more, and began to turn their hungry eyes upon the fat purses of the manufacturers who had obtained reports and medals from the original jury. They were not long in wanting a pretext for action. It naturally occurred to them that the duties and purposes of an 'Appeal Jury' should be extended, so that it should undertake a general work of revision. This soon became known to the manufacturers, who at once tumbled into a great state of excitement. The workies who were 'working' the trade did not stop at hints and innuendos. By no means. They threatened up and down, that unless a certain sum was paid, the reports of leading and influential would be materially altered.

"As an instance of this, no less a house than Messrs. Mason & Hamlin was threatened. Mr. George Cook, a relative of Dr. C. P. Kimball, Chairman of the Executive Committee, was then, as well as now, connected with the B. Shoninger Organ Co., appeared to Mr. Thielberg, the representative of Messrs. Mason & Hamlin at Philadelphia, and told him that unless Messrs. Mason & Hamlin paid $1,000 down, and at once, the work of the Appeal Jury was stricken out of their report.

Whether Messrs. Mason & Hamlin paid this amount I cannot say, but as the words were not stricken out, it is to be presumed they did."

We now quote Messrs. Mason & Hamlin's reply:

"But we avail ourselves of the opportunity to say publicly, and very emphatically, that we do not give the Commissioners, or the Jury, or any one else, one thousand dollars, or any other sum, to influence the verdict in any way; either to make it favorable to our interests or to injure it; we add that we have never, on any occasion, resorted to bribery, or the use of any dishonorable means to influence the verdict at any competitive exposition. We wish to make this statement as explicit as we can.

"We repeat that we do not believe that there has been a jury of one of these great international competitions for many years which has been, or could have been, influenced by pecuniary considerations. Observe that we allude now to the great world's fairs, which have been occasions of such importance that the jurymen have been recognized experts in high position, collected from different countries, whose appointment was watched with so much jealousy by the numerous competitors that it would not do to select inferior or untrustworthy men.

"That there were about the jury and commissioners of the U. S. Centennial Exhibition a set of harpies, who freely bid certain piano and organ makers for services real or pretended in reference to the awards, we neither assert nor deny; but that the jury on musical instruments were both competent and honorable, and discharged their duties thoroughly and faithfully, we unhesitatingly express acquainted with the facts can question. The chairman of this jury was even so morbidly honorable (if we may use the expression), that it was a misfortune to an exhibitor to have had any previous acquaintance with him! He was so fearful of being partial to friends, that it actually brought him into danger of not doing justice to them.

"We repeat once more, then, that the Mason & Hamlin Organ Company never did, and never will, so long as it is under its present management, do anything, or authorize anything, or use it else to do so on its behalf to influence any judges, or pay award at any exposition of its organs."

We may as well say at once that our Editor never, in any shape, way, or form, intended to accuse Messrs. Mason & Hamlin of having used improper means to obtain an award at the Centennial. On the contrary, our Editor showed that Messrs. Mason & Hamlin, after they had obtained the highest honors, were threatened with the loss of their position unless they paid a certain sum.

If Messrs. Mason & Hamlin wish to meet the real issue let them state over their signature whether or not Mr. Thielberg, their representative, was approached by Mr. Cook as charged by our Editor.

The whole point made by our Editor was against the persons at the back of the appeal jury and not against Messrs. Mason & Hamlin at all.

However, as they have taken up the defence of the judges, let us ask them the following:

"Are they or are they not aware that positive proof exists that two at least of the Centennial judges were corrupt, and that awards were obtained from the Appeal Jury by several manufacturers who paid large sums therefor?"

We await their reply.

The Trade in Philadelphia.

The agency for the sale of the Kranich & Bach pianos is at 908 Arch Street, and under the fostering guidance of Mr. G. Hetzanzr, whose eloquence on the merits of the K. & B. piano is of the most persuasive character, Mr. Hetzberg has been in the piano business since '56, the last nine years of which he has devoted to the sale of the K. & B. pianos. His trade is not so good as last year at this time, Mr. Hetzberg said; and he, too, spoke of the bright years to come, and would like to have some one explain their cause; he had endeavored to figure it out himself, but could not. His sales averaged about 130 to 150 pianos per annum. For Last December, up to the 15th, he had sold but two pianos, but during the balance of the month sold thirty-two, the holidays accounted for that, of course. He wished the firm would devote more money to making their pianos known; the name was unfamiliar and rather difficult to pronounce for an American tongue, and for that very reason they should blazon it in every newspaper until Kranich & Bach became as much a household word as Jumbo. "People come in here almost every week," he said, "and seem to think because they can't pronounce it right, the piano can't be a good one, then the more I speak of it the better they make out." concluded he in an animated, whole-souled, fatherland laugh.

Albrecht & Co. are on the look out for a good stand in Upper Kew York, having given up and sold 910 Arch Street until they find it. Their trade was not so good as last year, but they are doing their share. With them the square piano has the lead, but they are making more uprights than formerly. They are opening up new places with the new scale which they created about six months ago, and with which they are immensely pleased; it stands better in tune, is more durable, and has more vibrature in it; yet more excellent than the old scale. Their trade, they were glad to say, was extending well and with gratifying speed, and they were in want of a good, reliable man in St. Louis, Chicago, or Cincinnati to handle their line. They want an agent in each of the four named cities; second-rate men need not trouble themselves to apply. They handle the Behr Bros. organ, and have sold a few of late, that in times years they have not heard one single complaint. Comprising the sale of pianos and organs, the gentleman said that last year the organ trade was galloping ahead, but in this year the piano trade was doing the same.

Up-stairs "yours truly" tramped and plunged into the sanctum of W. F. Shaw, the music publisher, where I was informed business was at least forty per cent. better than last year. Mr. Shaw has purchased old "St. Peter's Church," on Vine Street, near Eighth, and expects to occupy it some time this Summer. They issue about fifteen pieces per week, and control the music of W. F. Sodds and G. D. Wilson, two of the most popular writers of the day. They have just issued "The National School for the Piano," by the former writer, a splendidly printed work of over 300 pages, with some entirely new and commendable features. They expect to make a boom along the line with this work. Mr. A'Becker, the well-known Philadelphia musician, is leader for the house. In a conversation with Mr. Shaw, a man of modest man and most amiable manner, I learned he commenced business in December, 1872, with plates for six pieces only; his catalogue to-day represents over 4,000, exclusive of books. Kunkel, Wumer, Magruder and Mack divided the honors of these six pieces. Previous to this venture, Mr. Shaw had issued several numbers of the "Golden Music Monthly," a publication devoted to the compositions of American authors only. He was a first-class music plate printer himself, and when he debouched upon the new idea was generally laughed at by the trade. He was given three months in which to expire decently, but to-day it seems his business is the only limited one of the corps of music. He has no complaint to make of the cheap five-cent mitsic which has been flooding the stands; cannot see that it hurts the regular trade at all.

Trade Correspondence.

The Musical Instrument Trade of the United States.

Office of John F Stratton & Co.
No. 49 Maiden Lane, New York, April 26, 1882.

Dear Mr. Peet sir:—To write a truthful history of the musical instrument trade of this country is not necessarily the growth of mammoth houses, and the general narrative of trade which each succeeding year brings forth, but rather the individual efforts of those who, in a quiet manner, find progress in the direction of their interest, to a liberal patronage of the house of John F. Stratton & Co—as I find, a task greater than I had supposed.

However, as you so rightly insist that these columns shall not be made the vehicle for personal interests, I will endeavor to do so. I will suppress the glowing tribute which my pen would urge me to pay to that enterprising firm, and call attention to the great and radical changes which have occurred during the last half century.

BAND INSTRUMENTS.

About fifty-five years ago there was organized in the City of New York the first ever permanent band.

There were many musicians in the United States at that time, but this was the first organization which was composed entirely of professional musicians, who owned their own instruments, and who were selected from whom they pleased.

This band was called "The Independent Band," and had for its leader Ui omas Haines, the father, I think, of our present Capt. Dikes, of the police force.

The Dodworth family were actively engaged in this organization.

Some five years later disagreements arose, a split took place, and the Dodworths organized the "National Band," which was formerly known as Dodworth's Band, to distinguish it from the old organization, which was known as the "Independent."

This band was composed of eighteen men, and the instruments consisted of clarionets, flutes, serpents, trombones, bassoons, French horns and pipes tuned to the key of F and B flat.

Of these the "serpent," which was a wooden instrument with an ophicleide mouth-piece, was the only one that could be found in a band of twenty-four of the day's "serpents" can be found in the city of New York, and if it could be procured would be a curiosity to the present age.

It is said to have possessed considerable compass and capabilities, and an anecdote is told of a player at the old Metropolitan who could so closely imitate with the instrument the roaring of a lion as to set all the animals in a fever of excitement.

The "bassoon" and "French horn" seem comparatively fresh from their native origin. In later years, when they had become accustomed to the brass band which used to play on the balcony of Barnum's Museum every afternoon from 3 to 4 o'clock, it was found that nothing short of a red hot poker could rouse them from their melancholy.

The trumpets and French horns were of course used entirely without valves, the notes being varied by the insertion of the hand in the bell of the instrument. The trombones were also without slides, and were furnished with those of our present valved instruments, but it would seem as if some of our players took to see the brilliant quickstep which were accurately played, turn for turn, upon these instruments, without using valves or keys. The rest of the instruments are still in common use, although the "key bugle" has long since been added, and even the modern French horn with its valves. The only brass instrument which has retained its original character through all these changes is the valved or keyed brass instrument, viz: the cornet-a-piston.

Of the ancient organ of the trombone there can be no possible question, as it is almost impossible to improve the grand old thing as the hand of nature, showing that the ancients understood the principle of lengthening the tube by the slide, and that the modern has only improved upon the "crooked" instrument by adding a revolving cut-off, which was the "sackbut" referred to in Holy Writ.

The "cornet-a-piston" is a very recent acquisition. The Germans adopted valves referred to, for the truth of which I possibly will not vouch.

It would take from here to Kingdom Come to find the tenor in the bell, but the musical cyclopedia would could only decipher the single word "Ophicleide."

The "serpent" was a curious instrument in those wonderful times perhaps were afraid to invest in a sackbut unless it was enthusiastically endorsed by the eminent person, and it was indeed a rare occasion for such number to publish "a testimonial," signed "Levy," setting forth that "Levy" was the greatest player in the world, and that he obtained his wonderful effects upon a "sackbut."

"So he, of course, it appears did, and that the same testimonial given to half a dozen different players, and they have been considered valuable; but the ancients were not so side awake as we are—not by a long shot.

In speaking of the early bands, I must not pass over the organization of Patrick S. Gilmore, who, as a leader of grand, fine and popular music plays higher than any.

The music was so arranged that the drums and fifes played a strain of which the cornets were not supposed to do more than accompany the air, the latter, of course, in unison.

The Independent Band, as a corps, under the leadership of Fred Boehler, is well remembered to this day.

Many of the members of this organization began to come into more general use, and the old "serpent" disappears from sight.

Mr. Thos. Dodworth (the father of the present leader of Dodworth's Band) and his son Allen composed the "Key Bugle Corps," which so long interpreted the "New York Hymn." These instruments were made of copper and German silver with three piston valves, and the father and son created quite a sensation with their duets upon these novel instruments. Mr. Allen Dodworth, the son, now Harvey B. Dodworth, then barely more than a boy, per force Prof. Allen Dodworth almost the first born in this country—and assembled with a number of the best performers of "A low voice" and similar difficult artists at public entertainments.

From this time the use of the valve instruments of sackbuts shape became general, and continued until about 1842, when the Dodworths were again responsible for radical change in band instruments, the particulars of which I will give you when I have more time.

The Installment Plan.

The following is the text of the bill to regulate the sale of Musical Instruments on the Installment plan recently introduced in the Albany Legislature by Mr. Claflin:

SECTION 1.—No person, firm, or corporation who sells or deal in, or in any manner disposes of, furniture, bedding, sewing machines, organs, pianos, and other musical instruments, or any household utensils of any kind whatsoever, upon a plan providing that payments or payments in installments, shall make any contract of any kind covering the sale or disposition of any of the articles above mentioned, by which any note or document of whatever nature shall be signed, until fifty per cent. of all sums paid shall be returned to such person if he or she fails in the full performance of such contract. And it shall not be lawful to remove or recover any furniture, bedding, sewing machines, organs, pianos, or other musical instruments, or any household utensils, in the case of any purchaser who has failed to keep her contract until the said fifty per cent. of all sums paid has been returned or tendered to such purchaser.

SECTION 2.—Any contract or document for the purchase or sale of any furniture, bedding, sewing machines, organs, pianos, or other musical instruments, or household utensils upon the installment plan, or a plan providing for or stating payments in installments, which shall be in default and void.

In our next issue we shall speak of this matter further and treat of its bearings on the piano and organ trades. There can be no doubt but that, sooner or later, laws will be enacted all over the country to regulate the sale by installment of furniture and musical instruments. It is not unlikely that Congress will take some action in the matter, and it is therefore of importance that the whole question be thoroughly discussed.

The Pianoforte Trade in Australia.

The bogus piano trade appears to flourish in Australia, if we are to credit the statements recently made by Mr. Moonen in a letter to a foreign contemporary. We subjoin his letter, or rather the major part of it:

To the Editor of The London Music Trade Review:—It may be interesting to you to know that German makers have no chance because of the pianoforte markets here that the English and French makers are in danger of finding themselves crowded out.

Blüthner, Schiedmayer, Rönisch, Bechstein, Ibach-schoss, Lipp and Kaps are the names of the pianos that are in demand, and not only the semi-famed instruments being in much more in the taste of the public than the title, woody tone of the "old-fashioned" instrument.

Then German makers should for a time leave the country as it is not much to complain of so long as they trade legitimately.

Unfortunately, however, this is not the case, and complaints as to their manner of trading, and we find some having a fair reputation for their pianos, intelligent, leading themselves to highly reprehensible practice. The makers of "high-class" instruments supply and put up a piano, the value of which varies from £12 to £35, and they will put a nephews' name on it, and run the pace until the name is worn out, then put another one, and so forth.

Of late I have had to deal with the many Roscoe-Rosedale, Hermanns, Wagners, Richards, Bergerins, Normanns, Herring, Rosedale, Pohl, Polonia, Hickens, Schiedmayer, Blumenfeldts, Rapp, Schallers, Newmalls, and others, that are sent out to the farmers and to the bush storekeepers and wholesale importers, who do not hesitate to sell rogue pianos, in the name of the above well-known makers.

The result would not be so much cause for complaint were it not for the so called "cheap" pianos—that are often sold at highly exorbitant prices by country retailers—being of the most objectionable and worthless nature; but where their practices are highly reprehensible is when they use the names of the above well-known makers, and are guaranteed for the eighteen months' period, which is usual in the trade. Of course, the unsuspecting colonist desires to exit under false pretenses a piano having the name, for example, of Blüthner, Bechstein, or Ibach, and all know that the firm is the well-known French one, and that it has factory factory are close-cousin to Rosedale, Pohl, Richards, of Dresden, has often been transformed into Cut Prices, and sent on several occasions to the Melbourne Exhibition, and returned to Europe in due time. Bechstein pianos are sometimes asked for, and a Rosedale or Bergerin or Rönisch shown in its place, and the purchaser assured that it is "all the same."

Equal pianos from the celebrated Parisian firm are often supposed to be of sufficient make because Erard appears on the name-board in the front.

Steve, again, a good maker, is jeopardized by Risort, Schiedmayer by Schiedmayer; and pianos may be supplied as a moment's notice, for the "bogus" makers keep in stock a regular supply of address plates all ready to be screwed on the instruments as wanted.

Y.

There has been a rumor during the past few days that a strike is impending among the piano makers of this city for an advance of 10 per cent. in their wages. A reporter interviewed several manufacturers in relation to the matter, and all of them declared that they would suffer actions before they will yield to such a demand.

The Messrs. Steinway have had a fine Egyptian revival upright piano. This was the first shipment made by the firm to South America.

The decided improvement of Mr. Hugh Cottard, of the well-known pianoforte firm in London, in his seventy-sixth year, and of Pettit Bethelem, the organ manufacturer of Rochester, N. Y., in his eighty-fifth.

SPEAKING of the "age" of firms in the piano trade in England, the London Music Trade Review says: "Kirkman's firm is a record of a century and a half old, and Broadwood's house nearly the same age. Erard's and Collard's, Tomkinson's and Wornum's were all founded in the last century. Challen's dates back to 1804, and Chappell's to 1811."

CLAYPOOL is correct that the proposed International Exhibition at Boston in 1883 will not, afterall, be held.

H. N. SQUIRE is making for Decker & Son a number of upright cases, all of which are of the finest material and best workmanship.

Mr. J. W. CUMMINGS, head salesman of Mason & Hamlin's New York warerooms, has visited London, accompanied by Mr. Edward Mason, son of Henry Mason. The organ has two bellows of unusual pressure, and blown by a Otto gas engine and Sellers's governor. The tubular system is used for the great and pedal organs, thus adjusting thereby with quickness and action.

Richter's "Practical Studies in the Theory of Music." J. J. Hartel: Hugo Riemann's "Musik Lexikon" Bahnar "Klaus." The MASON AND HAMLIN ORGAN COMPANY has just introduced a new three-bank and pedal organ. It has a resonant case, with polished, recessed panels, and presents a handsome appearance. The pedal board is concave, accordance with the latest improvements, who have a radius of 8 feet 6 inches, length, 30 notes, and with rest, heard, 1,000 pounds. This organ can be taken apart and moved through a space 2 feet 8 inches wide. Directions for taking apart are seen with each piano. It has four sets of reeds of three octaves each and three sets of two octaves each. The first set of reeds is of brass, the second of German silver, and in middle octave. Here are of three octaves each, and three sets of two octaves each in the upper manual, and three sets of thirty notes each in pedals. The action is tracker and lever. The tone is full, pure, and in the performer can himself supply wind.

A NEW ORGAN has been erected in England by Baillie Hamilton. The Pall Mall Gazette gives the following description of it: "The organ, which is the work of Mr. Hamilton, has been built in the Independent Hall before the visit of the Prince who visited it a fortnight last week, and above all, those who have heard it played on with greater freedom in the Prince's absence than they have been able to mention which provides greater variety of effect and greater volume and power of sound, than an ordinary organ of twice its size. In this case as in it appears, an equal comparative reduction in cost. Consequently it is hoped that the instrument will be found to be within the reach of many churches which might otherwise be unprovided with it, and to form an further public trial to fulfil the apparently justified anticipations of its inventor. It was noticed that the Prince's procedure distinctness and pleasing character of sounds which recall to the hearer, with the full power of the instrument. The tone is that of the pure quality of the softer wind instruments, and even of the human voice itself. The sound is produced, we believe, by wind that produces the Rotian character by the vibration of "free" reeds, connected together in triplets and compactly balanced by wire spirals. The human the character of the tone is the absence of a sounding-board of small dimensions, which produces wiry vibrations pure; and which performs, and performs successfully, the corresponding functions of the thoracic cavities in the human body."

DRAMATIC NOTES.

Matinees this week Wednesday and Saturday.
Matinees next week Monday, Washington's Birthday, Wednesday and Saturday.

Mr. Nat C. Goodwin and his companion players in The Nominee, will succeed Miss Wainwright at this house, beginning with an afternoon performance on next Monday. Each evening and each afternoon there will be a "curtain raiser," in one act, called Art and Nature.

Mr. Goodwin is undoubtedly one of the greatest comedians America has ever produced. A brilliant, spontaneous talent, high up in dramatic record, and every new achievement is one more graceful triumph to native genius. He is above art, natural. He is inexhaustibly versatile, but never loses his own distinguishing identity. He is not quite like anybody else, but he can imitate everybody. He is deliciously volatile, magnetic and original. Outside of a most unique inherent humor, he has the happiest, most unerring intuition regarding the limitations and anticipations of an audience. He sizes the people up with a psychological acuteness that is electric, and colors his comedy accordingly. His keen sense of humor, vigorous character appreciation and dramatic intelligence are inborn, not cultivated. Goodwin is a delightful wonder, and his real talents speed is yet a matter of conjecture. He breaks the record in The Nominee, without half trying, the three act translation of which comes from the French. The adaptors did clever work in localizing the comedy. It is terse, epigrammatic, and beautiful English, full of the most wry, positive action and character shade. A host other plain woman never appears in any of Goodwin's casts, and The Nominee not only upholds but accentuates this thoughtfulness. Every member in the entire company deserves unstinted praise.

Another American, gifted and well liked, is Sol Smith Russell, and he will fill a week's engagement at the Park Theatre, beginning February 29th. The play will be Peaceful Valley, the successful American comedy of New England life, written by E. E. Kidder for Mr. Russell. In it the latter has a character, "Hosea Howe," which is as intensely American as Mulberry Sellers, as quaint and lovable as Caleb Plummer, as intensely yankee as Joshua Whitcomb, and as rich in unstudied drollery as Artemus Ward. Hosea Howe lives with his widowed mother on a summer hotel in the mountains of upper New England. To earn some money for his college expenses, he hires out as a waiter at the hotel, but gives up the job when a crusty landlord and rude guests insist on "hurting his feelings." At the hotel he meets Virgie Rand, a New York girl, who to help out the play, discovers his noble character, and seeks his company in preference to that of the rather fast young men from the city. Hosea adores Virgie, secretly and overwhelmingly, but does not discover until the last act that she cares for him. A villain who has enticed Hosea's sister to the city under promise of marriage, figures in the story. The villain, as usual, has Virgie's father in his "clutches," but of course he is foiled at every turn, and the story ends happily for all but him.

DRAMATIC NOTES.

Matinees this week Wednesday and Saturday.

A Texas Steer, Charles H. Hoyt's most successful skit, will be played at the Park next week, and will succeed with effervescent merriment the thoroughly enjoyable performances of "Paul Jones" and Miss Huntington. It was presented in New York nearly 300 times, and throughout the country its reception has been so enthusiastic that the author is very well justified in considering it the most popular of his works. A "Texas Steer" was first produced during the latter part of last season in New York, and scored such an emphatic hit that it was pronounced, unquestionably, the best effort of this prolific playwright, who announces the piece as "a collection of scenes and instances supposed to bear more or less upon the extraordinary possibilities of American politics, and the development of statesmanship," and very modestly says that he "does not claim that his treatment of the subject is exhaustive and profound; he will not insist that it is absolutely truthful, but he hopes that, as far as it goes, it will be found amusing." Enough, the moment of fun to be gotten out of the portrayal by a first-class company, of the transplanting of a Texas ranchman and his untutored wife and daughter into Washington society, the former as the representative of his district in Congress, and you will have some idea of what to expect in "A Texas Steer," which will be presented at this house with the finest cast Mr. Hoyt ever got together for one of its farce-comedies. Tim Murphy, who was the bright particular star of the famous "Razzle Dazzle" trio, and Miss Flora Walsh, who is probably remembered as the most charming soubrette ever seen in farce comedy, are in the company. Beside them there are several excellent comedians, capital singers, and two or three of the prettiest girls on the stage, and all of them filling parts indispensable to the full development of the story, which is nearer pure comedy than anything else Mr. Hoyt ever wrote.

The Lyceum Theatre Stock Company will follow week of May 18th, in two of their most notable successes thus season, "Old Heads and Young Hearts," and "The Idler." The first named comedy is familiar to theatre-goers, but it is safe to say that the manner of its representation by Mr. Frohman's company will be a revelation to many. The old comedy never fared better at the hands of actors, not even in the palmy days of Wallack's theatre, than it does in the care of the Lyceum players. "The Idler" is not so well known, but its success is equal to that of "The Wife," or "Charity Ball." It was written by C. Haddon Chambers, the wrote "Captain Swift," and in his limited even better in the new that he did in the old. As in "Captain Swift," a reformed and reputable aventurer is menaced by the exposure of a dissolute one in his reckless past, but this time the young man does not deserve the impending disgrace, and he finally escapes it. While under the torture of prosecution, his complications have love affairs more or less connected with misfortune, some grave and some comical, but all well dovetailed into the dramatization, so that the play is a clever combination of laughable and beautiful things. "Old Heads and Young Hearts" will be presented on Monday and Tuesday evenings and Wednesday matinee, and "The Idler" on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday matinee.

W. H. Crane will play an engagement here week of may 25, in "The Senator." Col. Sinn's New Park Theatre in Brooklyn has the whole of next season booked, with the exception of three or six weeks, and shows a list of attractions the strongest that popular theatre has ever had, comprising the following: Mme. Modjeska, Fanny Davenport,

The "North American Review" says of the Celebrated Schirmer Pianos:
"No one can fail to notice in them every good point which can be claimed. In sweet tone, a good responsive action, ease of touch and singing quality, they have all of power which is now in demand, added to which a perfect evenness of touch renders the average performer capable of bringing out a good beauty by comparatively little study. The instrument is being used largely, and is now to be found in the homes of many of the most cultured people of this country, and a more thoroughly reliable piano could not be found in the instrument at any other market."

While the house of Schirmer & Co. was founded in 1872, its actually extends back to a little more than 1860. Its author and head, Mr. Rudolph Schirmer, is a native of this City, and, in so many words, a musician by birth and breeding. He was born and brought up in the musical atmosphere of Steinway Hall, at the same time acquiring a thorough knowledge of music and the piano-forte. At ten years of age he appeared in New York and was appointed to the piano teaching faculty of the Academy of Music, and, although learning his trade with this firm, he returned to Europe in 1868 and traveled in the various capitals, studying piano-making, ordering, and shipping instruments to this country. In 1870 he returned to New York, and in 1872 commenced manufacturing in practical form the ideas which in his training and travel had developed. In the partnership of Mr. Edward Kuhn, who had been in the firm a short number who finished the art and trade thoroughly in the Vienna Shops, and added considerable experience to the firm. Mr. Kuhn retired from the firm in 1880, and the business was continued by Messrs. Schirmer & Co., of which Mr. Rudolph Schirmer is chosen each member of the firm being in charge of a separate department, to which he devotes his personal attention. The factory now has in addition to the elaborate warerooms on 14th street, No. 39, and 32nd Avenue, a new factory at Astoria, which is the most magnificent and complete establishment in the country, and the whole of which has been made for large

Every year the present warerooms production of the firm, which is the high figure of forty pieces per week, it is just month has averaged the entire demand, the firm being to-day to in advance of its orders.

A widely spread constituency demanding these celebrated instruments, they may be had not only at the principal warerooms 149 to 155 East Fourteenth Street, New York, but at Montreal, Canada; 226 State Street, Chicago; 1 Union Square, San Francisco; 1,070 Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo.; 1116 Main Street Kansas City, as other of local dealers throughout the country.

SCHOOLMISTRESS—Edward, give me the definition of excavate. EDWARD—Excavate, to hollow out. S. M.—Give me a sentence containing the word. ED.—I hit Bill and he excavated.

AT THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.—"And now, children," said the superintendent, benignantly, "are there any questions you would like to ask before we leave this lesson?" "How long did it take you to cut all the pigs in the pen the first time you tried?" inquired the sweet little girl on the front seat.

A correspondent sends us the following, which he says is vouched for by a schoolmaster: At a village school, not many miles from Canterbury, a precocious boy being asked to parse the sentence, "Mary, milk the cow," went on accurately till he came to the last word, when he said: Cow is a pronoun, feminine gender, third person singular, and stands for Mary." "Stands for Mary?" asked the master in astonishment. "Yes, sir," responded the urchin with a grin, "for if he cow didn t stand for Mary, how could Mary milk the cow?"

CAUSE OF THE DELAY.

BERNARDINE—Why doesn't Jack come? Bang (calmly)—He discovered this morning that pa's wedding check was worthless, and he and pa are trying to settle the matter in the vestry.

A witty writer has observed, with much truth, that every man is, in a sense, three different men. In the first place, he is the man he thinks himself to be; in the second place, he is the man other persons think him to be, and finally he is the man that he really is.

Benjamin Franklin was dining with a small party of distinguished gentlemen, when one of them said: "Here are three nationalities represented. I am French, and my friend there is English, and Mr. Franklin is an American. Let each propose a toast. It was agreed to, and the Englishman's turn came first. He arose, and, in the tone of a Briton bold, said: "Here's to Great Britain, the sun that gives light to the nations of the earth!" The Frenchman was rather taken aback at this; but he proposed: "Here's to France, the union whose magic rays move the tides of the world!" Franklin then rose with an air of quaint modesty and said: "Here's to George Washington, the Joshua of America who commanded the sun and moon to stand still—and they stood still!"

ALASKA SEALSKIN GARMENTS—For fined ermines in stock or to order. C. C. SHAYNE, Furrier, 124 W. 42d St., and 103 Prince St.

A nice black cashmere, next to no wear for any place or occasion, is now considerable to the silk or satin waistcoat in the winter. Fancy it, silk such a waist was a delightful matter, but now one must make a mistake in choosing any one of the cloth-wool materials—Flannels, Cheviots, Tammy, Nun's Veiling, Crystalette, or any of their summer weight linings. These are cool and very light in weight, and most perfectly neat and pleasant to wear, and are reliable in every respect.

DRAMATIC NOTES.

ROBSON & CRANE matinees, Wednesday, "Our Bachelors;" Saturday, "Comedy of Errors." Seats now ready.

Next week, Feb. 12th, Six nights with two matinees, Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, the distinguished comedian, Mr. SOL SMITH RUSSELL, in the marvellously successful comedy-drama, "Edgewood Folks."

EXCERPTS FROM THE PRESS.

A genuine success.—N. Y. Times.

Sol Smith Russell has become the talk of the town.—N. Y. Herald.

If you want a thorough shaking up, go and see Russell.—N. Y. Graphic.

The play, the star and the company have made the hit of the season in this city.—St. Louis Republican.

Sol Smith Russell is indeed a comedian, who has not his rival on the American stage. He does so much to amuse an audience during an evening, that it is impossible to describe any one thing. The only way to do the actor justice, is to say that he is immense."—New Haven Register.

Sol Smith Russell has chosen a company of stars to accompany him, and each one is a brilliant in its place. It is seldom that such a company of performers reach New Haven, with such a sterling star and such a strong play. They will always receive a crowded house in this city.—New Haven Palladium.

The Park Theatre last evening had one of the merriest audiences that has assembled there this season. The attraction—and in nearly every respect it deserved that term—was Sol Smith Russell and his company in the farce comedy of "Edgewood Folks." The comedian is at once the most ingenious and ingenuous of actors: he exhibits the well-schooled resources of rema kable abilities, coupled with a clearness of expression, artistic finish and bland unconsciousness of self that make his personation open and intelligible. The business is very large.—New York Times.

In the line of what may be properly classified as refined comedy, Sol Smith Russell has no superior in this country. All those who have seen him know that his impersonation are somewhat marvellous. Long ago he won his way to a deservedly high place in the genuine admiration of the American public. The piece is destined to enjoy here the same phenomenal popularity that it has so speedily gained elsewhere. A more remarkably many sided man than Sol Smith Russell could hardly be imagined. He has more heads than a company of actors usually number. No other man can now be recalled who has in so complete developement the faculty of metamorphosis. Work of so true a ring and fine a quality as his does not pall; it grows with acquaintance, and Mr. Russell has the good fortune to be longed for.—Chicago Daily Times.

"Edgewood Folks" pleased the Cincinnati folks last evening as much, if not better, than any entertainment the management has offered this season. The first scene is one of the handsomest yet shown at this house, and is as charming and realistic a one as we have seen for years. Mr. Sol Smith Russell is one of the best and most natural humorists on our stage, and as we say in the classics, he "paralyzed" his audience last night, and they seemed to desire to keep him on the stage all the time. His success was instantaneous, and he made one of the greatest hits that our city has witnessed for a long time—one that insures him and his play a fine week's business. The comedy gives excellent work in all the cast, and they take advantage of the opportunity, the support being much above the average. We have not the space for individual mention; all the company were equal to the parts assigned them. "Edgewood Folks," the star, and the company have made the hit of season, and you must go and see it and enjoy yourself.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Week of Feb. 19th, Chas. Wyndham's Comedy Company from Criterion Theatre London, their first appearance in Brooklyn—The following is the list of the people composing the Wyndham Opera Company: Mrs. Charles Wyndham and Mrs. Phelps, Misses Wyndham, Rose Saker, Mary Rorke, Florence Chalgrove, Emily Vining and Mercy Delacey, Messrs. Charles Wyndham, William Blakely, George Giddens, H. R. Treesdale, W. H. Day, H. H. Astley, R. Saker and Draycott. The prompter will be Mr. T. G. Richards. "Fourteen Days" will be the inaugural piece.

FROM THE LONDON PRESS.

"FOURTEEN DAYS."—Mr. Wyndham has a school for fun at the Criterion, but seldom has he hit the public taste so exactly, or so well united comical incident and witty dialogue, ingenious complication and quaintness of expression as in this merry tale. It starts of at once without any unnecessary prelude or hesitation The fun is sustained unceasingly and Wyndham keeps up his spirits in every scene each with each individual character until the curtain falls and the audience retires with a smile upon every countenance.—The Daily Telegraph.

Brightly written, and with but little straining after mere verbal comicalities, it has the advantage—so often missed in a farcical comedy—of a fairly rational and consequent plot.—Observer.

In, in fact, one of the best pieces of the kind that has been seen here for some time past. Thist Mr. Wyndham's part of the hero, Porter, closely resembles many other parts that he has played, will, no doubt, be regarded as rather an advantage than otherwise by Criterion audiences. He rattles through it in his accustomed fashion It appears the easiest thing in the world to act like this until one sees some of the excellent comedian's imitators, all of whom are so far behind this master of the art of light comedy.—Standard.

It is full of life and animation, and is especially well acted. The fun is indeed fast and furious and irresistable, even with the most determined stickler for likelihood and probability. The fun never flags, the hustling, lively action never lan guishes, and the provocation to uproarious laughter is incessant.—Morning Advertiser.

DAVENPORT.—Miss Fanny Davenport will make a second tour of the British provinces in March. After playing an engagement in London in June, she will return to this country for the autumn and winter seasons.

MR. HALLEN.

MR. HART.

The comedians, Hallen & Hart, under the management of Harry Hine, appear at the Grand Opera House, week of Monday, Dec. 8th, presenting the second edition of their universally popular success, "Later On," specially written for them by Mr. H. Grattan Donnelly, author of "Natural Gas," etc. Messrs. Hallen & Hart are two of the cleverest and most original comedians now before the public. Their methods are refined, easy, graceful and natural, and they succeed in keeping their audiences in laughter by entirely legitimate means and in a most artistic way. Mr. Hallen, a light comedian, is seen to the best advantage in the part of Jack Plunger, which he plays to perfection, his abilities as a singer and dancer giving light to the character; and Mr. Hart, in the eccentric part of Jolly Todd, has full opportunity for the display of the marked individual talents that have for years made him such a favorite. Their company is one of the best ever organized for the production of farce comedy. It includes Miss Annie Lewis, Miss Mattie Fuller, Miss Ada Somers, Mr. John E. McWade, Mr. Harry Hilton, Mr. Mark Murphy and other clever people, and the result is an entertainment that for lightness and brightness, mirth and melody, has never been surpassed on the American stage. Their play this season has been elaborated and the performance perfected in a number of ways. It abounds in new and popular musical numbers and specialties, and is altogether as clever and catchy as could be desired. Seats for any performance are now on sale.

FINE ART NEEDLEWORK
The sewing machine was a wonderful invention, and the one perfected in 1851 by Isaac A. Singer was remarkable in its degree, but the Singer Family Machine today is in comparison with the early efforts of mechanical skill. The elegant show rooms and art parlors of the Singer Manufacturing Company recently opened at No. 257 Broadway, near 23rd Street, contain a remarkable exhibition of every description of work accomplished by these machines including all the most fashionable imported designs. Work which was considered difficult to be done by hand a few years ago can now be accomplished with the greatest ease on these machines. All kinds of needlework in Kensington stitching, crazy work, couching outline, scroll work, etc., in silk andarsenal embroidery can be produced by the Singer machine.
The handsome sewing machine on exhibition in the nine millionth machine produced by this Company, which will be given away shortly before Christmas.

For One Week Only.
THE YOUNG EMOTIONAL ACTRESS,
CORA TANNER
In Her Recent 5th Avenue Success,
ONE ERROR.

Cora Tanner, more charming than ever in her marvellous Dutch gowns, made her appearance on Monday night in a new play at the Fifth Avenue Theatre. The Theatre was filled with a distinguished first night audience gathered to do honor to an unusually clever and successful young actress. Miss Tanner is always bright, natural and spontaneous. Miss Tanner has an admirable company. She, herself, is vivacious, wholesome, womanly. I have watched her comic with interest, and rejoiced in her successes ever since I saw her in "The Princess Ida," in the Fifth Avenue, a number of years ago. She has improved steadily in her art since then, but she has preserved her naturalness. She is a handsome woman and her dresses in "One Error" set the feminine portion of the audience wild with envy, and made the married men clutch their pocketbooks convulsively. The lover of a clean, entertaining play, well played by a most beautiful and gracious woman, will thoroughly enjoy "One Error."

The gown worn first is that of a young girl not yet married. The material is cream satin, with a damask figure of tiny detached checks scattered over it, producing an old fashioned changeable effect that is exceedingly pretty.

The second gown is a carriage dress of deep-red silk, with petticoat and heightening touches of shrimp pink. The skirt is pointed, open-worked passementerie covering the shrimp pink in one panel and a long strip of lace red embroidered in long lines of shaded reds is the vest.

The third, the fourth and the fifth gowns are of crepe de chine, a material of which Miss Tanner is fully appreciative and then which there is nothing more exquisitely suited to a feminine, fair and statuesque creature like the heroine of "One Error." The first of these is a dinner gown and is composed of green.

The fourth gown is a demi-toilet of pink crepe de chine. There are no sleeves to this beautiful gown, but, instead, long, caped like wings of the crepe, which fall in folds from the crown of the shoulder to the hem of the gown, and beneath which the arms are hidden when hanging by the side.

The next is a negligee of yellow crepe de chine, with big lowly sleeves that fall way down and then are gathered back in a band at the elbow.

The last gown is the Redfern, and is a traveling gown of sapphire-blue India cloth, embroidered in white and dark blue. This is a capy, which is the latest invention of Redfern, and is called the "Mountain cape." It is a full straight cape, made with a sort of skeleton lining and arm holes underneath. This natty garment was designed for and worn by hitherto been made only for royalty. It will doubtless prove an incentive here to others that is new in traveling and driving capes.

PRINCESS OF WALES DRESS STAY is sold and RECOMMENDED by all dealers. It is the only stay put up in sets of twelve, just the number required to have a DRESS WAIST, each stay is stamped with the position it is to occupy on the waist and is the CORRECT LENGTH, thus doing away with the ruinous practice of cutting off the end of stays (when too long) on which is the top, thus leaving a sharp steel edge to destroy the dress and underwear.

A GENUINE HIT.

"Good Old Times" has made a most decided success and is doing a large business. The play is deserving of its name, being a good old-time drama, full of stirring incidents and startling effects. Wilson Barrett and Hall Caine have put together a play that ought to make a small fortune for Colonel Sinn. He has given the play a magnificent production. The scenery is as beautiful as anything seen in this city on a long time. The mechanical changes are worked with skill and they never fail to receive applause. The company is composed of people who have reputations for all-round work. All the parts are well played, even down to the very smallest.

"Good Old Times" is the style of play that pleases all classes. The interest commences as soon as the curtain goes up and from that time on it never ceases. Wilson Barrett had intended making "Good Old Times" the main play in his repertoire when he toured this country last season but changed his mind at the last minute. It was running so successfully in London at the time that he thought it would be a great risk to take it across the sea. However, Mr. Barrett is disposed of the rights to him. The manner in which the play has been received in Boston and New York shows his judgment was not at fault.

GOOD OLD TIMES

The new drama written by Mr. Wilson Barrett and Hall Caine and produced in this country for the first time in Boston has made a most decided success, and will soon be played at the Grand Opera Hous. It is pronounced to be one of the best dramas seen in this country since the days of "Lights of London," and "Silver King." Col. Sinn of the Brooklyn Park Theatre, who owns the rights of the play, has placed it on the stage in a very elaborate manner. The scenery is said to be extemely fine, and many beautiful mechanical changes are shown. Col. Sinn will undoubtedly make a large amount of money ant of "Good Old Times." It is a play that appeals strongly to all classes

"Sunset" and "Dr. Bill," the two comedies now being performed at the Garden Theatre, make on attractive evening's performance. Sadie Martinot, Isabelle Evesson, J. B. Polk, and the veteran John Jennings make an effective quartet of comedians. Edith Kenward, the little English woman, whose kangaroo dance has caught the town, will appear herself in the entire three acts of "Dr. Bill," thus increasing the merriment vastly. Jerome K. Jerome's exquisite little comedy, "Sunset," which precedes "Dr. Bill" at 8 o'clock, has been potent enough to draw the audience in time to witness it. "Sunset" is full of wit, charming language, and tells a beautiful poetical story. The parts of the two sisters are unusually well portrayed by Miss Martinot and Miss Evesson. Manager French has certainly hit the mark of public approval with these two plays, and there will be no need of a change for some time to come. —N. Y. World.

MORSELS OF GASTRONOMY.

The perfection of rice boiling, Chinese style, is to have every grain separate.

In these days there seem as many kinds of olive oil, so called, as there were colors in Joseph's coat.

Women eating corn in public would look less ridiculous and more graceful if they broke the corner in two.

A German professor says all who eat watercress consume at the same time a full assortment of minute insects.

Somebody writes to say it is no longer "good form" to use a bit of bread in connection with the fork in eating fish.

Whipped cream with peaches is a dainty dessert at Newport dinners, served in finest of glass saucers, and, strange to say, eaten with a fork.

Entrees and salmis are the dishes to be avoided at the generality of watering place hotels, as they are usually made of what is suggestively known as "leavings."

"DOCTOR BILL."

The New Farce-Comedy with Which the Garden Theatre Will Open.

The theatre in connection with the Madison Square Garden will open on Sept. 27 with a new farce-comedy entitled "Doctor Bill." Dr. William Brown is a young practitioner and settled down to domesticity after a busy career as a ladies' doctor. Very many of his patients having moved in the livelier walks of the drama, in the most agreeable and entertaining of these he has taken considerable interest as a friend rather than as a doctor. However, he has sufficient income to live without his profession, and he has determined to practice no more. His father-in-law, Mr. Firman, objects to this, for he believes that work is good for the young. Firman sends out circulars broadcast announcing the eagerness of Dr. William Brown to prescribe for his fellow-creatures. During Brown's absence from the house the old gentleman has a huge brass plate affixed to the door, of course without his son-in-law's knowledge, inviting consultation. Opposite to Dr. Brown there live a Mr. and Mrs. Horton. He, a superintendent of police, irritable and suspicious; she, a pleasure loving lady with a wise knowledge of the world, who believes in the frailties of mankind their prominence for flirtations and general inconstancy. Mrs. Brown, on the other hand, thoroughly believes that her husband, the Doctor, is possessed of all the virtues. Mrs. Horton is sceptical; she sends for Dr. Brown in order to ascertain whether he has any of the tendencies she has observed in some other practitioners, notably in her old friend Dr. Bill, and that she shall report to his wife the result of her investigations. Brown, however, when he receives a letter begging him to call on Mrs. Horton, declines at first to do so and gives his answer over delivery to a young friend, Mr. George Webster, who has, as it happens, been much struck by the fascinations of the lady at a fancy fair. The idea occurs to him of gaining an interview by presenting himself as Dr. William Brown. This scheme he carries out and soon convinces Mrs. Horton that her new acquaintance, Mrs. Brown, is far too credulous with regard to her husband. She therefore persuades the "doctor" to go into an adjoining room—ushers—and waits there, while she sends for his wife. Mrs. Brown promptly arrives and is told where she may find her "husband," who—it being dark will suppose that the incomer is his hostess. The echo of a resounding box on the ear is the only intimation of what takes place. Mrs. Horton locks the door of that room and puts the key on the table. Presently the real Dr. Brown appears upon the scene. Mrs. Horton recognizes her old friend Dr. Bill, but when she finds who he really is she swoons in his arms, and to bring her round the doctor puts the key down her back. It has the desired effect, and she pushes the doctor into another dark room, hoping to get his wife away without discovery. But the key—where is the key with which to let her out? Here the fun reaches its full height and the scene "brings down the house." It is down Mrs. Horton's back, and in her resolve to get at it she begins to tear off her things. The confusion comes to a climax when the jealous Superintendent of Police reaches home.

There is an oblique way of reproof which takes off the sharpness of it, and an address in flattery which makes it agreeable, though never so gross; but of all flatterers the most skillful is he who can do what you like without saying anything which argues he does it for your sake.—London Young Ladies' Journal.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Guy de Maupassant has offered to the committee of the Theatre Francaise a one act play in verse called "Histoire du Vieux Temps."

Joseph Haworth will act during the coming season in "A Man of the World" and "Aunt Jack," under the management of H. S. Taylor.

Joseph Kainz, the famous Munich court actor, has closed a contract with Gustav Amberg, of New York, for forty perform ances at $400 a night.

Wm. A. Brady, the young California manager, was four years ago a property man in a San Francisco theatre. Today he is worth $70,000, all of which he has made himself.

One scene, painted by Hoyt, in "The Merry Monarch," a comic opera, is called the corridor of the elephants. The ceiling of porphyry and various agates is supported by huge statues of elephants.

The Earl and Countess of Pembroke have had "As You Like It" played in the quadrangle of Wilton house, Salisbury, where it is said "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was once played in Shakespeare's time.

Howard P. Taylor, author and adapter of several successful plays, has secured the right to dramatize Mark Twain's last book, "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court." It will be a spectacular comedy.

The Swanzey farm buried in snow amid the hills of New Hampshire is the picture that the managers of "The Old Homestead" intend to make a feature of in the last act of the play when it begins its fourth season in New York.

For burns, sweet oil and cotton are the standard remedies. If not at hand sprinkle the part with flour, and wrap loosely with a soft cloth. Don't remove the dressing until the inflammation subsides, as it will break the new skin.

MORSELS OF GASTRONOMY.

The perfection of rice boiling, Chinese style, is to have every grain separate.

In these days there seem as many kinds of olive oil, so called, as there were colors in Joseph's coat.

Women eating corn in public would look less ridiculous and more graceful if they broke the ear in two.

A German professor says all who eat watercress consume at the same time a full assortment of minute insects.

Somebody writes to say it is no longer "good form" to use a bit of bread in connection with the fork in eating fish.

Whipped cream with peaches is a dainty dessert at Newport dinners, served in front of glass saucers, and, strange to say, eaten with a fork.

Entrees and salmis are the dishes to be avoided at the generality of watering place hotels, as they are usually made of what is suggestively known as "leavings."

Turkey is served at most hotels all the year round, so that when Thanksgiving comes the "national bird" has lost nearly all its palatable charms.—New York Mail and Express.

ATCHISON PHILOSOPHY.

Some people are always getting into a box, and asking us to lift the lid.

There is nothing in the way of sin that does not cost more than it is worth.

A man never becomes so homely that he is not handsome to the woman he is good to.

Criticism is praise if it comes from a friend, and blame if it comes from an enemy.

If you build woods on credit, you will be expected to feel grateful for a dead beat's trade.

There is hope for the man whose crime seems darker to himself than it appears to the world.

When you break a promise you weaken the thread by which you hold your friend's confidence.

Our wisest thought is the one which we always lack words to express. Foolish thought finds easy expression.

One friend who likes you because he can't help it, is worth a thousand friends who like you for policy's sake.—Atchison Globe.

The Sohmer Pianos are recommended to the public for their power, purity, richness and quality of tone, and are considered the most durable and reliable pianos ever made.

Gen. Longstreet is understood to be engaged on a history of the civil war, and especially of the campaigns in which he had a share.

Harry H. Byram, late editor in chief of The Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph, who died of pneumonia, was a Maine man by birth and about 45 years of age.

John Greenleaf Whittier has attended the little Friends' church in Amesbury, Mass., where he lives, for a period of fifty years, but has never been known to "speak in meeting."

Alma Tadema says that he learned English from two masters—one a poet, the other a footman. From the former he acquired the use of elevated, from the latter the ordinary language.

Justice Miller, of the supreme court of the United States, has been on the bench twenty-eight years. His commission was signed by President Lincoln, and dates back further than any other member of the court.

The Rev. John Eberly, of Pottstown, Pa., is one of the few men able to live on one meal a day. For thirty years he has subsisted on only one meal a day, yet he is apparently hale and hearty, but so thin as the proverbial rail.

Henry Kelck, of St. Joseph, Mich., celebrated his 105th birthday lately. He was a drummer boy in the war of 1812, going to the front with his father. He was born in Deerfield, Conn., June 28, 1785. Mr. Kelck has scarcely a gray hair among his plentiful locks.

BIBLE NOTES.

In the persecutions of A. D. 303 special effort was made to destroy the sacred books of the Christians. All who had them or knew of them were required to bring them forth to be burned or turn informers.

Guthrie calls the Bible "an armory of heavenly weapons, a laboratory of infallible medicines, a mine of exhaustless wealth. It is a guide book for every road, a chart for every sea, a medicine for every malady, a balm for every wound."

Lady Jane Grey was a great Bible reader, and while her parents were attending the chase she would remain at home studying its pages. She said, "All amusements of that description are but a shadow of the pleasure which I enjoy in reading this book."

The poet, Collins, in the latter part of his life withdrew from his general studies and traveled with no other book than an English New Testament. A friend was anxious to know what companion such a man of letters had chosen. The poet said: "I have only one book, and that book is the best."

The inhabitants of the South sea islands were much rejoiced when copies of the Bible were first given to them. One old native preacher held up his Bible before the whole congregation and said: "My brethren and sisters, this is my resolve, the dust shall never cover my Bible, the moth shall never eat it, the mildew shall never rot it. My light! my joy!"—Christian Intelligencer.

COURTLY PASTIMES.

King William of Holland will at any time turn aside from the discussion of business to have a game of cards.

The young emperor of Germany adores chess, and will hang over a table for hours at a time trying to work out a problem.

The czar is devoted to the game of tric-trac, and whenever he gets a leisure hour he will slip away to indulge in his favorite pastime.

The future king of England, the Prince of Wales, is devoted to cards and horse racing, and gives about as much time to the one as to the other.

King Humbert of Italy is never so happy as when on a fishing expedition. He will patiently wait for hours for a bite, and expresses unbounded gratification when he has good luck.

AN IRISH ARAB.

A private soldier of the 21st Regiment, Highlanders, having deserted during Abdi-Soudan's occupation of Egypt, was taken by a party of Arabs and sold to one of the petty sovereigns of Africa. His knowledge of artillery and the use of small arms, however, soon became apparent, and his advice and instruction enabled the Sultan to defeat many of the neighboring tribes, with one of the other of whom he was continually at war. The soldier, being allowed to follow, made such profitable use of his powers that he actually became, in time, Grand Vizier.

Upon his return to England he subsequently used his experience as the basis of a novelette, in another manner; was founded the charming story of Ouida upon; and the wondrous adventures which he placed in the course of the drama; the author, for his own purposes, taking the liberty of converting him into an Irishman.

"MASK OF LIFE."

This romantic drama will have a grand production in this theatre on Monday evening next. It is universally acknowledged to be one of the most powerful and absorbingly thrilling plays of the period. Last season it was presented in a number of the principal cities of the country with only an ordinary cast, by way of experiment, and the newspaper critics declared it compared with the greatest dramas known to the stage of our day. In the South, particularly, it made a tremendous hit, and the late Henry W. Grady, the brilliant editor of the Atlanta Constitution, said in an editorial that "it is the most powerful drama ever written by an American author; it compares with the best of Sardou's productions, in interest as well as in quality, and if the people understood the power of this play the theatres would not be large enough to hold the audiences that would greet it on its tour." Praise from such a source is praise indeed.

This season the company presenting "Mask of Life" is one of the strongest that ever appeared in a play in this country, such names as

MR. J. H. GILMOUR.

Frazer Coulter, T. W. Doyle, Odell Williams and Annie Mayor (who made an emphatic success last season in this city), Josephine Plowe-Day and Adele Palmo appearing in the bill. The scenery has all been painted expressly for this event and is costly and elaborate. Seats are now on sale for "Mask of Life," which, no doubt, will be greeted Monday evening by one of the most distinguished audiences of the season.

ROYAL FLUSHES.

King Otho of Bavaria has fits of dementia in which he imagines he is a lion.

The empress of Germany, Fredericka, is a lineal descendant of the last Norwegian king, Hakau V. who died in 1319.

The crown princess of Denmark is the tallest princess in the world. Her height is announced to be 6 feet 3 inches.

Count Casade de Miranda, the husband of Christina Nilsson, has been appointed an under secretary of state in the new Spanish ministry.

Lord Randolph Churchill does not regard himself with great favor. His political life, he thinks, has been a failure and racing has been more in his line.

Emperor William is said to be very democratic and genial while in Berlin, but very aristocratic and exclusive when at his private residence in Potsdam.

The young emperor of Germany has dismissed Count Stosselsi with the reason for refusing to admit to the royal presence a deputation of workingmen recently.

A niece of Pope Leo has married Count Salvator Salimei. The bride is a daughter of the pope's sister. Her dowry was $2,400, to which the pope contributed $1,000.

Johann Orth, the Austrian archduke who resigned his rank to become a sea captain, persists in leading the simplest domestic life, despite all temptations to do otherwise.

Queen Victoria cares nothing about old lace. The Princess of Wales is fond of it, but says she can't afford to buy it. But the princess gets some pretty little presents of old lace sometimes.

The countess of Vista Gonzales is considered the handsomest woman in Madrid. She is tall, graceful in figure, with large black eyes and a beautiful complexion, and devotedly attached to her husband.

The king of Italy wants to be emperor, too, and thinks of making himself "emperor of Erythrea and Eastern Africa" on the strength of his protectorate of Abyssinia and some colonies on the Red sea.

A complete list of the ushers at wives shows that he has five first class wives, varieties, twenty-four second class or morganatic wives, and some 250 third class partners, variously described as "favorites" and "slaves."

The empress of Germany is the possessor of an unconvertably temper, and her outbursts at times are said to be exceedingly humiliating to her friends. This may explain why the emperor takes a long summer trip alone.

RAILWAY TIES.

The Russian government is building a railroad 200 miles straight line from Moscow to Beletzky sea, which it is expected will be abandoned within five years.

Jay Gould, who was once the financial head of the Northern Pacific and whose disastrous failure precipitated the panic of 1893, has commenced another fortune.

During the first three months of 1890 there were exported from Scotland locomotives of a total value of £99,469, against a quarterly average of £59,000 in 1889, and of £71,000 in 1888.

The popular belief that great speed is attended with great danger is no longer firmed by the experience in England railways. In 1887 40,000,000 passengers were carried and only one fatal accident occurred.

A block system apparatus was recently exhibited which automatically rings a bell and shows a warning in the engine cab when entering a block that is occupied by another train. The train continues until the train ahead leaves the block.

Cars on the Jungfrau railway have movable flaps, which may be extended until they nearly touch the ground. In case of this way the car becomes a kind of piston acting on the ground as a buffer, and the air acts as an extremely elastic spring.

The Baltimore and Ohio is running seven several routes between the East and the Ohio River. Philadelphia and Washington. The only change made in the passenger rates is the reduction on the grade lines about 25 per cent. and also a reduction in variable from a mile to a mile.

A remarkable extension has been made by the Argentine railroads. The concessions from which railroads are granted by the government of that country have been changed so that they are bound to construct a certain number of miles each year, or forfeit the concession. The result is that the railroads are now building at the rate of 1,000 miles per year, and it is expected that the railway system of the country will be completed in the next ten years.

Statistics show the progress and prosperity of railways on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The Quebec and North Shore railway, which runs from Quebec to Lake St. John, was opened in 1888. In that year it carried 40,000 passengers and 50,000 tons of freight. In 1889 it carried 60,000 passengers and 70,000 tons of freight. The Quebec and Lake St. John railway, which was opened in 1888, carried 7,450 tons of freight. In 1889 it carried 10,000 tons of freight.

The Sohmer Pianos are recommended to the public for their power, purity, richness and quality of tone, and are considered the most durable and reliable pianos ever made.

By spraying the region of the external ear with ether, Drs. Henoque and Fridel, of Paris, render the deutal nerves insensible, and extract teeth without pain or general anæsthesia.

Two French biologists, MM. Apostoli and Lequerriere, have hit upon a new weapon against all diseases occasioned by bacteria. This weapon is none other than a constant galvanic current of a low degree of intensity.

A series of observations for 100 consecutive days has been made at the top of the Eifel tower on the velocity of the wind. The velocity at that elevation was three times in the average greater than nearer the ground.

It is supposed that the loss of light from electric lamps in a fog, as compared with the yellow gaslight, is owing to the blueness of the fog or mist, the electric light merely intensifying the blueness, while the gas still pierces the gloom.

In the new audio-telephone that has recently appeared in England the principal characteristic is the mouthpiece, the particular advantage of which is that it intensifies the sound waves, making it possible to carry on a conversation in an ordinary tone of voice.

A new shell has lately been invented by an Austrian for the purpose of scattering oil over the waves during a storm. It is a wooden cylinder, lined with shellac to keep the oil from penetrating the wood, and it carries in addition a calcium light, which illuminates the water for a considerable distance.

LIGHT AND AIRY.

He Envied It.

A pretty girl with a horrid cold
Spoke to a horrid man
And said, "A cold's a horrid thing."
And then to cough began—
"Sometimes I think—in fact I fear"—
This said between each cough—
"That by this horrid cold some day
I will be carried off."
The horrid man then told anew
The story that is old—
"I wish," said he, "that I might be
That horrid, horrid cold."
—Whiteside Herald.

His Question.

Young Mr. Hankinson had sat in embarrassed silence for some moments looking at the smoothly fingers of the lovely girl as if taking the measure of one of them for a golden circlet. Presently he spoke.

"Miss Pinkie," he said, "you will not think I am taking too great a liberty, I hope, if I ask you a—a somewhat personal question?"

"Certainly not, Mr. Hankinson," replied Miss Pinkie, softly.

"Then please tell me," he rejoined, "how you got those warts off your knuckle. My little sister's hands are covered with them."—Chicago Tribune.

She Was Joking.

"No," said she, "I—I can be only a sister to you."

"Very well," said he, "I must be going! I had expected a different answer, but—well, good night!"

"George," she faltered, as he started out into the night, "George!"

"What is it?" he asked crossly.

"Aren't you going to kiss your sister good night?"

He did not go.—Lawrence American.

Disappointing.

He had pleaded long and earnest,
Sued with prayer and sued with sigh,
But although the time sped swiftly
She had deigned him no reply;
Yet at last her lips were opened,
All his fear and dread were gone,
And he waited for her answer,
But 'twas nothing but a yawn.
—Philadelphia Times.

Her Regards.

"You look upon me at least as a friend?" he murmured, grasping her hand.

She threw down her eyes and her voice whispered:

"Oh, yes."

"And can I dare to hope to be looked upon as a still nearer, dearer relation?"

She spoke coldly and freely, as a maiden should:

"Certainly; I will henceforth regard you as a brother."—Philadelphia Times.

She Escaped a Funster.

"Clara—Miss Simpkins," he murmured, as he reached for his hat after her declination, "when you think of a little road where we used to wander in the happy month of July, beneath the branches of the green trees, I pray you think of me. For I am like that little road—a lover slain;" and so he passed out of her sight.

And then she was glad she had answered no.—Harper's Bazar.

Oh!

"But, sir, to kiss
A miss
Is wrong, you see."
"I do not kiss
Amiss
When I kiss thee."
—Washington Post.

Not That Day.

"Did any man ever kiss you before, darling?"

"Before—today? No, Edward, you are the first."

And the recording angel didn't need to drop a tear to blot out the fib, for he was the first that had kissed her that day.—Philadelphia Times.

Natural Mistake.

Handsome Young Woman (pointing to hammock)—How much?

Salesman—We guarantee it for 600 pounds, pardon, miles. One dollar and fifty cents.—Chicago Tribune.

A Clew.

While a hammock rung they sat;
But how the two behaved
One could not tell, it was so dark,
Had it not been for the remark,
"O George, you must get shaved!"
—Philadelphia Press.

CURIOUS BUT TRUE.

It is generally understood that the hair and nails grow faster in hot weather than in cold.

It is a matter of tradition in Japan that fruit grows upon the bamboo when there is to be a famine in that country.

A. H. Jones, of Pulaski county, Pa., is one of seven brothers, the first name of each of whom begins with the letter A.

A carpet used in a room of the mint after being in wear some years was recently burned in pans and yielded $2,500 worth of gold.

Mr. Sincerity, of The Philadelphia Record, has found a calf six months old which carries its heart in a small sac under the skin of its neck.

The R. S. V. P. on a card of invitation to a recent public dinner was understood by a provost of an ancient burgo to mean, "Reply Solicited via Post."

Lincoln, Mo., has a blind man who is a clever croquet player. He plays by information as to direction and by measuring the distance by walking to the object ball.

A negro draysman, while driving a dray heavily loaded with merchandise at Macon, lost his balance and fell off, and the dray passed directly over his neck. Strange to say, it was not broken, but the negro's injuries were serious.

Edward Cranch, who kept a little sidewalk stand in Chicago, dropped dead not long ago. The attendants at the morgue were astonished to find sewn in the underclothing over $4,000 and a deed for the house in which he lived.

J. Price, of Savannah, Ga., has a curiosity in the shape of a young mocking bird entirely white. Price purchased the bird from a negro trapper on the Waters road, who brought it into town. A white mocking bird is a great rarity.

A man was brought to the hospital at Eastburn, London, who had driven four nails into his skull three or four inches deep. He suffered from severe headache, and took that means to cure it. The nails were extracted with difficulty.

A French statistician has just ascertained that a human being of either sex who is a moderate eater and who lives to be 70 years old consumes during "the days of the years of his life" a quantity of food which would fill twenty ordinary railway baggage cars.

John Foss, of Medaryville, Ind., was struck by lightning, every bone in his body being broken. Downey Knotts, seated on the wagon seat beside him, escaped unhurt, and so did the horses Foss was driving, but a dog trotting under the wagon was killed.

Darius L. Goff, of Pawtucket, R. I., who has a fancy for mechanical curiosities, possesses a clock that never runs down. Through an ingenious contrivance it is kept wound by the simple opening and closing of the front door of the house.

A watch in the form of a shirt stud has been made by an artisan in Newcastle, England. With it are worn two other studs. The three are connected by a strip of silver inside the shirt. The watch is wound by turning the stud above and the hands are set by turning the one below.

A NEW THEATRE.

The Garden Theatre, on Madison Avenue and Twenty-sixth street, corner of the Amphitheatre, is now almost completed, and a thing of beauty and joy to behold. Nothing has been spared in its artistic decoration. The seating capacity will be 1,200, and all will be comfortable. The first play, "Her Ball," the roaring but elegant comedy, with which Mr. T. H. French will open the latter part of September, will begin seat sales and with such popular artists as Miss Isabel Marsden, Miss Isabelle Evesson, Mrs. Louise Eldridge, Miss Edith Kenward, Messrs. Georgmead and Lonsdale, Mr. Wilfred Lackaye, Mr. Le Poix, Mr. John W. Jennings, and Mr. Arthur Lumsden, the cast, the play is certainly destined to a most unsurpassed and lasting success in this city. It has just passed its thirty-fourth night in London, and is still the reigning comedy attraction in that capital.

ROYAL FLUSHES.

King Otho of Bavaria has fits of dementia in which he imagines he is a lion.

The empress of Germany, Fredericka, is a lineal descendant of the last Norwegian king, Hakun V, who died in 1871.

The crown princess of Denmark is the tallest princess in the world. Her height is announced to be 6 feet 3 inches.

Count Casa de is Miranda, the husband of Christina Nilsson, has been appointed an under secretary of state in the new Spanish ministry.

Lord Randolph Churchill does not regard himself with great favor. His political life, he thinks, has been a failure and racing has been more in his line.

Emperor William is said to be very democratic and social while in Berlin, but very aristocratic and exclusive when at his private residence in Potsdam.

The young emperor of Germany has dismissed Count Seneschal von Liebenau for refusing to admit to the royal presence a deputation of workingmen recently.

Lord Randolph Churchill does not regard himself with great favor. His political life, he thinks, has been a failure and racing has been more in his line.

Emperor William is said to be very democratic and social while in Berlin, but very aristocratic and exclusive when at his private residence in Potsdam.

The young emperor of Germany has dismissed Count Seneschal von Liebenau for refusing to admit to the royal presence a deputation of workingmen recently.

A niece of Pope Leo has married Count Salvator Salimei. The bride is a daughter of the pope's sister. Her dowry was £2,400, to which the pope contributed £1,600.

Johann Orth, the Austrian archduke who resigned his rank to become a sea captain, persists in leading the simplest democratic life, despite all temptations to do otherwise.

Queen Victoria cares nothing about old lace. The Princess of Wales is fond of it, but says she can't afford to buy it. But the princess gets some pretty little presents of old lace sometimes.

The countess of Villa Gonzales is considered the handsomest woman in Madrid. She is tall, graceful in figure, with large black eyes and a beautiful complexion, and devotedly attached to her husband.

The king of Italy wants to be emperor, too, and thinks of making himself "emperor of Erythrea and Eastern Soudan" on the strength of his protectorate of Abyssinia and some redoubts on the Red sea.

A complete list of the sultan's wives shows that he has five first class wives, valides, twenty-four second class or morganatic wives, and some 250 third class partners, variously described as "favorites" and "slaves."

The empress of Germany is the possessor of an ungovernable temper, and her outbursts at times are said to be exceedingly humiliating to her friends. This may explain why the emperor takes a long summer trip alone.

THINGS WELL TO KNOW.

A little ammonia in tepid water will soften and cleanse the skin.

Gas is always objectionable in a sick room, as it exhausts the air, and in bedrooms generally it should not be used.

Old brass may be cleaned to look like new by pouring strong ammonia on it and scrubbing with a scrub brush; rinse in clear water.

Linoleum can be waxed, like a hardwood floor, and polished with a regular polishing brush. It is generally treated in this way in English houses.

Lamp chimneys are easily cleaned by holding them over the steam from a teakettle, and rubbing them with a soft cloth and polishing with paper.

If the fat in the frying kettle is hot before you are ready for it, put in a dry crust of bread. It will not burn as long as it has something to do, only when it is left idle.

A good gargle for sore throat: Vinegar, one wineglassful; honey, two tablespoonfuls; water, half a tumblerful. Pour the water on the honey, and stir it up; add the vinegar and use cold.

In baking all things to be browned on the bottom must be set directly on the bottom of the oven, but those things that are to be browned only on top or merely heated may be set on the grate.

Flowers are always bright and cheering, but they should not always be left in a room at night, and care should be taken to change the water frequently, and not leave them there at all when faded.

All delicate and fancy hosiery should be soaked in salt and water before wearing, and stains of leather on stockings can be taken out by dipping them into chlorine water before putting them into soapsuds.

DAUGHTERS OF EVE.

Mrs. Martin M. Hicker, the first woman admitted to the New Hampshire bar, never receives retainer or accepts a fee.

Mrs. Theodore Irving, the founder of the order of King's Daughters, is the widow of a nephew of Washington Irving.

Christine Nilsson has lost her voice, is partially deaf, and her chief delight in life is gambling. She risks heavily at Monte Carlo.

Bismarck's wife is expert with the needle and is famous as a cook. She is also remarkable for her simple piety and for her charities.

Miss Mollie E. Seawall, a recently successful novelist, who took the $500 prize offered by a Boston periodical, is a niece of President Tyler.

Miss Grace King, the Louisiana novelist, is a woman of stately figure and striking features. Her hair and eyes are brown and she is 27 years old.

Mrs. De Maitre, the sister of Robert Louis Stevenson, is a contributor to the London magazines and one of the wits of the Literary Ladies' Dinner club.

Olive Logan, the pioneer of newspaper women, has had the honor of being elected a member of the Incorporated Society of Authors, of which Lord Tennyson is president.

Mrs. T. R. Gibbs, of Newport, gives the poor children of that town an annual summer festival, when they are entertained under great lawn tents, with music, dancing and games.

The soprano of Dr. Paxson's church, New York city, Miss Clementina De Vere, receives $4,500 a year for her services, or $125.50 each Sunday. This is said to be the highest salary ever paid to a choir singer.

Mrs. Labouchere, wife of the famous journalist, has invented a new social entertainment, called "a morning garden party." At each of these fetes a fairy play is performed by a troupe of children.

Mrs. Dorothy Tennyley, it is said, is one who cares little or nothing for dress, having always used her keen artistic sense of color and form in her work to so great an extent that her interest in these things has almost exhausted itself there.

Miss Belle Curry, of Evanston, Ills., superintendent of the telephone system in that city, was examined as to her ability to fill the position was asked, "Can you climb a pole?" "Even that I can do, if necessary," was her prompt answer.

Miss Hattie Hester is the United States mail carrier over the route from Condar, Laurens county, to Lothair, Montgomery county, Ga., a distance of forty miles through a sparsely settled region, which she traverses three times a week.

THE LATEST IN JEWELS.

A pretty silver match stand is formed by two shells standing upright in a shell of larger size.

A cigarette box of plain silver having an anchor with a rope coiled to form the word "Cigarettes" is a novelty.

Several beautiful pink pearls mounted on the cover of an elaborately chased Roman gold bonbon box produce a pleasing effect.

Cuff links, each formed by a coiled snake with a diamond set in the head, are sure to inspire admiration wherever shown.

A scarfpin, formed by a gold rope artistically coiled around a silver sounding plummet, is an appropriate gift to a yachtsman.

A bracelet that has recently been revived is a close gold chain band which can be fastened with a buckle at any point of its length.

Three diamond owls, diminishing in size and cleverly presented as sleeping as a gold bough, make a lacepin of attractive appearance.

A beautiful heart shaped opal, apparently pierced by a shaft of diamonds and rubies, is a lacepin recently produced by a New York jeweler.

A gold mosquito with emerald eyes and having its proboscis thrust through a fine white pearl is a scarfpin quite suggestive to the summer boarder.

Light blue enameled fleurs-de-lis, inserted in the center of an oval white enameled disc, encircled with small brilliants, mounted in Roman gold, for cuff links, have met with considerable favor.

STRAY BITS.

Felix Moschcles is to paint Mary Anderson Navarro in her bridal robe.

The deepest mine in the world is at St. Andre du Porrier, France, and it yearly produces 300,000 tons of coal.

Wag Yin Wan, a Chinese millionaire, has bought 15,000,000 acres of land in Tehuantepec, where he will establish a city.

A hungry horse made a meal on half a box of straw hats, near which his employer had tied him, before a dry goods store in Norristown, Pa.

Frau August Schmidt, of Berlin, 33 years old, recently announced the birth of her sixteenth child. She has had four pairs of twins, and is the wife of a porter.

The Cunard Steamship company employs not less than 10,000 men, and during the past forty-four years has lost neither a vessel nor a life through accident.

At an equality of age the male is generally heavier than the female, except toward the age of 12, when the average weight in both sexes is about the same.

One of the Berlin hotels was lately robbed by two persons in the garb of nuns. They were subsequently apprehended when one of them was discovered to be a man.

The electric battery has superseded the hose and cold water treatment for taming refractory prisoners in the Ohio penitentiary. It is reported to be very efficacious.

The Pacific coast has not a monopoly on big trees. There is a cypruse tree at Enterprise, Fla., that is 10½ feet in diameter and has a trunk 40 feet in length to the first limb.

The tombstone of the late Mrs. Ann D. Carter, of Philadelphia, bears the following lines cut in marble:

Some have children and some have none,
But here lies the mother of twenty-one.

Heligoland used to be Germany's Gretna Green. Ninety-three runaway couples were married there last year. The island now being under German rule, such marriages cannot take place.

The most magnificent charity fund ever contributed in the world's history was the Johnstown relief fund, which amounted to $4,816,197. Besides this, there were great quantities of the necessaries of life given.

A Hartland, Mich., woman thought she heard burglars while her husband was away and, grabbing an old horse pistol, she blazed away at something she saw in the road. Her husband now bewails the loss of a $200 calf that she fired at.

Richard Tevithick built the first locomotive in 1804, but the first locomotive after the modern idea was built by George Stephenson in 1829. The idea of the construction of a locomotive was given to the world by James Watt in 1790, and patented by him in 1784.

GRAINS OF GOLD.

A good example is the best sermon.

Malice drinketh up the greatest part of its own poison.

Fill a man with enthusiasm, and no room is left for doubt.

The future destiny of the child is always the work of the mother.

Employment is nature's physician, and is essential to human happiness.

Abuse is one of the few things a man can get without earning or deserving it.

You can flatter the worst liar on earth by telling him he is working too hard.

Leisure is sweet to those who have earned it, but burdensome to those who get it for nothing.

There is very little use in making today cloudy because to-morrow is likely to be stormy.

Hurt no man's feelings unnecessarily. There are thorns in abundance in the path of human life.

Learning is a good thing for a man to have in his upper story if he has common sense on the ground floor.

Let us be of good cheer, remembering that the misfortunes hardest to bear are those which never come.

Constant application to pleasure takes away from the enjoyment, or rather turns it into the nature of a very burdensome and laborious business.

The happiness that is quite understood at last becomes tiresome. To give it a zest we must have ups and downs. The difficulties which are usually mingled with love awaken passion and increase pleasure.

LIGHT AND AIRY.

He Envied It.

A pretty girl with a horrid cold
Spoke to a horrid man
And said, "A cold's a horrid thing."
And then to cough began—
"Sometimes I think—in fact I fear"—
This said between each cough—
"That by this horrid cold some day
I will be carried off."
The horrid man then cold anew
The story that is old—
"I wish," said he, "that I might be
That horrid, horrid cold."
—Whiteside Herald.

His Question.

Young Mr. Hankinson had sat in embarrassed silence for some moments looking at the shapely fingers of the lovely girl as if taking the measure of one of them for a golden circlet. Presently he spoke.

"Miss Pinkie," he said, "you will not think I am taking too great a liberty, I hope, if I ask you as—a somewhat personal question?"

"Certainly not, Mr. Hankinson," replied Miss Pinkie, softly.

"Then please tell me," he rejoined, "how you got those warts off your knuckle. My little sister's hands are covered with them."
—Chicago Tribune.

She Was Joking.

"No," said she, "I—I can be only a sister to you."

"Very well," said he, "I must be going! I had expected a different answer, but—well, good night!"

"George," she faltered, as he started out into the night, "George!"

"What is it?" he asked crossly.

"Aren't you going to kiss your sister good night?"

He did not go.—Lawrence American.

Disappointing.

He had pleaded long and earnest,
Used with prayer and sued with sigh,
But although the time spent swiftly
She had deigned him no reply;
Yet as I've her lips were opened,
All he feared and dread were gone,
And he waited for her answer,
But 'twas nothing but a yawn.
—Philadelphia Times.

Her Regards.

"You look upon me at least as a friend?" he murmured, as they sat on the sofa.

She threw down her eyes and her voice whispered.

"Oh, yes."

"And can I dare to hope to be looked upon as a still nearer, dearer relation?"

She spoke cordially and freely, as a maiden should.

"Certainly; I will henceforth regard you as a brother."—Philadelphia Times.

She Escaped a Punster.

"Clara—Miss Simpkins," he murmured, as he reached for his hat after her declination, "when you think of a little road where we used to wander in the happy month of July, beneath the branches of the green trees, I pray you think of me. For I am like that little road—a lover slain!" and so he passed out of her sight.

And then she was glad she had answered no.—Harper's Bazar.

Oh!

"But, sir, to kiss
A miss
Is wrong, you see."
"I do not like
Amiss
When I kiss thee."
—Washington Post.

Not That Day.

"Did say man ever kiss you before, darling?"

"Before—today? No, Edward, you are the first."

And the recording angel didn't need to drop a tear to blot out the fib, for he was the first that had kissed her that day.—Philadelphia Times.

Natural Mistake.

Handsome Young Woman (pointing to hammock)—How much?

Salesman—We guarantee it for 600 pounds—beg pardon, miss. One dollar and fifty cents.—Chicago Tribune.

A Clew.

Within a hammock snug they sat;
But how the two behaved
One could not tell, it was so dark,
Had it not been for the remark,
"O George, you must get shaved!"
—Philadelphia Press.

THE ENGLISH GRAND OPERA SEASON.

The Second Season of Grand Opera in English will begin here on Monday Evening, May 26th, opening with Gonnod's Master work "Faust," which will be sung all of that week, as well as Decoration Day (Friday) Matinee and Saturday Matinee. On Monday, June 2d, Flotow's romantic opera "Martha," will be given for one week. On Monday, June 9th, Balfe's greatest and most popular Opera "The Bohemian Girl," will be produced for one week's run. On Monday, June 16th, Bizet's charming opera, "Carmen," (The Bull Fighter), will receive its first production in this city in English by a Grand Opera Company, and on Monday, June 23d, Verdi's immortal grand opera, "Il Trovatore," will be brought out in superb style.

The Company will number over one hundred people—Soloists, Chorus, Ballet and Orchestra. Among the Singers who will appear are Miss Sophie Traubmann, of the Metropolitan Opera House, Prima donna, Miss Attalie Claire, Prima donna, now with the Patti Opera Company, Mme. K. Kronoh' Miss Annie Myers, Miss Gertrude Swain Mr. E. Montigriffo, leading Tenor of the Emma Abbott Opera Company, Mr. W. H. Lawton, Mr. Frank Baxter, Mr. Myron Maina, Mr. C. Ricci, Mr. L. Langlois, and the world famous Baritone, Mr. G. Tagliapietra.

Those performances of English Grand Opera will be presented with handsome and appropriate costumes, magnificent scenery, stage effects, and every attention to detail, which, together with the popular prices of reserved seats at the Grand Opera House, will undoubtedly insure success of the most delightful kind, for it can truthfully be said, that English Opera on the scale of magnitude and merit offered by the Grand Opera House, has seldom, if ever, been seen in this city.

TURNING OVER NEW LEAVES.

A TRUE STORY.

TURNING a new leaf is often attended with happy results—not always. The boy who was poking around after hickory nuts all unmindful of the sign,

beWaRe of the bul

would have been a large man to-day, with whiskers, had he not commenced too early in life turning the leaves. There is a right time for everything. We turned over a bright new leaf when, heeding the popular clamor for a first-class trading house on Eighth Avenue, we acceded to it, and re-opened the five well-known stores between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-sixth streets, with an immense, entirely new and bright Spring Stock, leaving all old and dead leaves, left on hand by open winter, to the disposition of other concerns.

If you have not already done so, turn over a new leaf yourself. Go to

for the rich, bright and airy things of Spring, for comfort in Domestic Goods, for the latest in Dress Goods and for Bargains beyond compare in all things. Shoes, Suits, Parisian Garments, Underwear, Gloves, Hosiery, Parasols, China Ware, Japan Goods. House Furnishing, Carpets and Upholstery, Boys' Clothing, etc, etc.

HOYT'S
A MIDNIGHT BELL!
SOME DESULTORY TALK FROM AN UNPREJUDICED SOURCE.
The author begs to state this is a legitimate comedy. It is a legitimate comedy because it is in four acts, and farce-comedies are always in three. Its presentation will doubtless result in crippling as many per night as does the average farce-comedy, but remember it is in four acts, and that it has a plot. It may be argued that it is not a strong plot, that it is not a particularly interesting plot; but, on the other hand, it is a modest and unassuming plot, and it may serve the purpose of giving some slight coherence to the proceedings. However, the author is not strenuous on the subject of this plot. If, when the agony is over, it has been found that the characters, scenes and incidents have been presented in an amusing fashion, the author will be perfectly satisfied, and have no feeling regarding anything that may be said about the plot.

English Grand Opera

—TO BE—

MADE POPULAR AGAIN.

The regular spring season of the English Grand Opera will be given at the Grand Opera House, New York, beginning Monday, May 26th, and continue for four weeks. The operas to be sung are: Flotow's "Martha," Gounod's "Faust," Bizet's "Carmen," Balfe's "Bohemian Girl," Verdi's "Il Trovatore," Wallace's "Maritana," and Balfe's Spectacular Opera, "The Enchantress."

Those operas are to be superbly mounted, magnificently costumed and artistically rendered in our own good English language, as the popular prices of this house, and they will, no doubt, prove a most welcome relief from the German tongue so long in vogue in this city. Each opera will have a run of one week, every Monday witnessing a change of performance. Among the artists who will appear are Miss Laura Bellini, Miss Attalie Claire, Miss Camille Muori, Miss Emma Berger, Miss Clara Poole, Madame Eugenie Boner, Mr. Charles Turner, Mr. Frank Baxter, Mr. W. H. Lawton, Mr. Edward Connell, Mr. Myron Miana, Mr. Hermann Gerold and Signor G. Taglipietro. A chorus of sixty, and the necessary orchestra complete this attractive lyric organization.

HOYT'S

A MIDNIGHT BELL!

SOME DESULTORY TALK FROM AN UNPREJUDICED SOURCE.

The author begs to state this is a legitimate comedy. It is a legitimate comedy because it is in four acts, and farce-comedies are always in three. Its presentation will doubtless result in crippling as many per night as does the average farce-comedy, but remember it is in four acts, and that it has a plot. It may be argued that it is not a strong plot, that it is not a particularly interesting plot; but, on the other hand, it is a modest and unassuming plot, and it may serve the purpose of giving some slight coherence to the proceedings. However, the author is not strenuous on the subject of this plot. If, when the agony is over, it has been found that the characters, scenes and incidents have been presented in an amusing fashion, the author will be perfectly satisfied, and have no feeling regarding anything that may be said about the plot.

HOYT'S
A MIDNIGHT BELL!

SOME DESULTORY TALK FROM AN UNPREJUDICED SOURCE.

The author begs to state this is a legitimate comedy. It is a legitimate comedy because it is in four acts, and farce-comedies are always in three. Its presentation will doubtless result in crippling as many per night as does the average farce-comedy, but remember it is in four acts, and that it has a plot. It may be argued that it is not a strong plot, that it is not a particularly interesting plot; but, on the other hand, it is a modest and unassuming plot, and it may serve the purpose of giving some slight coherence to the proceedings. However, the author is not strenuous on the subject of this plot. If, when the agony is over, it has been found that the characters, scenes and incidents have been presented in an amusing fashion, the author will be perfectly satisfied, and have no feeling regarding anything that may be said about the plot.

English Grand Opera
MADE POPULAR AGAIN.

The regular spring season of the English Grand Opera will be given at the Grand Opera House, New York, beginning Monday, May 26th, and continue for four weeks. The operas to be sung are: Flotow's "Martha," Gounod's "Faust," Bizet's "Carmen," Balfe's "Bohemian Girl," Verdi's "Il Trovatore," Wallace's "Maritana," and Balfe's Spectacular Opera, "The Enchantress."

These operas are to be superbly mounted, magnificently costumed and artistically rendered in our own good English language, at the popular prices of this house, and they will, no doubt, prove a most welcome relief from the German tongue so long in vogue in this city. Each opera will have a run of one week, every Monday witnessing a change of performance. Among the artists who will appear are Miss Laura Bellini, Miss Attalie Claire, Miss Camille Muori, Miss Emma Berger, Miss Clara Poole, Madame Eugenie Boner, Mr. Charles Turner, Mr. Frank Baxter, Mr. W. H. Lawton, Mr. Edward Connell, Mr. Myron Miana, Mr. Hermann Garold and Signor G. Tagliapietra. A chorus of sixty, and the necessary orchestra complete this attractive lyric organization.

A MIDNIGHT BELL!

SOME DESULTORY TALK FROM AN UNPREJUDICED SOURCE.

The author begs to state this is a legitimate comedy. It is a legitimate comedy because it is in four acts, and farce-comedies are always in three. Its presentation will doubtless result in crippling as many per night as does the average farce-comedy, but remember it is in four acts, and that it has a plot. It may be argued that it is not a strong plot, that it is not a particularly interesting plot; but, on the other hand, it is a modest and unassuming plot, and it may serve the purpose of giving some slight coherence to the proceedings. However, the author is not strenuous on the subject of this plot. If, when the agony is over, it has been found that the characters, scenes and incidents have been presented in an amusing fashion, the author will be perfectly satisfied, and have no feeling regarding anything that may be said about the plot.

"ARGUMENT OF THE BRIGANDS."

Falscappa, chief of a band of Italian Brigands, has a lovely daughter, Fiorella. A young farmer, Fragoletto, having met and fallen in love with Fiorella during a professional visit of the brigands to his house, and led by his infatuation joins the robber band; and in proof of his courage, waylays and captures the courier of the Prince of Boboli. The Prince strays into their camp in the absence of the brigands, and is assisted to escape by Fiorella. Falscappa learns from paper in possession of the captured courier, that the Princess Grenada, betrothed to the Prince, is on her way to his palace. The brigand chief decides to intercept at a wayside inn the Princess and the escort sent to receive her, and having substituted a portrait of Fiorella for that of the Princess (who the Prince has never seen), and returning the papers found upon the courier, the latter is allowed to go on his way. The brigands, led by Falscappa, visit the inn, secure the landlord and his servants, and assuming the characters, receive and imprison in the inn both the Princess and the escort sent by the Prince to receive her. Disguising themselves as the Princess and her party, the bandits then repair to the Prince's palace, with the ultimate intention of receiving the dowry due the Princess; but their design is frustrated by the timely arrival of the real Princess. The Prince, however, in gratitude to Fiorella for having saved his life, at her intercession, and upon promise of reformation, permits the bandits to depart in peace.

THIS WEEK,

EVANS AND HOEY

Those popular comedians, Evans and Hoey, come to the Grand Opera House the week commencing Monday, January 6th, presenting their new edition of "A Parlor Match," Hoyt's funniest piece which enjoys the reputation of being the greatest farce-comedy success of a generation. It was made such by the brilliant artistic attainments of Messrs. Evans and Hoey, who are recognized as two of the wittiest and cleverest comedians now before the public. "A Parlor Match" is one of those farce-comedies that never grows old, because there is always room for the introduction for something new and pleasing. It is funny because it is made up presented by funny people. There is a why and wherefore for the introduction of the specialties, and they are made part of the comedy and not dragged in without reason. The piece has been materially changed, especially the third act since last seen here. The instrumental music, songs and dances are all new this season and so is much of the "business." Part of the success of Messrs. Evans and Hoey is due to the fact that each year that they come around they have something new to present and it is change the public wants after all.

Among the new specialties introduced this season, is the Long Skirt Dance, by the French Twin Sisters. Four pretty and handsomely costumed young girls will be seen in the "La Bal Masque," which is one of the taking features this season. The Olympia Quartette will be heard again. Mr. Hoey will sing his topical song, entitled "Good By, Good By, Good By," which is quoted everywhere this season. The stars are accompanied by that charming soubrette Miss Minnie French, who still plays "Innocent Kidd," she is graceful and pleasing, and is favorably remembered here, and their company is the best and strongest organization they have ever carried.

NEW LIMITED TRAIN ON THE
NEW YORK CENTRAL

"The increasing popularity of the 'New York and Chicago Limited,' via the New York Central & Lake Shore route, has made the running of a second limited train a necessity. To meet this demand for increased facilities a new train, called the 'Southwestern Limited,' has been placed in service, leaving Grand Central station, New York, every day in the year at 8.50 A.M., via New York Central, Lake Shore and Big Four Route for Cincinnati, Columbus, Indianapolis and St. Louis. It consists of a combination library, smoking and cafe car, a regular smoking car, a regular standard day coach, a dining car for St. Louis, a sleeping car for Cincinnati, and a dining car—all from New York."

THE "CAFÉ" CAR.

This is a new and valuable addition to the luxury of modern railway travel, which has just been introduced by the Wagner Palace Car Company, on the "SOUTHWESTERN LIMITED," the new fast train via the New York Central, Lake Shore and Big Four route, between New York and Cincinnati and St. Louis. It contains, in addition to the regular library and smoking apartment features, a kitchen where you may have prepared a cup of tea and a piece of toast, or a full meal, as your appetite may dictate. Meals prepared in this car are served in the sleeping or drawing-room cars, the passenger paying only for what he gets.

No Extra Charge on this Train.

NEXT WEEK

For Next Week at the Grand Opera House, there will be the strongest of melo-dramatic attractions and one that appeals strongly to popular tastes—a great production of "Hands Across the Sea." Since its successful production in this city early in the season, Henry Petitt's latest and grandest melo-drama has become the sole property of the enterprising managers, Messrs. Jefferson and Taylor, who was confident that they have in this play a worthy successor to their "Dark Secret." "Hands Across the Sea" is one of those plays which have obtained such favor upon the English stage of late years. It is a piece in which ingenuity of situation, happy choice of the the novel in scenery, interesting diversity of character, and a steady occurance of the theatrically picturesque serve to make and evening at the theatre more envoyable. "Hands Across the Sea" was voted an immense success on its first production in Philadelphia, and the run of 100 nights just completed in Boston confirms the verdict. It has been carefully revised by that prince of stage adapters, C. B. Jefferson, and will present many novel points of interest at the Grand Opera House next week. In scenic and realistic effects, this will practically be a new production. The famous artists, Messrs. Goatcher and Young, with their entire corps of artists, have been working night and day for several weeks on the great steamship scene, designed by Mr. Jefferson for this production and fitted the great stage of the Grand Opera House. This scene in the fourth act, it is promised, will make a sensation, that will take the wind out of the sails of all the constructors of marine effects. A novel vein of realism will be a fog at sea, with the vessels signaling each other; the clearing scene, discovering a view of the steamship Australia in a rolling sea, with the French Gunboat in the offing, sending its launch with marines and sailors to search the British steamer for the fugitives. Another touch of realism will be given to the scene in the prison-yard, in which there will be used a fac-simile of a real guillotine constructed from diagrams and measurements made by one of the managers in Paris last summer. While expending several thousands of dollars on the scenic part of this production, Messrs. Jefferson & Taylor have been duly mindful of the dramatic requirements of the piece, and have engaged a remarkably strong company, including Edna Carey, who will appear in the part of "Lillian Melford," with W. G. Beach as "Jack Dudley," and the popular young comedian John Buckstone, in his original character of "Tom Bassett."

NOTE.—A bird peculiar to Australia is the "Giant Kingfisher," or "Piping Crow," or "Musical Magpie," or Settler's Clock," or, to use the term everywhere applied, "the Laughing Jackass." Its extraordinary note, and insane and yet good humored prolonged and loud cachinnation is unique, and so is the appearance of the bird. It is a great Australian favorite, is never shot, and as a consequence is tolerant of man. It is called "Settler's Clock" in the bush by virtue of its regular hilarious uproar at noon tide, and of its far-ahead "salutation to the moon, will equally make any city reserve lively with its note. A dog-show was recently held in the Melbourne Exhibition. Five hundred dogs naturally made themselves audible. But above all the discord was heard the laugh of the Giant Kingfisher.

CHEW VIRGIN LEAF TOBACCO

Oh come, fair Calantha, and turn from the crowd
Those eyes that are shining with love;
Oh, leave them a while! And quarrel and fight for,
Like the fats and the sharps that they frequently are.

And then in the twilight's mystical, romantic,
That lends Time's hideous and fell power to beat,
For the heavenly Pianos, or certain as fate,
Is "The Knell" to win, for the year "

NEW LIMITED TRAIN
—ON THE—
NEW YORK CENTRAL
"The increasing popularity of the 'New York and Chicago Limited,' via the New York Central & Lake Shore route, has made the running of a second limited train a necessity. To meet this demand for increased facilities a new train called the 'Southwestern Limited,' has been placed in service, leaving Grand Central Station, New York, every day in the year at 8.50 A.M., via New York Central, Lake Shore and Big Four Route for Cincinnati, Columbus, Indianapolis and St. Louis. It consists of a combination library, smoking and cafe car, a regular smoking car, a regular standard day coach, a sleeping car for St. Louis, a sleeping car for Cincinnati, and a dining car—all from New York."
THE "CAFÉ" CAR.
This is a new and valuable addition to the luxury of modern railway travel, which has just been introduced by the Wagner Palace Car Company, on the "SOUTHWESTERN LIMITED," the new fast train via the New York Central, Lake Shore and Big Four routes, between New York and Cincinnati and St. Louis. It contains, in addition to the regular library and smoking apartment features, a kitchen where you may have prepared a cup of tea and a piece of toast, or a full meal, as your appetite may dictate. Meals prepared in this car are served in the sleeping or drawing-room cars, the passenger paying only for what he gets.
No Extra Charge on this Train.

A DARK SECRET

"The first and best of The Aquatic Dramas" returns to the Grand Opera. Since its first production in this country it has become a National Success and scored triumph after triumph. This season new scenery of great beauty has been painted for it, making a series of very elaborate and striking stage pitcures. The set representing the old Church at Henley is exceedingly handsome, especially when illuminated for the night effect. Two steam launches are now used, with other river craft innumerable. In the picturesque eight scene these move over the water with colored lanterns, and constitute a most charming and delightful feature, while the excellent singing of a quartette of fine voices adds vastly to the romantic and striking effect.

In the Henley Regatta Scene the World's Champion Oarsman, Mr. Edward Hanlan, will row. Incidental to this stirring scene are a number of novel and surprising specialties, performed by popular and accomplished artists which can not fail to entertain everybody. Among which are the famous Herbert Brothers, acknowledged America's best acrobats. The entire play has been vastly improved, so that it is virtually new throughout, and will scarcely be recognized by those who saw it last season. Every detail of the production has received scrupulous care, and at all points absolute perfection has been attained.

NOTE.—A bird peculiar to Australia is the "Giant Kingfisher," or "Piping Crow," or "Musical Magpie," or Settler's Clock," or, to use the term everywhere applied, "the Laughing Jackass." Its extraordinary note, and insane and yet good humored prolonged and long cachinnation is unique and so is the appearance of the bird. It is a great Australian favorite, it never shot, and as a consequence is tolerant of man. It is called "Settler's Clock" in the belief he is correct at his regular distances uproar at noon tide, and as it is believed "acclimatization is the mean, will equally make any city receive lively what it is not. A fine show was recently held in the Melbourne Exhibition. Five hundred dogs naturally made the house look terrible. But above all the sound was heard the laugh of the Giant Kingfisher.

DARK SECRET

"The first and best of The Aquatic Dramas" returns to the Grand Opera. Since its first production in this country it has become a National Success and scored triumph after triumph. This season new scenery of great beauty has been painted for it, making a series of very elaborate and striking stage pictures. The set representing the old Church at Henley is exceedingly handsome, especially when illuminated for the night effect. Two steam launches are now used, with other river craft innumerable. In the picturesque night scene these move over the water with colored lanterns, and constitute a most charming and delightful feature, while the excellent singing of a quartette of fine voices adds vastly to the romantic and striking effect.

In the Henley Regatta Scene the Champion American Oarsman, George Hosmer, will row. Incidental to this stirring scene are a number of novel and surprising specialties, performed by popular and accomplished artists which can not fail to entertain everybody. Among which are the famous Herbert Brothers, acknowledged America's best acrobats. The entire play has been vastly improved, so that it is virtually new throughout, and will scarcely be recognized by those who saw it last season. Every detail of the production has received scrupulous care, and at all points absolute perfection has been attained.

IN

"FASCINATION."

Beginning Monday, November 4th, handsome CORA TANNER will be the attraction at this theatre, appearing in her charming play, "Fascination." Miss Tanner has achieved a wonderful success in this play. She is called upon to play a dual role, appearing first as a woman and later as a young boy, disguised, in order to watch her lover, whom she suspects of being false to her. The superb work done by Miss Tanner has received the highest kind of praise from the press. She has appeared in all the principal cities, having played the two characters over 325 times, and everywhere her success has been most pronounced. The production here will be in every respect equal to the original. The scenery has all been made new, and will be used here. Regarding the company supporting Miss Tanner, nothing but praise can be said of it. Great care has been used in selecting it, and as the parts are all good, it requires a particularly strong company, and this it has. "Fascination" is sure to fascinate large audiences during its engagement. In addition to the regular Wednesday and Saturday Matinees, a special Matinee will be given on Tuesday, November 5th (Election Day).

Oh, come, Fat Canada, and turn from the crowd
Oh, come then, to Mother Country's proud

NEW LIMITED TRAIN
—ON THE—
NEW YORK CENTRAL

"The increasing popularity of the 'New York and Chicago Limited,' via the New York Central & Lake Shore route, has made the running of a second limited train a necessity. To meet this demand for increased facilities a new train called the 'Southwestern Limited,' has been placed in service, leaving Grand Central Station, New York, every day in the year at 8 50 A.M., via New York Central, Lake Shore and Big Four Route for Cincinnati, Columbus, Indianapolis and St. Louis. It consists of a combination library, smoking and cafe car, a regular smoking car, a regular standard day coach, a sleeping car for St. Louis, a sleeping car for Cincinnati, and a dining car—all from New York."

THE "CAFÉ" CAR.

This is a new and valuable addition to the luxury of modern railway travel, which has just been introduced by the Wagner Palace Car Company, on the "SOUTHWESTERN LIMITED," the new fast train via the New York Central, Lake Shore and Big Four route, between New York and Cincinnati and St. Louis. It contains, in addition to the regular library and smoking apartment features, a kitchen where you may have prepared a cup of tea and a piece of toast, or a full meal, as your appetite may dictate. Meals prepared in this car are served in the sleeping or drawing-room cars, the passenger paying only for what he gets.

No Extra Charge on this Train.

HELD BY THE ENEMY

The Drama is an object lesson for both old and young, and no one is too old to learn that life has a purpose above the ordinary aims and practices of men. In the play we have shown to us in vivid, living pictures how right can triumph over wrong; how noble sentiments and heroic deeds can raise us above the level of the commonplace; how to face trials and fear pain; how to escape from the shadows and find peace and pleasure in the reflected sunshine of contentment and forbearance. In short, it illustrates and makes attractive the brighter and better side of life by drawing a sharp contrast between good and evil. We read of these things and forget them, but the strong, living pictures of the drama are photographed upon our memories for all time. These impressions naturally have their effect and our actions are unconsciously governed by them through the strength of their example. It is true, there are vicious plays, which have the reverse of a good effect upon the mind, but these are few and short lived. Perhaps the best of the plays now being presented in this country is William Gillette's war drama, "Held by the Enemy." It teems with patriotism, has a vigorous, healty motive and mingles the most fascinating humor with the noblest pathos. To witness its stirring action and hear its lofty and heroic sentiments thrills one's heart with the spirit of emulation, while the inherent nobility of the characters—worked out in their own peculiar way—cannot fail to raise the human race in one's estimation and make one feel all the better for it. If anyone is inclined to doubt the crystalized truth of this little sermon, let them go and see for themselves and be convinced. The opportunity is easily available, for "Held by the Enemy" is to be played at The Grand, week Oct. 21st, by one of the strongest traveling companies in the United States.

N. B.—Our Customers and the trade in general will please take notice that we are determined not to carry away a single dollar's worth of goods from our EIGHTH AVENUE STORES. Everything will positively be sold, even if we have to close out the balance of the stock at auction.

GRAND and COMIC OPERA
ON A SUPERIOR SCALE
FOR SUMMER AT 50 CTS.

A Summer Season of Light Comic Opera, together with works of a higher order, will be present d at the Grand Opera House, beginning Monday, June 3d, under the direction of James W. Morrissey. The opening opera will be Flotow's most charming work, "Martha," with all its melodic music, which is thoroughly understood by every lover of what is really beautiful. "Martha" will be followed by a grand production of "The Chimes of Normandy," and each Monday Night will see a change of opera—for the New York public like variety. "Fra Diavolo," "Maritana," "The Bohemian Girl," "Faust," and "Il Trovatore," will each have a hearing at this magnificent theatre.
A company of magnitude and merit, together with a chorus of sixty, and a grand orchestra has been engaged, and with a delightfully cool auditorium, Summer Opera at the Grand a popular prices will undoubtedly prove attractive.

THE "JUDIC" CORSET.
(Registered)
SOLE OWNERS,
Simpson, Crawford & Simpson,
6th Ave. & 19th St., New York.

As several houses are showing imitations of the "Judic," and representing it as the same Corset, we wish it to be distinctly understood that the genuine "Judic" Corset can only be had from or through us, either on this Continent or in Europe.
We take especial pride in recommending it to every lady. It improves all figures, and is the only Corset made that reduces the size of the hips and lengthens the waist without injurious tight lacing.

Messrs. Simpson, Crawford & Simpson,
Dear Sirs:—The new "Judic" Corsets are beautiful. They fit perfectly in every way, and will, in my judgment, improve any figure. With thanks for those made to my order,
I am, Yours cordially,
J. ILLIAN RUSSELL.

ADONIS

DISTRIBUTION OF CHARACTERS:

ADONIS An accomplished young gentleman of undeniably good family, inasmuch as he can trace his ancestry back to the Stone Age, Mesozoic and Paleozoic period, until he finds it running on the Archean time. His family name, by the way, is Adonis. He is also a work of art, and the CHEVALIER DE MAITRAS.....

HENRY IRVING, well-known actor.....

CLEMANTINA, a comedy girl, with recitations, singing the action to the word, and ballet dance.....

LITTO, a tough barber.....

ADOLPHUS FITZLUMMERY, a model dry goods clerk.....

ISAAC, a pawnbroker.....

AM SMALL, a tough barber.....

THE STAGE MANAGER.....

A charming piece of tinted marble, chiseled by Titiana, and brought to life by the Goddess of Art, and assuming the characters specified to escape his tormentors; until weary he requests the Goddess to transform him into his marble statue.

MR. HENRY E. DIXEY.

MARQUIS DE BACCARAT, a highly-polished villain. It is well to describe his character, as no one would look at it, look at him.....

BUNION TURKE, father of Rosetta, an unblushing appropriator of the stock in trade of a well-known and worthy historic miller.....

ROSETTA, his daughter, a simple village maiden, the happy possessor of a clear conscience and a strong will.....

TALAMEA, a Sculptress, who, like most of her sex is in love with her own creations.....

DUCHESS OF ARA, authoress to the verge of eccentricity, rich to the verge of millionaire, wunderful to the verge of guilt.....

ARTEA, a Goddess, Patroness of the fine arts. N. B.—The student will vainly search for this character in the Heathen or any other Mythology.....

ON A SUPERIOR SCALE

FOR SUMMER AT 50 CTS.

A Summer Season of Light Comic Opera, together with works of a higher order will be present d at the Grand Opera House, beginning Monday, June 3d, under the direction of James W. Morrisey. The opening opera will be Flotow's most charming work, "Martha," with all its melodic music, which is thoroughly understood by every lover of what is really beautiful. "Martha" will be followed by a grand production of "The Chimes of Normandy," and each Monday Night will see a change of opera—for the New York public the variety. "Fra Diavolo," "Mariana," "The Bohemian Girl," "Fanet," and "Il Trovetore," will each have a bearing at the magnificent theatre.

A company of magnitude and merit, together with a chorus of sixty, and a grand orchestra has been engaged, and with a delightfully cool auditorium, Summer Opera at the Grand's popular prices will undoubtedly prove attractive.

THE

"JUDIC" CORSET.

(Registered)

SOLE OWNERS,

Simpson, Crawford & Simpson,

6th Ave. & 19th St., New York.

As several houses are showing imitations of the "Judic," and representing it as the same Corset, we wish it to be distinctly understood that the genuine "Judic" Corset can only be had from or through us, either at this Continent or in Europe.

We take especial pride in recommending it to every lady. It improves all figures, and is the only Corset made that reduces the size of the hips and lengthens the waist without injurious tight lacing.

Messrs. Simpson, Crawford & Simpson.

Dear Sirs:—The new "Judic" Corsets are beautiful. They fit perfectly in every way, and will, in my judgment, improve any figure. With thanks for those made to my order,

I am, Yours cordially,

LILLIAN RUSSELL.

MILLINERY.

HAVE you seen any of the new styles in spring millinery yet? If not, better pay us a visit; and, if yes, better pay us a visit all the same. Our importations and domestic orders are coming in faster every day.—Pattern Bonnets from Paris, straw goods, ribbons, flowers, sprays, garnitures and material, we have more of them than we had last week, and though our importations have by no means all arrived, we are really able to show a greater variety of styles than many houses will put on exhibition at their regular spring openings.

In Hats we have over one hundred different styles and colors in MILAN and EXCELSIOR BRAIDS. During the entire coming week we shall offer the choice of any style for

48 CENTS

Another special offering in millinery is an assortment of fine FRENCH FLOWERS and SPRAYS, our own importation. These we mark at

THE

"JUDIC" CORSET.

(Ju-zhetteh.)

SOLE OWNERS,

Simpson, Crawford & Simpson,

6th Ave. & 19th St., New York.

As several houses are showing imitations of the "Judic," and representing it as the same Corset, we wish it to be distinctly understood that the genuine "Judic" Corset can only be had from or through us, either on this Continent or in Europe.

We take especial pride in recommending it to every lady. It improves all figures, and is the only Corset made that reduces the size of the hips and lengthens the waist without injurious tight lacing.

Messrs. Simpson, Crawford & Simpson.

Dear Sirs:—The new "Judic" Corsets are beautiful. They fit perfectly in every way, and will, in my judgment, improve any figure. With thanks for those made to my order,

I am, Yours cordially,
LILLIAN RUSSELL.

New York, Sept. 25, 1888.

PAUL KAUVAR

A Historical Romantic Dramatic Picture of the Reign of Terror During the French Revolution.

The first two acts are laid in Paris, and the last three in La Vendee. The play illustrates the devotion of Paul Kauvar to Dinne, the daughter of a Peer of France. In the first act the famous will be seen, which represents the hero Paul Kauvar's dream of Anarchy. The second Act is the Prison of the Conciergerie, adjoining the Revolutionary Tribunal in Paris. In the last act the Destruction of the Delaroche Chateau by the infuriated Anarchist mob will be represented here by

Tableaux of the Guillotine

OF
CROMWELL'S
Beautiful,
Instructive
AND
Illustrated Lectures.

This gentleman has, for the past three seasons, occupied the Grand Opera House Sunday evenings, delighting audiences served for their intelligence and culture. The popularity of these entertainments is evident from the large attendance each evening of this, his fourth season in New York. During the summer he visits Europe, and with the ease of Alladin he seems to catch the spirit of every place he visits; so much so that he is able to make his auditor almost believe that the journey taken by means of these illustrated and descriptive lectures is a reality.

During the Professor's recent tour of Europe he was afforded unusual facility in gathering views and facts By permission of the British Government he personally photographed scenes in England and Ireland. Also in Sweden, where he photographed the King, Oscar II. Also in Geamany, where the Imperial Government granted him the greatest freedom in his desire to give to his countrymen a comprehensive idea of German progress and independence.

To those who know the genial Professor, no description of his personnel is needed. He lectures in so pleasant and easy a manner that the audtor feels as if a friend was relating artistic experiences, or hand-in-hand was traveling and dreaming away the time, viewing the handicraft of the skilled for ages, as well as delighting in the marvels of to-day.

Professor Cromwell is now acknowledged in his native (New York) city as an essential to its welfare, for thousands attend his Sunday evening lectures who not only enjoy the beauty of the effects on the mammoth screen, but who receive the elements of a liberal education, which, especially to the young, is healthful and beneficial.

The Professor will remain at the Grand Opera House the entire season, and present from time to time the result of his wide and varied artistic experience.

I like my wife to use Pozzoni's Powder because it improves her looks, and is as fragrant as violets. For sale by all druggists and fancy goods dealers.

PROGRAMME.—Continued.

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. ALBERT ANDERSON, will perform the following selections:

1.—OVERTURE.....Gasza Ladra.....Rossini
2.—SELECTION.....Gasparone.....Millocker
3.—VALSE.....Visions D'Amour.....Delbarck
4.—CHARACTER PIECE..."The Lover and the Nightingale".....Langey
5.—POTPOURRI.....The Musical Workbasket.....—
6.—GAVOTTE.....The First Henri Throb.....Ellenberg
7.—SPANISH BOLERO.....Bossini

OF
CROMWELL'S
Beautiful,
Instructive
AND
Illustrated Lectures.

This gentleman has, for the past three seasons, occupied the Grand Opera House Sunday evenings, delighting audiences no'ed for their intelligence and culture. The popularity of these entertainments is evident from the large attendance each evening of this, his fourth season in New York. During the summer he visits Europe, and with the ease of Alladin he seems to catch the spirit of every place he visits; so much so that he is able to make his auditor almost believe that the journey taken by means of these illustrated and descriptive lectures is a reality.

During the Professor's recent tour of Europe he was afforded unusual facility in gathering views and facts By permission of the British Government he personally photographed scenes in England and Ireland. Also in Sweden, where he photographed the King, Oscar II. Also in Geamany, where the Imperial Government granted him the greatest freedom in his desire to give to his countrymen a comprehensive idea of German progress and independence.

To those who know the genial Professor, no description of his personnel is needed. His lectures in so pleasant and easy a manner that the auditor feels as if a friend was relating artistic experiences, or hand-in-hand was traveling and dreaming away the time, viewing the handicraft of the skilled for ages, as well as delighting in the marvels of to-day.

Professor Cromwell is now acknowledged in his native (New York) city as an essential to its welfare, for thousands attend his Sunday evening lectures who not only enjoy the beauty of the effects on the mammoth screen, but who receive the elements of a liberal education, which, especially to the young, is healthful and beneficial.

The Professor will remain at the Grand Opera House the entire season, and present from time to time the result of his wide and varied artistic experience.

To the young face Pozzoni's Powder gives fresher charms; to the old, renewed youth. For sale by all druggists and Fancy goods dealers.

PROGRAMME.—Continued.

The Orchestra under the Direction of Mr. ALBERT ANDERSON, will perform the following selections:

1.—OVERTURE ..... "Morning, Noon and Night." ..... Suppe
2.—SELECTION ..... "Lucia." ..... Donnezetti
3.—FANTASIA ..... "Albion." ..... Bostena
4.—GAVOTTE ..... "Simplicity." ..... Moses

MORIARTY'S SONG OF THE TIMES

I.

Oh, Matrons and Maidens, listen, now do,
A song I will sing you, and speedily too,
Of Furniture fine, and how it is made,
Of the frame work, the fixing, the upholstering and shade.

II.

Now in buying of goods, I know of one place,
That I'm telling the truth is a certain sure case
For thousands have been—Parlor Sets to secure,
At Moriarty's—number one—on avenue four.

III.

The assortment he keeps is so large and so fine
The cheapest—yet best—in the furniture line;
And the terms are so easy—I vow and declare
You'll always find Moriarty act on the square.

IV.

All you that are furnishing your house anew,
Or young folks who are beginning the same thing to do,
Just go to the Fourth Avenue, the number is one,
And you quickly will find your furnishing done.

V.

All folks that are honest and owing to host,
Can have what they want, on terms that will suit,
With a portion paid down and the balance on time,
Moriarty will suit you all goods in his line.

A Thing of Beauty is a Joy Forever.

Henry Burke's Cameo Cigarettes, with their beautiful little holder, will forever be a joy and comfort to smokers. They are made from the best tobacco, and cost no more than the old-fashion and now nearly obsolete cigarette.

Dress Goods !

A FEW WORDS, BUT TO THE POINT.

First on the list come the Dress Goods, of which our assortment just now is singularly full, comprising all the most favored fabrics and embracing a very complete line of new Spring goods Among other things it has an assortment of all wool French cashmeres, all wool homespun suitings and all wool cheviots cloths, which are worth looking at. The widths vary from 36 to 40 inches. The quantities are limited, and we can only undertake to furnish them while they last and will only sell one dress length to each customer They are worth every cent of half a dollar a yard, and we have marked them down to TWENTY-FOUR CENTS A YARD.

Next in order are the Dress Silks—all marked at specially low figures. A fair example of the scale of prices is a line of colored dress silks, in all shades, which cost 60 cents to import and which we have marked down to THIRTY-THREE CENTS A YARD.

Black Goods, too, deserve a word of mention. Many ladies do not realize how large and varied a line of these we keep in stock ner at what very low prices we sell them. For instance, we shall offer to-morrow a combination lot of goods—all wool black cashmeres, all wool homespuns, Henrietta cloth, cloudon cloth and cameis hair suitings, 36 to 40 inches wide We sell them only while they last, as quantity is limited, and will give only one dress length to a customer. They are worth from 50 cents to 75 cents a yard, and we mark them all at the uniform price of TWENTY-NINE CENTS A YARD.

Then there are the Wash Goods, all at low prices. Ginghams, for example, fine quality, new patterns—every lady knows their real value—are marked at only FOUR AND-A-HALF CENTS A YARD.

Do you want a cloak? It's late in the season to be sure! Look at the prices! We are selling English seal plush sacques $25, $30 $35 and $40 goods, satin lined, with channels pockets and real seal trimmings, at half price Or, if you want something cheaper here is a variety of cloth newmarkets, made to sell at $12.50 and $16 50, and marked down to FOUR DOLLARS AND NINETY-NINE CENTS EACH.

Suits, too. Latest styles, best materials, desirable goods in every way. All at low prices. Among the rest some all wool homespun suits, beautifully made and finished, which you would find it hard to match for less than $15, $16 or $20, but of which we offer you your choice at only FIVE DOLLARS AND NINETY-NINE CENTS EACH.

Bleached table damask, 64 inches wide, excellent quality, and if you are a good housekeeper you will know it as soon as you look at it that it's worth $1 a yard Well, we are selling it—but only a limited quantity to each customer, remember, for

THE COMING ATTRACTION.

Mr. and Mrs. George S. Knight

(in their phenomenal laughing success,

"OVER THE GARDEN WALL."

Week Commencing March 22.

The popular and versatile artists, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. S. Knight, appear at the Grand Opera House on Monday, March 24, in their successful and unique farcical comedy, "Over the Garden Wall." This event produced will be treated as one of the marked successes of last season at the Fifth Avenue Theatre where it enjoyed the favor of large audiences throughout the engagement. Mr. Knight who stands at the head of German character comedians, has elaborated and improved the part of J. Julius Su ts, the ambitious politician, and has surrounded for the part entirely new musical songs. Mrs Knight still retains the charming piquancy and shin which made her fam as one of the Worrell Sisters, will again assume the part of Nellie Wraggle, in which she was received with such marked favor everywhere the play was produced. On of the drollest conceptions in the piece Our Own Bridget—"That'll be nice" made a great hit last season in the hands o Mr. Geo. W. Monroe, who will again appear in the part. The other characters are in the hands of capable people. "Over the Garden Wall" has been entirely reconstructed since it has last been seen in New York. New business, characters, song and music have been added, and everything calculated to add zest and go to the performance has been incorporated. "Constructed for laughing purposes only." "Over the Garden Wall" fills the bill and will surely repeat its former success.

A REMARKABLE ESCAPE.

John Kohn of Lafayette, Ind., had a very narrow escape from death. The following story: One year ago I was in the last stages of Consumption; my physicians gave me up to die. I finally got so low that I could not walk across the room. My friends thought I could not live. I then commenced using Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, which I bought of me. I soon got out and took the cars. I am now in perfect health having used no other medicine.

Prof. Cromwell's Sunday Nights.

"Prof. Cromwell has become a necessity to New York."—The World.

Each Sunday evening large audiences greet the Professor and enjoy most heartily his illustrations and descriptions of European cities and objects of interest, his music and his humor. These entertainments have become fixtures at the Grand Opera House, and they will continue indefinitely. The subject Sunday evening will be PARIS, The Beautiful City. Prices.—Admission 35c., Reserved Seats, 25c extra.

HER ATONEMENT.

The successful American drama by Anson Pond will be the attraction here next week.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—At this house last night the passionate scenes of Anson Pond's military and emotional play, "Her Atonement," created a amount of enthusiasm seldom seen in a theatre. The sad story of the drama brought tears, while the comedy portions caused abundant laughter. The scene where Charles LeRoy is murdered, the arrest of Charles Morton for the murder, and the Court Room scene where Morton West makes atonement were most powerfully portrayed. The pictures of Printing House Square and City Hall in the snow at night were loudly applauded. The marching of the regiment for the seat of war, headed by a squad of the old New York police force, brought back recollections of the days of the late war. The regiment returning home created intense feeling. The grand military band and complete drum corps came in for a goodly share of applause. The drama struck the audience harder than ever last evening.—N. Y. News, Sept. 4, 1884.

The engagement is limited to one week, with the usual matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

HOW TO BUY A PIANO.

In former times when pianos were sold from $500 to $800, and then only for spot cash, none but the wealthy could afford such a luxury. But to-day it is very different. We are reminded of this by noticing that the enterprising firm of Horace Waters & Co., of New York, offer elegant new pianos of their own manufacture, at about one-half these prices, and, moreover, sell them in all parts of the country, near and remote, on small monthly payments. By their advertisement in another column we see they offer to sell new pianos on a payment of only $25 cash and take the balance $10 monthly until all paid. On organs their terms are only $15 cash and $5 monthly until paid. This certainly affords all persons of moderate means an opportunity to get a first-class piano or organ at a low price and on easy terms. Our own dealings with Horace Waters & Co. warrant us in stating that all parties who buy of them will be sure to be honorably and liberally treated.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

REGULAR SEASON 1885-86

Begins Monday evening, Aug. 24th, with an elaborate production of Mortimer Murdoch's melo-drama, "A Brave Woman," to be followed Monday evening, Aug. 31st, by a reproduction of Buchanan's successful drama, "Storm Beaten," which played to the capacity of this theatre a year ago. Entirely new scenery and properties will be used in this re production. Of the cast, Edmund Collier has been retained and will repeat his powerful impersonation of Christian Christonson. The company will also include Joseph P. Winter, Archie Cooper, Lizzie C. Hudson, &c., &c.

Of a recent production of "Storm Beaten" at this theatre, the N. Y. Herald speaks as follows: "The spectacular drama "Storm Beaten" was revived at the Grand Opera House last evening with a strong cast. Mr. Edmund Collier played the part of Christian Christanson in a manly, vigorous manner, and Mr. John T. Burke gave a fair rendering of the thankless part of Richard Orchardson. Miss Lizzie C. Hudson's Kate Christianson was an admirable piece of acting, well sustained throughout, and in her scenes with her brother and her lover in the early acts of the play was specially good. Miss Charlotte Wayland made an admirable Priscilla, quite tender and loving; she left little to be desired in her presentation of the daughter of the blind preacher. Both ladies made decidedly favorable impressions on the audience, and won frequent encores. The comedy element of the drama was fairly sustained by Miss May Steele as Sally Marvel and Mr. Bruno as Jabez Greene.

Due notice will be given of the appearance of other stars and combinations—the very best of which have been engaged.

The prices will remain the same, viz: 25, 50, 75 cents and $1.00.

Fanny Davenport in "Pique."

The management will present this evening and during the week Miss Fanny Davenport, who will appear in her popular drama of "Pique," with which her reputation in this city is particularly identified. Indeed, to her talents, that drama is largely indebted for the reputation it has long enjoyed as a profitable stage enterprise. Miss Davenport is peculiarly happy in her delineation of an eccentric character, an example of which she presents in the closing act of "Pique," as well as in several of the drama where she takes leave of her personal identity and establishes a creation for herself. Miss Davenport playing her original part of Mabel Renfrew, and Matthew Scrudish by Mr. J. B. Studley, who is specially engaged to support the leading roles with her. To give due effect to the scenic and other requirements of this admirable work, the management has been most liberal in their expenditure for new and complicated mechanism, scenery and all the details incident to the proper development of the play. At the Wednesday matinee "Pique," and on Saturday afternoon, Miss Davenport will, by special desire, give a matinee performance of "Camille."

THE claims of Summit Water are supported by prominent and responsible people who have been cured by its use

Best Beef, Iron and Wine reduced to 60 cents a bottle, or $1.50, at Campbell's Pharmacy, cor. 5th Avenue and 26th Street. Prescriptions put up with care, and best materials used in preparing them.

SUMMIT WATER is one of the most valuable, pleasant and inexpensive natural remedies ever discovered.

Mme. JULIA RIVÉ-KING,
THE EMINENT PIANIST.
New York, April 16th, 1881.

My wife, Mme. Julia Rivé-King, has been severe suffering for years from General Debility, after treatment from many Eminent Physicians. I can say the use of Summit Mineral Spring Water has cured her. We have just finished a tour of five months, covering nearly every portion of the United States and Canada, we have had the Summit Water shipped to us from Juniata, and believe it priceless, and strongly recommend it to all suffering from general debility.
F. H. KING.

Harrison Comedy Company.

On Monday, May 9th, the Harrison Comedy Company will appear, presenting their original eccentric comedy, written expressly for Miss Alice Harrison, by Mr. B. E. Woolf, and entitled "Phobia." Under Mr. Martin Hanley's management a talented combination of artists have been organized and are in successful operation, of whom Miss Alice Harrison is one of the chief artistic features in association with her equally clever brother, Louis Harrison, who has been at various periods among the brightest members of the Edouin and other comic combinations. They will be supported by a strong and selected company of well known ability.

Koster & Bial's Concert Hall.

At Koster & Bial's Concert Hall will be given another one of those enjoyable and popular musical entertainments which have, despite other attractions elsewhere, secured a large share of the public patronage. For this evening an excellent programme is announced by Gilmore's famous band. Mr. Walter Emerson will give one of his finest cornet solos, Signor Carle will be heard on the piccolo, Mr. D Bianborg will give a violin fantasia and Signor Raffayolo will perform a solo on the euphonium.

Visitors at all the theatres will, upon presentation of their seat-coupons at the door, be admitted free.

Why has SAPOLIO a far better reputation and larger sale than all other scouring soaps combined? Because it does better work, lasts much longer, and is therefore CHEAPER.

Mr. Lawrence Barrett in his Famous Characters.

The engagement of Mr. Lawrence Barrett and his accomplished troupe at this house has been one of the theatrical phenomena of the season. The attendance has been remarkable for its magnitude, and has proven one of the attractions that only happen occasionally. He had the advantage of being associated with a company of extraordinary merit, and consequently met with a welcome that is not always accorded even to such distinguished guests. Every night the house was filled and the impression created was such as might have been expected from such a great actor and his talented company.

This week on Monday and Tuesday Evenings, he will appear as "Hamlet," Wednesday Matinee, "Yorick's Love," Wednesday and Thursday, "Merchant of Venice" and "David Garrick," Friday and Saturday, "Richard III," and at the Saturday Matinee, "The Lady of Lyons."

Monday next Mr. J. K. Emmet as "Fritz in Ireland," supported by a strong and powerful company.

The Wednesday and Saturday matinees, are still continued for the accommodation of families and parties living at a distance who find these daylight gatherings most convenient and agreeable, and which are indeed every way equal to the performances given at a later hour.

"Opera Puffs" Cigarettes! The Amber prepared part that is put in the mouth will not stick to the lips!

Mr. J. K. Emmet as "Fritz in Ireland."

In accordance with the customs, some considerable energy and enterprise displayed by the management of this theatre they give the pleasing announcement of the engagement of the popular comedian Mr. J. K. Emmet who will appear in his world renowned play "Fritz in Ireland," supported by his own talented company.

The play has been continually improved by its constant production, it having been the chief desire during Mr. Emmet's recent tour, and in its present dress cannot but be received with the same appreciative favor which has uniformly greeted the artist's well-recorded characterizations. Our friend himself is the same honest, kind-hearted, sunny souled being as of yore; and in his novel situations puts forward further claims upon both smiles and tears.

Many new songs of his own composition are given by Mr. Emmet, and a genuine and pleasing novelty is introduced by him, in the Chime of Church Bells, and which produces a thrilling and unique musical effect. The various properties used have been brought from Ireland by Mr. Emmet, and are of certified authenticity, thereby greatly adding to the interest of the play.

It will be produced by the management's usual liberality in stage mountings, for which this house has become justly celebrated.

Those desirous of seeing "Fritz" should make early application for seats and thereby avoid disappointment which was the case with many when he appeared here in a previous season, where hundreds were turned away nightly, unable to get even standing-room.

The Amber Tip Cigarettes "Opera Puffs" will not stick to the lips!

"I believe I'll never go to another matinee as long as I live, said young Mr. Guffey, the other day, throwing herself into a chair and looking herself indignantly. "What's the play about?" asked Guffey. "Oh, good enough, I suppose; but that disgusting, stuck-up Mrs. Diffenderfer sat below me with such a lovely bonnet on, that she bought at Pease's, that I couldn't hear a word.

Ehrichs'.

Fichus, Neckties and Embroideries all the attractions on the first floor at Ehrich's. When this house says bargains it means bargains.

"Elegant novelties" are daily announced to the newspapers, but there are some elegant novelties that are determined to remain novel. A pretty girl who does not know it, a man who has published a book of poems and does not tell it, and a bewitching widow who does not intend to marry again. Will they always be novelties?

Some one said, on seeing a lawyer go into the briny deep for a dip, that, to be consistent, he should be non-united. But we disagree with them, we think a brief attire would attach itself well to him.

Ashen-blonde hair is the rage in Paris just now. Unfortunately, people must be born with this color of hair or else have sufficient "base loere" to get an eminent artist to produce the effect; said effect requiring much time and knowledge. So, in despair, golden and auburn blondes are changing their locks into a blue-black, hoping that will this contrival the other. Sugely, we are going back to the days of Pompeii when dear little dogs were dyed pink, blue or any decided shade that their owners admired.

One scarcely ever sees a prettier sight than a pair of twins, young and exactly alike. But equally certain is one apt to think of the other twain's mother—two fine, old maids. How else could the cannibals eat philopenas?

Ehrichs'.

The latest thing at Ehrichs' is the New House Furnishing Department, which has opened with an array of Bargains, which must be seen to be appreciated. Very sensibly the Ehrichs give the go-by to the ever fancy styles of goods, and have lain in a stock of plain, sensible, every-day articles, such as every well-to-do-per stands continually in need of. When we say that they are selling first-class Brooms at 21 cents, and Carpenters at 7 cents, we have said enough to show their principle of doing business.

Koster & Bial's Concert Hall.

The Gilmore Concerts now being given every evening at Koster & Bial's Concert Hall continue to grow in favor. The programme contains variety enough to please all tastes and affords a chance for opportunity to enjoy some of the best of music. The resort is pleasant, the soloists are well chosen, and the entertainment from beginning to end is more complete than anything of the kind in the United States. Your reserved seat ticket will admit you, free of charge, by presenting it at the door.

We take the liberty of calling your attention to the above brand of Flour, asking your consideration of its merits, which we herewith present, believing that if our statements should induce you to give it a trial you will in future become one of its patrons.

We claim it is the best Flour in this market, for the reason it is made from the best portion of No. 1 hard Minnesota wheat, the best in the world; for the reason that it is a "Patent" Flour made after the new "process," which separates the best portion of the kernel from the refuse; for the reason that it is manufactured where the air is always pure and free from malaria, and for the reason that it is manufactured by the most approved machinery yet invented. We claim it will make more bread, pound for pound, than any other flour, hence it is the cheapest. We know it will make the lightest bread, the whitest biscuit, the sweetest buns and most healthful pastry of any flour. We think if you give it a trial you will in future use none other. We have the exclusive control of the "Surprise" and "Niagara Falls" brands of flour of this mill's manufacture in Eastern New York, Western Connecticut and New Jersey, and every barrel, to be genuine, must have a label on one end, showing a view of Niagara Falls, with the mill standing on the banks of the river near by; on the other end the name of our firm.

Surely, we are going back to the days of Pompeii when dear little dogs were dyed pink, blue or any decided shade that their owners admired.

Large plush hats, with a sweeping plume fastened under a handsome ornament, give to many an ordinary face quite a Di Vernon-like look.

"Attention to trifles makes perfection," is the sermonette preached in regard to dress ethics by those who understand what they are talking about.

Sarah silk with cashemire designs is used for tea gowns. It is to be hoped that the tea will be stronger than that anathematized as milk, because it was a lack-tea-I finid.

One scarcely ever sees a prettier sight than a pair of twins, young and exactly alike, But equally certain is one apt to think of the small boy's reason for their existence. How else could the cannibals eat philopsans?

Ehrichs'.

The latest thing at Ehrichs' is the New House Furnishing Depertment, which has opened with an array of Bergains, which must be seen to be appreciated. Very sensibly the Ehrichs give the go-by to the superfluous styles of goods, and have put in a stock of plain, sensible, every-day articles, such as every housekeeper stands continually in need of. When we say that they are selling first-class Brooms at 21 cents, and Clospitores at 7 cents, we have said enough to show their principle of doing business.

Koster & Bial's Concert Hall.

The Gilmore Concerts now being given every evening at Koster & Bial's Concert Hall continue to grow in favor. The programme contains variety enough to please all tastes, and New Yorkers have an opportunity to enjoy some of the best of music. The resort is pleasant, the soloists are well known, and the entertainment from beginning to end is more complete than anything of its kind in the United States. Your reserved seat ticket will admit you, free of charge, by presenting it at the door.

WANTED.—By a young man, a situation in a Wholesale Grocery or Produce Commission House. Competent, and will act in any capacity. Can furnish best of reference. Please address M. Hartwick, at the office of this paper.

supported by a Dramatic Company under the direction of R. E. STEVENS.

The Play produced will be a translation and adaptation from the Spanish of Kistbanez, by W. E. HOWELLS, Esq., called

Yorick's Love

MASTER YORICK, Comedian of Globe Theatre, ... LAWRENCE BARRETT
MASTER EDMUND, Protege of Yorick, ... LOUIS JAMES

MISTRESS ALICE, Wife of Yorick, ...MISS MARIE WAINWRIGHT
MISTRESS DOROTHY, Maid to Alice, ... MISS ADDIE PLUNKETT

Argument of the Play.

The time of the Play is in the days of Shakespeare; the plot a very strong but simple one. Yorick, the Comedian of the Globe Theatre, is married to Mistress Alice, the leading lady at the same playhouse, who is a very beautiful woman, and much his junior. His foster son, Edmund, also an actor, who owes everything in life to Yorick, falls in love with Alice, and she returns that affection. Walton the leading actor of the Globe, discovers their love, and being jealous of Yorick professionally, conceives to acquaint him with the state of affairs. Master Haywood, the manager of the theatre, also has noticed that the two have fallen in love, and endeavors to keep the knowledge from Yorick. Master Woodford has written a play in which the chief characters are a loving husband, a faithless wife and an ungrateful ward. These characters are taken by Yorick, Mistress Alice and Master Edmund, and gradually the truth is unfolded until the end of the play. The last act is on the stage of the Globe Theatre, and during the scene Walton hands Yorick a letter written by Edmund to Alice. Yorick becomes infuriated, and, in the fencing scene, actually kills Edmund.

The Globe Theatre Curtain will be lowered for a few seconds only, during the progress of the Third Act.

OFFICE OF

We take the liberty of calling your attention to the above brand of Flour, asking your consideration of its merits, which we herewith present, believing that if our statements should induce you to give it a trial you will in future become one of its patrons.

We claim it is the best Flour in this market, for the reason it is made from the best portion of No. 1 hard Minnesota wheat, the best in the world; for the reason that it is a "Patent" Flour made after the new "process," which separates the best portion of the kernel from the refuse; for the reason that it is manufactured where the air is always pure and free from malaria, and for the reason that it is manufactured by the most approved machinery yet invented. We claim it will make more bread, pound for pound, than any other flour, hence it is the cheapest. We know it will make the lightest bread, the whitest biscuit, the sweetest buns and most healthful pastry of any flour. We think if you give it a trial you will in future use none other. We have the exclusive control of the "Surprise" and "Niagara Falls" brands of flour of this mill's manufacture in Eastern New York, Western Connecticut and New Jersey, and every barrel, to be genuine, must have a label on one end, showing a view of Niagara Falls, with the mill standing on the banks of the river near by; on the other end the name of our firm.

Ehrich's weekly list of bargains, is a feature of the Sunday Herald and accounts partially for the increase in the circulation of that paper. What renders Ehrich's advertisement attractive, is, that they announce only genuine bargains, and waste no space in vague puffings of goods which might be bought just as cheap elsewhere.

Maggie Mitchell as "Fanchon."

The great popularity of the modern domestic drama, as compared with others of a sensational nature, may be accounted for by its simplicity of character, its realism, and by the striking resemblance which many of the participators in its scenes and incidents, as well as its general surroundings, bear to those witnessed in every day life, and which never fail to elicit the sympathy, admiration, and appreciation of the gratified beholder. Therefore, it is not to be wondered at that the drama above named, with Miss MAGGIE MITCHELL as its principle exponent, should prove such an unparalleled success when first presented. Though frequent repetition of ordinary embodiments has a tendency to render them threadbare, and so unattractive, this cannot truly be said of the "CRICKET," as presented in this never-tiring drama, which appears to grow in interest and appreciation the more it is witnessed, and never fails to draw houses of the fullest and most enthusiastic character.

To meet the popular desire to again behold this favorite drama, with the ever welcome Maggie in her choicest character, the management have entered into an engagement for a limited period, when it will be placed upon their stage with a select cast, who are admirably fitted to fill the respective parts assigned them, and aid the heroine in the development of this captivating domestic story. The management have also had expressly prepared, some new and beautiful scenery to add to its effectiveness.

At the Wednesday Matinee and Saturday Evening, Miss Mitchell will appear as "Little Barefoot."

Monday next Miss Mitchell will appear in her great character of "Jane Eyre," in which she achieved great success in her engagement here last season.

OF GREAT IMPORTANCE TO THE LADIES.—One block above the Grand Opera House, stands the great Dry Goods Establishment of Ehrich's.

Remember that the prices of Cloaks, Dolmans and Ulsters are unquestionably lower than those of any other house in the city.

Annie Pixley in "M'liss."

Monday, December 13th, first appearance at this theatre of the charming young actress, Miss Annie Pixley, in her popular play of "M'liss," supported by a strong cast of characters, which will be produced in the management's usual liberal and effective manner, in regard to scenery, costumes and stage appointments. Miss Pixley has met with great success on her tour, and we predict for her at this theatre, crowded audiences at every representation.

Annual Benefit of the "Elks."

On Thursday afternoon next, the thirteenth annual benefit of the New York Lodge No. 1, of the benevolent protective order of Elks, will occur at the Academy of Music, commencing at one o'clock.

Every theatre in the city will contribute the quota of its chiefest attraction, dramatic and musical, to make the entertainment superior to any heretofore given, and a tribute worthy the noble object for which it is offered. Among the host of volunteers, many of whom are members of the order, are some of the most noted artists in the profession.

Mr. John McCullough, with his Company from the Fifth Avenue Theatre, will give the quarrel scene from the fifth act of "Julius Cæsar." The "Hazel Kirke" Company; Rice's Surprise Party, in "Revels;" the Kirkalfy's with their "Enchantment;" "The Legion of Honor;" from Abbey's Park; the Skidmore Guards, of Harrigan and Hart's Company, the principal artists of the Mapleson Italian Opera Company, and a score of others, will be bright particular features in this marvelous array.

The price of admission has been fixed at $1.50 for reserved seats, $1 for general admission, and fifty cents for family circle. Mr. Welsh Edwards, assisted by Mr. John D. La Thorne, will take charge of the stage management. None who have at heart the furtherance of a benevolent object and the welfare of those whose lives are given to the amusement of the public, will we are sure forget this appeal.

Ehrich's, on Eighth Ave., one block above the Grand Opera House, have set apart Saturday as a special children's day, on which bargains in children's clothing, hosiery, gloves, shoes, etc., will be displayed. This is a move in the right direction, and will be a boon to parents who will thus escape the necessity of keeping their children home from school to be fitted. Messrs Ehrich's promise to make the arrangement a permanent one, and will publish in the Herald, every Saturday, a special announcement of the bargains for that day.

For Week ending May 15th, 1880

Colville's Opera Burlesque Company

Colville's Opera Burlesque Company is now the most perfect organization on the American stage, as its performance last week, of "The Magic Slipper," afforded the most convincing proof. This evening and during the week it will appear in a new burlesque, which is regarded as one of Byron's best, and will be produced here with all the magnificence that will insure success. The talent which is introduced in the cast meets all the requisities that are demanded. It is the extravaganza of "Illustrade Travatore." The engaging and talented Emc Rosean will personate Manrico, the wandering minstrel, and will have the entire company of beauty and ability which is embodied in this brilliant troupe of exquisite artists to insure a capital representation and a merry entertainment.

Matinee Wednesday and Saturday at 2 o'clock.

Monday May 17th Tony Pastor's complete and famous novelty company will constitute the attraction at this theater. It is impressive to inform playgoers that this is without doubt the best organization of the kind on the road, containing as it does the inimitable Pastor himself, the Kernells, Bryant and Hoey, the "Four Eccentrics," the Sisters Felix Sisters, Miss Lina Tetteborne, Pesne and Gilday, Mies Flora Moore, the French Sisters, the three Rankins, Bonne Runnels, Charles Diamond Frank Girard and others. Appearing in a specially selected Programme, and concluding with the great burlesque Go west on the emigrant train.

TONY PASTOR and his STAR TROUPE

Tony Pastor has this year eclipsed all his former managerial triumphs, as displayed in the selection of a combination that will for outvie any heretofore selected even by himself, and that simply means that he has for the season of 1880 and 81, the very best company ever concentrated under one management. Tony and his mammoth troupe will appear at the Grand Opera House for one week, commencing Monday, May 17th, when he will present several new specialties, prepared for his tenth successful summer tour.

Testimonial Benefit to Mr. Wm. McCoy. Treasurer.

To give perfect satisfaction in the above capacity in any public institution, but more especially a theatrical one, requires that the incumbent should be both accomplished and urbane, and gifted with most if not all the virtues vouchsafed the average man. That Mr. William McCoy comes within the bounds of this select circle will be strenuously contended by the many thousan ls with whom he is thrown in daily and nightly contact during the annual theatrical round of entertainments of the Grand Opera House, and we fully endorse that judgment. The large number of volunteers gratuitously tendering their valuable services for Mr. McCoy's benefit on Decoration Day, May 31st—made so unanimous by its almost unprecedented success—is still further evidence that a deserving man is deservedly remembered by his more immediate friends and associates.

The selection of Mr. Simmons's widely of a sprightly and agreeable nature, and calculated to afford some hours of unalloyed pleasure to all the friends of the beneficiare who may be present on this occasion—interpreted as the several characters will be by ladies and gentlemen of high standing in the profession. Full announcement of the programme will be given in a letter edition.

Readers of this paper, wishing Boots, Shoes, Gaiters and Toilet Slippers, can obtain all the various styles for Ladies', Misses', Gentlemen and Youth, excellent in quality, and at popular prices, by patroluing Beavers & Kee. 8th Avenue, cor. 27th st. See advertisement on first page.

William came running into the house the other day, and asked eagerly.—"Wardrobe obarity begin?" "At home," was replied, "in the words of the proverb." "Not by a good deal," rejoined the boy. "it begins at nee (C)."

A St. Louis reporter stated it in this way.—"Miss Angelina Jordan yesterday morning attempted to light the fire with kerosene, and the can bursting, she passed over her last name, and became a part of her first."

OF SPECIAL INTEREST.

Ladies should never attend a Matinee at the Grand Opera House without promenading to Ehrichs', on the next block above, between 24th & 25th Sts.

THE SPECIAL ATTENTION OF THE ladies is called to the advertisement of Perse's on the last page of this journal. A visit to their handsome and exclusive Millinery establishment will not only be found interesting, but also very profitable.

OF GREAT IMPORTANCE TO THE Ladies! One block above the Grand Opera House, stands the great Dry Goods Establishment of Ehrichs'.

Weber Piano.

It is pleasant to record the extraordinary success which is attending the manufacture and sale of the Weber piano. Albert Weber, Jr., has brought to the business just those qualities which enable him to carry on the magnificent enterprise which his father built up. So rapidly and surely has the business expanded that it has been found necessary to add to the already enormous manufacturing facilities. One of the immediate causes of the expansion of the trade is the success which the new baby grand piano has met with. To meet the public demands for grands this unique instrument has been devised. It embodies the power strength, scope and sweetness of the larger instrument, but is offered at a reduced price, and its size and beauty make it preferable as an article of beauty to the square or the once popular upright. Mr. Albert Weber, Jr., appeared to have set out with the determination to put a grand piano in every American house. To do this he had to force the upright out of the market, and this was no easy task, seeing that the upright, from its shape and price, has been the most convenient form of instrument. It is only a few years ago that a grand piano was rarely seen outside of the concert room. In a very few years more, if Mr. Weber keeps on at his present pace, no other than grands will be seen any where. The accredited friend of the family of this house enables it to carry on the task successfully. The Weber piano stands first in the ranks of American instruments, and the manufacturer who produces it, long ago outstripped most of his competitors in empire and skill.

About Cigarettes.

Cigarettes have of late, become an important article of manufacture. There was a time when only Spaniards and Cubans smoked cigarettes, and when you saw a thamb and forefinger of a rich mahogany color, you put down your man as a foreigner. The cigarettes smoked some ten or fifteen years ago were either rolled fresh by the smoker with Turkish tobacco and rice paper, or, being already rolled by the Cuban manufacturer, they had to be re-rolled before they could be smoked. In the former case it is very loosely rolled, is filled with the rawest pieces of tobacco, and the paper is very thick. It has, however a very pleasant odor, and if it wasn't for the bother of doctoring it and the high price, would be more generally used. It did not take fascinating Americans long to appreciate that there were elements of popularity in the cigarette, and their manufacture was begun in a small way, only to increase to immense proportions. One of the largest manufacturers in America is Kinney Bros., of New York City, whose factory occupies five large buildings, 515 to 525 West 23d St., where the best imported Turkish tobacco is bought and manufactured, hundreds of hundred girls constantly employed. The have to be be active to accomplish what they do, for five hundred thousand cigarettes a day is the average number turned out. That is somewhere near one hundred million a year. The house makes almost as many cigarettes for exportation as for home consumption.—Boston Gazette.

A gushing poetess begins, "All that I want is a single hour." This would seem to indicate that she hold the ten, jack, queen and king of that suit, and was drawing for the ace.

TROUBLED WITH INSOMNIA.—Gentleman—Yon look tired and worn out, Uncle Rastus. Uncle Rastus—Yes, sah, I is; I doan git no sleep. Gentleman—No sleep? Uncle Rastus—No, sah; dis darkey ain't git no sleep in de watermelon season.

"Habit" is hard to overcome. If you take off the first letter it does not change "a bit." If you take another you still have a "bit" left. If you take off another the whole of "it" remains. If you take off another it is not "t" hardly worth up. All of which goes to show that if you wish to be rid of a "habit" you must throw it off altogether.

"Just one," said the lover as he stood upon the stoop with his girl, "just one?" "Just one," said the mother," putting her head out of the bedroom window above; "well, I guess it aint so late as that, but it's pretty near twelve and you'd better be going or her father will be down."

And the lover took his leave with a sad pain at his heart.—Boston Courier.

A writer has discovered that persons in captivity live a very short time. This may be a rule; but we know of some married men who have attained a remarkable age.

Matchless in beauty, superb in quality, artistic in design. Therein lies the power which creates such a demand for the fall shapes of gentlemen's hats issued by Knox "the" Hatter, 212 Broadway, 194 Fifth Avenue; 340 Fulton Street, Brooklyn.

GRANDS, SQUARES AND UPRIGHTS.

Weber's Complete Triumph at the United States Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876.

Read the wonderful Official Report, being the basis of the United States Centennial award decreed to ALBERT WEBER, NEW YORK, FOR GRAND, SQUARE & UPRIGHT PIANOS.

REPORT: "For sympathetic, pure and rich Tone, combined with greatest power (as shown in their Grand, Square and Upright Pianos). These three styles show intelligence and solidity in their construction, a pliant and easy touch which, at the same time, answers promptly to its requirements, together with excellence of workmanship."

A. T. GOSHERN, Director-General. J. R. HAWLEY, President.

Attest. (Seal.) J. L. CAMPBELL, Secretary.

THE WEBER GRAND PIANOS REACHED THE HIGHEST AVERAGE OVER ALL COMPETITORS, 95 OUT OF A POSSIBLE 96; NEXT HIGHEST ON GRAND PIANOS AT 91.

Read what the Great Musical Authorities of the World say of these Wonderful Pianofortes:

NILLSSON.—I shall take every opportunity to recommend and praise your instruments.

PATTI.—I have used the pianos of every celebrated maker, but give yours the preference over all.

ALBANI.—Your Pianos deservedly merit the high distinction they have obtained.

LUCCA.—Your Uprights are extraordinary instruments, and deserve their great success.

KELLOGG.—For the last six years your Pianos have been my choice for the Concert Room and my own house.

MURSKA.—Your instruments surpass my expectations; and I rank you justly as the foremost manufacturer of the day.

MARIE ROSE.—I have frequently heard in Europe about the wonderful tone of your Pianos, but must confess they surpass my expectations, and fully merit their great reputation.

THURSBY.—The tone of the Weber Piano is so sweet, rich, sympathetic, yet so full, that I always rank you as the greatest manufacturer of the day.

CARY.—The sympathetic richness and brilliancy of tone of the Weber Pianos, combined with delicacy and ease of touch, make it the most valuable acquisition amongst my musical household goods.

RIVE KING.—Allow me to congratulate you on your having the finest Grand Piano I have ever placed my fingers on. I am astonished and delighted.

STRAUSS.—Your Pianos astonish me; I assure you that I have never yet seen any pianos which equal yours.

ROSSINI.—For sympathetic purity of tone, durability and extraordinary power, evenness of action and beauty of touch, the Weber Piano surpasses any piano I have ever seen, either in America or in Europe.

CARENNO.—I am not greatly surprised at the fact that every great artist prefers them, for they are truly noble instruments in tone, having a touch which meets every requirement of the most exacting artists, and their endurance and keeping in tune has often surprised me.

AND HUNDREDS OTHERS OF LIKE CHARACTER.

☞ The Weber Piano is constructed from the musician's standpoint as well as that of the mechanic; hence these instruments are distinguished from all others by that pure and sympathetic quality of tone that contains the greatest musical possibilities: that consummation of mechanical excellence that admits of the most delicate and impressive effects, while insuring the durability of the instrument, and that uniform superiority that enhances the pleasure of both performer and listener.

Constructed from the very best materials, and employing only the most skillful workmanship, these instruments combine the highest achievements in the art of Piano making, and are comprehensively the best now made, and, because of their Great Durability, Power, and Sweetness of Tone, they are the choice of the leading artists and the favorites of the concert room.

IRISH SPINNING WHEEL SONG.

Show me a sight
Bates for delight
An auld Irish wheel with a young Irish girl at it.
O ! No !
Nothin' you'll show
A quish her stilts and takin' a twirl at it.

Look at her there,
Night in her hair—
The blue ray of day from her eye laughing out on me!
Fair, an' a fine,
Perfect of feet
People' to put an end in all finkie to me,
That there's a sight, etc.

How the lamb's wool
Turns coarse and dull
By these soft, beautiful, wendsy, white hands of her!
Down goes her heel,
Knee! runs the reel,
Purrin' wee pleasure to take the commands of her.
Thus show me the sight, etc.

Talk of Three fates,
Sealed on seam,
Spinnin' and shearin' away till they're done for me,
You may want three
For your measure;
But one isle for me, boys, and only the one for me.

And
Isn't that fate,
Pictured complete—
An auld Irish wheel and a young Irish girl at it
O ! No !
Nothin' you'll show
A quash her stilts' and takin' a twirl at it.

Why does the continual rule of Queen Victoria cause a greater damp in England than the death of Prince Albert? Because the Prince was only missed (mist), while the queen is always reigning (raining.)

"Are you a married woman?" said Justice Murray to a "fair, fat and forty" would-be bride. "No sir ee, not by a jig full. I was married seven times afore this ; but yer see, judge, four of the durned chaps skipped out and the other three air dead. And so I'm going to git spliced to this 'ere fellow what I know'll stick for me fur all he is worth."

A young man in our town sent sixty cents to a firm that advertised a recipe to prevent bad dreams. He received a slip of paper on which was written, "Don't go to sleep." The same firm advertised, for one dollar, an effectual mode to prevent horses from slobbering. To all who were foolish enough to send him a dollar, he replied, "Touch your horse to spit."

A Boy Again.

Sometimes an old man becomes a boy again, though too smart to drop into his second childhood. An illustration of this pleasant tendency was given, not many months since, by an old man, with several millions.

He was in the habit of prowling around the office of the insurance company in which he was a director. One morning as he was thus investigating, he happened to come across the dinner pail of the office boy. His curiosity led him to take off the cover. A slice of home-made bread, two doughnuts and a piece of apple-pie tempted the millionaire's appetite. He became a boy again, and the dinner-pail seemed the one he had carried sixty years ago.

Just then the office boy came in and surprised the old man eating the pie. He had finished the bread and doughnuts.

"That's my dinner you're eating!" exclaimed the boy, indignantly.

"Yes, sonny, I suspect it may be; but it's a first-rate one for all that. I've not eaten so good a one for sixty years."

"There," he added, as he finished the pie, "take that and go out and buy yourself a dinner; but you won't get as good a one," and he handed the boy a five dollar bill.

For days after, the old man kept referring to the first-class dinner he had eaten from the boy's pail.

Chicago ladies remember the numbers of cars whose conductors are rude to them, and never afterwards ride in them.

Why is it that the same people who like red herrin' never like to see any victuals with red hair in?

"How do you like the character of St. Paul?" asked a parson of his landlady one day, during a conversation about the old saints and the apostles. "Ah, he was a good clever old soul, I know," replied the landlady, "for he once said, you know, that we must eat what is set before us, and ask no questions for conscience sake. I always thought I should like him for a boarder."

A creditor who had given his debtor a week to contrive some plan to meet his obligations, called at the expiration of the period and politely asked: "Have you thought over that matter yet?" "Not exactly," responded the debtor, with a troubled look. "You see, I wanted to think over it a great deal, but my doctor told me that I mustn't do any brain-work."

"By Gawge, gentlemen, I had a delightful dream last night. I dwemt, yer know, that I was invited to a banquet. The table was loaded down with tempting viands and costly wines. Ah! it was a delicious dweam." Just at this moment a hungry looking tramp, who had passed to listen, exclaimed: "I say, Mister, if that's the sort of dreams you have, I'd like to hunk with you tonight."

What Ada Rehan says about 'Bovinine.'

An unsolicited tribute is always the most convincing. In conversation with a friend Miss Ada Rehan said recently that she never fears the fatigues of extra rehearsals or her usual stage duties so long as she has Bovinine. She depends absolutely on this valuable preparation, and derives from it immediate and lasting benefit. It is a fluid food, containing the vital principles of beef; is palatable, can be assimilated by the most delicate stomachs and is stimulating without the after depression of wine.

HELD IN SLAVERY

WEDNESDAY—MATINEES—SATURDAY

◆●◆ Extra Matinee, Tuesday, July 4th, at 2 P. M. ◆●◆

Commencing Monday, July 3rd, with Special Matinee, Tuesday, July 4th. "Held in Slavery" will be the week's attraction at the Grand Opera House and will bring the regular season at that popular Theatre to a close.

"Held in Slavery" was recently seen at the Columbus Theatre, Harlem, where it made a most favorable impression.

Many new and pleasing specialties are introduced during the play forming a combination of mirth, music, song and sentiment.

The Special scenery is very elaborate and include a most realistic fine scene and a storm tossed sail boat at sea in in a rainstorm of real water.

Martin Hayden, the author of "Held in Slavery, heads the cast which is an unusually capable one.

NEW YORK TO SAN FRANCISCO WITHOUT CHANGE OF CARS.

THE MANAGEMENT of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company beg to announce the inauguration of through sleeping-car service over the Vanderbilt lines between New York and Boston and the Pacific Coast. Heretofore the traveler making the journey in either direction has been obliged to transfer at Chicago, St. Louis or the Missouri River gateways, but under the new arrangement he can occupy the same car through from starting point to destination without any additional expense, and be relieved of the necessity of changing cars, looking after connections, reserving accomodations from point to point, and other troublesome details of a trans-continental trip.

Commencing January 5, 1892, and on each Tuesday thereafter, a Palace Buffet Sleeping-Car, containing twelve sections, a Drawing-Room and Buffet, will leave Grand Central Station, New York, on the North Shore Limited at 4.50 P.M., and run through to San Francisco without change.

The schedule has been so arranged that the car will be carried through on fast express trains equipped with dining cars, so that regular meals may be had in transit or a la carte in the buffet car, as may be desired, a feature that will be appreciated by ladies and children. Luncheon as per menu, and the choicest wines and cigars will be served from the buffet at all hours.

The several routes have been carefully selected with reference to their scenic attractions, in order to afford tourists every opportunity for witnessing the great natural wonders of the continent, its principal cities, interesting physical and political divisions, etc.

The acceptance of both one-way and return tickets, gives tourists the benefit of a through service without requiring the prepayment of a sufficient sum to cover all expenses contingent on a trip of several weeks or months duration. Passage and berth tickets only being required, all other expenses while in transit or sojourning in California are left discretionary with the traveler, who not being obliged to conform to a regular itinerary, is thus enabled to go and come at pleasure, patronizing such hotels and lines as may best suit his convenience.

A special conductor will accompany the car on each trip, and do all in his power to insure the comfort and pleasure of passengers. For further particulars call on or address

A Definition.

"Can any one in the class give a definition of the word 'parasite?'" asked the teacher.

There was no response, and she proceeded to define it herself.

"A parasite is a creature that lives on its fellow creatures. Now remember, children. What is a parasite?"

And a little boy with a thoughtful, Emersonian cast of countenance stood up and said:

"A parasite is a cannibal."—Philadelphia Times.

A Sweet Find.

"There's nothing half so sweet in life
As love's young dream;"
Except, perhaps, the feeling sweet
That thrills you through, from head to feet,
When in your winter overcoat
You find an old two dollar note,
Left in the pocket since last year.
You take it out, twixt hope and fear,
And, finding it is really good,
With joy you scream.

—New York Herald.

The Ignorance of Man.

Inventor—Oh, the fatality of things! Here I have an invulnerable, nonatmospheric, spectacular, refrective, nonreverberating, nonoscillatory watch, perfect in detail and mechanism, and yet I am almost starving.

Friend—Why don't you sell the patent?

Inventor—The fools won't buy it. Just because it won't keep time. The driveling idiots!—Jewelers' Circular.

Added to His Burdens.

Mrs. Bizziman—Yes, indeed, my husband is just about dead with work.

Sympathizing Friend—Dear me, I hoped it would be easier for him now. You told me last week that he had engaged a secretary.

Mrs. Bizziman—That's just the trouble. He has to work so hard to keep the secretary busy that it is wearing him out.—Boston Post.

A stony, waterless region of France has evolved a race of animals that do not drink. The sheep, feeding upon the fragrant herbs, have altogether unlearned the habit of drinking and the cows drink very little. The much esteemed Roquefort cheese is made from the milk of the nondrinking ewes.

AUXILIATOR FOR THE HAIR.

The difficulty which has been found heretofore in the manufacture of an auxiliator for the hair, on account of the impossibility of procuring through ordinary processes of manufacture a product that would remain perfectly fresh and unalterable and free from products of decomposition, has induced Mr. Westphal to cause investigations to be made in some of the foremost laboratories, with the purpose in view of procuring a pure article of this kind. He has succeeded, and his preparation has become very popular.

For the preservation and production of the beauty and growth of the hair, securing the luxuriance of the hair, keeping the head cool, allaying the itching and fever of the scalp and giving a rich gloss to the hair, it has no equal. It will free the head from all dandruff immediately and is a perfect hair dressing for ladies and gentlemen, being highly perfumed and free from oil. Gus Heege, the dialect comedian, who plays the title role in "Yon Yonson," tells a good story about two sons of Sweden who were engaged in painting a building. They had mounted the scaffold and had been at work some time when Peterson arose to adjust one of the guy ropes that secured [illegible] ... became composed mostly of sheet iron, shavings and light building material. The crash could have been heard for miles, but the pliability of the material probably saved the unfortunate son of Scandinavia from instant death. Yonson, his partner, out of fear of losing his job, kept right on with his work until called down by an angry crowd that had gathered around the wounded man. A doctor having been summoned it was found that Peterson was covered with bodily bruises, both arms were broken, one hip was fractured, and a leg was dislocated at the knee. After several hours he began to regain consciousness, and his first words after recognizing his calum, were: "Yon, yo' tank das boss is mad because ay quit work?"

NEW YORK, FEB. 15–20, 1892.

Love never has to go to school to learn how to speak.

Where hard work kills one man worry buries a dozen.

No wound can be so deep as the one inflicted by a friend.

The man who borrows trouble always has to pay big interest.

Our mistakes can tell us something very much to our advantage, if we will but listen to them.

When a man starts out to reform himself he has undertaken a job that will keep him busy for life.

Trip the devil up anywhere and you will find a great many highly respectable people hiding behind him.

Don't pray too long in church on a cold day if your horse is standing outside in the storm without a blanket.—Ram's Horn.

In spite of the many new developers that are being tried nowadays "pyro" still holds its reputation among the amateurs.

Mr. Von Mumm, of the German legation, the amateur photographer of the diplomatic corps, has taken the pictures of all the Washington belles, and shows them in an album on which his coat of arms is emblazoned.

A lens with a 34-inch aperture and focal length of eleven feet is to be fitted in the immense photographic telescope for Harvard university by Alvan Clark & Sons. It is to be the finest instrument of its kind ever constructed.

Photography at the Paris exposition was forbidden, but there were very few Americans with cameras who did not secure all the pictures they desired. Of course they could carry lunch baskets, and the amateurs put their cameras in them, and by cutting a hole in the side they were ready.

Miss Alice Longfellow, daughter of the poet, is said to be the best amateur photographer in America. Her favorite field of operations is along the Massachusetts coast, and her snap shots there, taken in the stormiest weather, are attracting the attention of publishers, and her illustrated songs will be a feature of a new book of ess songs.

William Pitt entered the ministry at 14, was chancellor of the exchequer at 22, prime minister at 24, and so continued for twenty years, and when 35 was the most powerful uncrowned head in Europe.—Young Men's Era.

NEW YORK TO SAN FRANCISCO WITHOUT CHANGE OF CARS.

THE MANAGEMENT of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company beg to announce the inauguration of through sleeping-car service over the Vanderbilt lines between New York and Boston and the Pacific Coast. Heretofore the traveler making the journey in either direction has been obliged to transfer at Chicago, St. Louis or the Missouri River gateways, but under the new arrangement he can occupy the same car through from starting point to destination without any additional expense, and be relieved of the necessity of changing cars, looking after connections, reserving accomodations from point to point, and other troublesome details of a trans-continental trip.

Commencing January 5, 1892, and on each Tuesday thereafter, a Palace Buffet Sleeping-Car, containing twelve sections, a Drawing-Room and Buffet, will leave Grand Central Station, New York, on the North Shore Limited at 4.30 P.M., and run through to San Francisco without change.

The schedule has been so arranged that the car will be carried through on fast express trains equipped with dining cars, so that regular meals may be had in transit or a la carte in the buffet car, as may be desired, a feature that will be appreciated by ladies and children. Luncheon as per menu, and the choicest wines and cigars will be served from the buffet at all hours.

The several routes have been carefully selected with reference to their scenic attractions, in order to afford tourists every opportunity for witnessing the great natural wonders of the continent, its principal cities, interesting physical and political divisions, etc.

The acceptance of both one-way and return tickets, gives tourists the benefit of a through service without requiring the prepayment of a sufficient sum to cover all expenses contingent on a trip of several weeks or months duration. Passage and berth tickets only being required, all other expenses while in transit or sojourning in California are left discretionary with the traveler, who not being obliged to conform to a regular itinerary, is thus enabled to go and come at pleasure, patronizing such hotels and lines as may best suit his convenience.

A special conductor will accompany the car on each trip, and do all in his power to insure the comfort and pleasure of passengers. For further particulars call on or address

Pr'aps yer think he ain't a hummer, can't jest trot er bit;
Think we hev a 'crost roads wonder, air clean out of it?
Ef he can't go down in twenty 'pinous still air free,
An we're bankin that he'll do it—little Chris 'n me.

Tell yer how we kim ter git him? Course 'twas by in or trade.
An we did the same lively hustlin till that deal was made
Fur he had a sassy look—well guited—don't yer see?
An he ain't the most powerful holte on little Chris 'n me.

Kin he trot? Well, may I flutter in the darkened cell
If he ain't a streak of lightnin snowflakes dartin et the flowers in springtime or the busy bee.

AUXILIATOR FOR THE HAIR.

The difficulty which has been found heretofore in the manufacture of an auxiliator for the hair, on account of the impossibility of procuring through ordinary processes of manufacture a product that would remain perfectly fresh and unalterable and free from products of decomposition, has induced Mr. Westphal to cause investigations to be made in some of the foremost laboratories, with the purpose in view of procuring a pure article of this kind. He has succeeded, and his preparation has become very popular.

For the preservation and production of the luxury and growth and restoring the coloration of the hair, curing the head cool, alleying hair falling, the nervousness of the scalp and giving a rich gloss to the hair, it has no equal. It will free the head from all dandruff immediately and is a perfect hair dressing for ladies and gentlemen. It is highly perfumed and free from oil. If your druggist or dealer does not keep Westphal's Auxiliator, write to him for it. Prices are 50c. and $1.00 per bottle. Manufactured only by Paul Westphal, 393 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.

Lord Bacon graduated at Cambridge at 16, and was called to the bar at 21.

Peel was in parliament at 21, and Palmerston was lord of the admiralty at 25.

Henry Clay was in the senate of the United States, contrary to the constitution, at 29.

Judge Story was at Harvard at 15, in congress at 29 and judge of the supreme court of the United States at 32.

Martin Luther had become largely distinguished at 34, and at 36 had reached the topmost round of his world wide fame.

Washington was a distinguished colonel in the army at 23, early in public affairs, commander of the forces at 42, president at 57.

Webster was in college at 15, gave evidence of his great future before he was 25 and at 30 he was the peer of the ablest man in congress.

Maurice of Saxony died at 32, conceded to have been one of the profoundest statesmen and one of the best generals Christendom had seen.

Napoleon at 25 commanded the army of Italy. At 30 he was not sharp of the most illustrious generals of the time, but one of the great lawgivers of the world. At 46 he saw Waterloo.

CROWN AND SCEPTER.

Grand Dukes Vladimir and Alexis of Russia recently visited the slums of Paris under the escort of M. Rossignol, of the detective department.

The engagement of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale (Collars and Cuffs), their presumptive to the English throne, to Princess Victoria Mary of Teck is announced.

It is told on high authority that Queen Victoria's favorite scents are patchouli and marechale. Those famous Indian shawls which she gives as wedding presents are perfumed with marechale.

Emperor Wilhelm's latest freak is a project for a grand cathedral in Berlin to cost 10,000,000 marks. It is to be for the state religion. He is also bent on establishing an "imperial cooking school."

The queen of Portugal is accredited by fashion leaders with being the most dressy woman in Europe. Her pale complexion and auburn hair admit of great latitude in dress variety, and she indulges in every caprice of fashion.

The Grand Duke of Baden is a great fancier of carrier pigeons, and has devoted much time to raising and training them. In the exhibition of such birds, held recently in Bochum, his royal highness secured one of the first prizes.

The shah of Persia drinks a bottle of brandy a day, and uses much hashish and opium. The child that he brought to Europe with him, the son of his cook, is now his most small irresponsible grand vizier. The masses of the people are beginning to be dissatisfied.

The little Queen Wilhelmina of Holland must read a chapter from the Bible every morning to her mother, and patiently stitch away at the embroidery and fine needlework, but she is devoted to her pigeons, her garden and especially her dolls, with which she has little time to play.

The young empress of China, contrary to all traditional customs, is taking a prominent place in public life. Formerly no one was permitted to appear on the road traversed by her majesty under penalty of death. Now the emperor permits his subjects to line the streets when he and his consort travel and to approach them with petitions, to which they listen in the kindest manner.

THINGS WELL SAID.

"Courageous, intelligent persistent advertising means the largest possible success in any particular line."

"He who in the world would rise, must either fail or advertise."

"Your advertisement is your representative."

"Non-advertising means the limitation of business to personal influence."

"Circulars hit only once, if at all, and are then consigned to the waste basket."

"Don't advertise spasmodically—keep at it. Your particular line of goods may not be wanted to-day; they will be sought to morrow, or the day after."

"Advertising is an eloquent and effective 'salesman'—distinguished from the verbal salesman in this, that while the latter talks to one customer the advertising salesman is talking to tens, possibly hundreds, of thousands."

NEW YORK TO SAN FRANCISCO WITHOUT CHANGE OF CARS.

THE MANAGEMENT of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company beg to announce the inauguration of through sleeping-car service over the Vanderbilt lines between New York and Boston and the Pacific Coast. Heretofore the traveler making the journey in either direction has been obliged to transfer at Chicago, St. Louis or the Missouri River gateways, but under the new arrangement he can occupy the same car through from starting point to destination without any additional expense, and be relieved of the necessity of changing cars, looking after connections, reserving accomodations from point to point, and other troublesome details of a trans-continental trip.

Commencing January 5, 1892, and on each Tuesday thereafter, a Palace Buffet Sleeping-Car, containing twelve sections, a Drawing-Room and Buffet, will leave Grand Central Station, New York, on the North Shore Limited at 4.50 P.M., and run through to San Francisco without change.

The schedule has been so arranged that the car will be carried through on fast express trains equipped with dining cars, so that regular meals may be had in transit or a la carte in the buffet car, as may be desired, a feature that will be appreciated by ladies and children. Luncheon as per menu, and the choicest wines and cigars will be served from the buffet at all hours.

The several routes have been carefully selected with reference to their scenic attractions, in order to afford tourists every opportunity for witnessing the great natural wonders of the continent, its principal cities, interesting physical and political divisions, etc.

The acceptance of both one-way and return tickets, gives tourists the benefit of a through service without requiring the prepayment of a sufficient sum to cover all expenses contingent on a trip of several weeks or months duration. Passage and berth tickets only being required, all other expenses while in transit or sojourning in California are left discretionary with the traveler, who not being obliged to conform to a regular itinerary, is thus enabled to go and come at pleasure, patronizing such hotels and lines as may best suit his convenience.

A special conductor will accompany the car on each trip, and do all in his power to insure the comfort and pleasure of passengers. For further particulars call on or address

FEMININE FANCIES.

Mrs. Russell Sage is said to be a model presiding officer at business meetings of women's societies or clubs. She looks much younger than she really is.

Mrs. Levi P. Morton, the wife of the vice president, has a decided love for the essence of wild crab apple blossoms and sprinkles it all over her clothing.

Mrs. Taylor, of Little Washington, Pa., is known as the oil queen because she has accumulated a fortune of $5,000,000 by personal investments in the Ritchie county fields.

Vocalists in church choirs sometimes get small fortunes for little work. Miss Ida Gray, a New York soprano, receives $5,000 a year for her vocal efforts in a fashionable church.

One of the best mining experts of Arizona is Neille Cashman, a tall, dark eyed young woman less than thirty. She is known all over the state as a most reliable worker.

Mrs. J. S. Clarkson knows every politician of any note in the country and stands between her husband and them on important occasions. Her judgment is conceded to surpass that of many a political man.

The Princess Louise and Mrs. Harrison are the only women who have ever been allowed to set foot within the cloisters of the monastery of Santa Barbara, in California, and even after their visits the ground was resanctified.

The only works of fiction that Miss Rachel Sherman, the general's daughter, is said to enjoy are the novels of Thackeray. She is a great student of history and biography. She has dark eyes, luxurious auburn hair and a clear, pale complexion.

Mrs. Spurgeon takes actual charge of all the funds which are intrusted to her husband for keeping. The orphan asylums, missions and special institutions funded, for which Mr. Spurgeon is sponsor, and for which money is sent to him, are all handed over to Mrs. Spurgeon for safe keeping.

Mrs. Orme Wilson, the third daughter of Mrs. William Astor, loves heliotrope dearly. She says that flower, she loves the color, she loves the perfume. She uses the extract liberally, but it is a modified extract, specially made to her order, the one usually sold being too pungent for her dainty taste.

AUXILIATOR FOR THE HAIR.
The difficulty which has been found heretofore in the manufacture of an auxiliator to the hair, on account of the impossibility of procuring through ordinary processes of manufacture a product that would remain perfectly fresh and unalterable and free from products of decomposition, has induced Mr. Paul Westphal to cause investigations to be made in some of the foremost laboratories, with the purpose in view of procuring a pure article of the kind. He has succeeded, and his preparation has become very popular.

For the preservation and promotion of the beauty and growth and securing the restoration of the hair, keeping the head cool, curing the itching and dryness of the scalp and giving a rich gloss to the hair, it has no equal. It will free the head from all dandruff immediately and is a certain hair dressing for ladies and gentlemen. It is highly perfumed and free from oil. If your druggist or dealer does not keep Westphal's Auxiliator, write to him for it. Prices are 50c. and $1.00 per bottle. Manufactured only by Paul Westphal, 253 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.

EVANS & HOEY
IN THE NEW PARLOR MATCH!

Commencing next Monday evening the well known comedians, Evans and Hoey, will commence an engagement at this Theatre which will include the regular performances of the week, and the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

"A Parlor Match" is one of the most successful of the many farce comedies which grace the boards of the different Theatres in this city, and is certainly one of the most pleasing of this style of entertainment.

It has been well received many times in this city, and such engagement has been synonymous of a series of new and artistic specialties.

While not aspiring to the plane of legitimate comedy, Evans and Hoey claim this piece to be one of the most amusing entertainments ever given in this country, and their claim has been substantiated by a series of large and enthusiastic audiences, who are at all times ready to laugh at the very grotesque comedy work of "Mad Orker" Evans, and the odd, eccentric and curious humor of "Old Hoss" Hoey.

While it is entirely superfluous for the management to say anything in the way of introduction of these two paramount comedians, it is nevertheless a great pleasure to announce them, for no more popular and satisfying attraction visits the boards of the Grand Opera House. They come this season with a particularly strong company in which there are many changes to be noted since their last appearance here. The news that Minnie French, the most famous of all the "Tan-sent Kidds" that has ever appeared in this famous farce comedy, who will again be seen with the company, will also create a deal of enthusiasm. There is a new male quartette, which is much better than any ever before employed by Evans and Hoey, and then there are the stately, statuesque and bewilderingly beautiful Levy Sisters, three versatile graces. They have a number of new character sketches and swell songs to offer, and their costumes this season are more beautiful than ever.

Mr. William Hoey has added several new songs to his extensive repertory, and in the last act of "A Parlor Match" he will warble his latest effort, entitled "It's A Job Lot," which is said to be even more funny than his well known effort, "They're After Me" which became so popular in this city last season that the entire audience was moved to join the festive comedian in the chorus. The company is replete with a large stock of new gags, puns and music, and the specialties are of a high and interesting order. For a good, hearty laugh, and an evening's enjoyment, the frolic of The New Parlor Match is advised.

EVANS & HOEY.

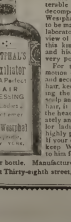
AUXILIATOR FOR THE HAIR.

The difficulty which has been found heretofore in the manufacture of an auxiliator for the hair, on account of the impossibility of procuring through ordinary processes of manufacture a product that would remain perfectly fresh and unobjectionable and free from products of decomposition, has induced Mr. Westphal to cause investigations to be made in some of the foremost laboratories, with the purpose in view of procuring a pure article of this kind. He has succeeded, and his preparation has become very popular.



For the preservation and promotion of the beauty and growth of the hair, the assistance of the best keeping the head cool, allaying all irritation of the scalp, and giving a rich gloss to the hair, it has no equal. It will free the head from all dandruff immediately and is a perfect hair dressing for ladies and gentlemen. It is highly perfumed and free from oil. If your druggist or dealer does not keep Westphal's Auxiliator, write to him for it. Prices are 50c. and $1.00 per bottle. Manufactured only by Paul Westphal, 303 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.

AUXILIATOR FOR THE HAIR.

The difficulty which has been found heretofore in the manufacture of an auxiliator for hair, on account of the impossibility of procuring through ordinary processes of manufacture a product that would remain perfectly fresh and unobjectionable and free from products of decomposition, has induced Mr. Westphal to cause investigations to be made in some of the foremost laboratories, with the purpose in view of procuring a pure article of this kind. He has succeeded, and his preparation has become very popular.

For the preservation and promotion of the beauty and growth and restoring the restoration of the hair, keeping the head cool, allaying itching and fever of the scalp and giving a rich gloss to the hair, it has no equal. It will free the head from all dandruff immediately and is a perfect hair dressing for ladies and gentlemen. It is highly perfumed and free from oil. If your druggist or dealer does not keep Westphal's Auxiliator, write to him for it. Prices are 50c. and $1.00 per bottle. Manufactured only by Paul Westphal, 323 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.

Gold finds increased favor in ladies' hats and dresses.

A nice baby mantle of plaque has the skirt portion laid in hollow folds.

A pretty waist is made of bengaline trimmed with Chantilly lace.

Babyeisses come into use whenever dresses are, as at present, worn long.

Blouses are greatly worn. Light zephyrs and mousseline de laine are the materials.

In children's hats the Heligoland style leads, as it affords protection against the sun's rays.

Serviteurs, washable and heavily starched, of plain white or colored cretonne, are quite popular.

For winter children's capotes will be favorites. These styles are very nice with ruche borders.

THINGS WELL SAID.

"Courageous, unintelligent persistent advertising means the largest possible success in any particular line.

"He who in the world would rise, must either fail or advertise."

"Your advertisement is your representative."

"Non-advertising means the limitation of business to personal influence."

"Circulars hit only once, if at all, and are then consigned to the waste basket."

"Don't advertise spasmodically—keep at it. Your particular line of goods may not be wanted to-day; they will be sought to-morrow, or the day after."

"Advertising is an eloquent and effective 'salesman'—distinguished from the verbal salesman in this, that while the latter talks to one customer the advertising salesman is talking to tens, possibly hundreds, of thousands."

HARRY LACY'S NEW PLAY.

"Jack Royal of the 92d" Scores a Success In Philadelphia.

The production here of Harry Lacy's new play, "Jack Royal of the 92d," at the Park Theatre, was notwithstanding much preliminary. A goodly number of critics and managers from other cities witnessed it and the audience was enthusiastic almost every minute to its finale. It is really a theatrical event in the playgoing history of the big house of the play, it produced a distinct sensation. It is in many parts the "real" kind and is cut up into six quick tableaux with a spare rounding up of situation each. Overhead hangs the atmosphere, without the smoke and carnage of war.

Mr. Wheeler has chosen the draft riots of '63 in New York as the moving material, and the two great pictures of the play are the departure and the sudden return of the regiments to that city. The main crisis takes place in the Manhattan Iron Works, where the plates of the new monitors are being made under government contract. The mob breaks into and destroys the furnaces, and Lieutenant Royal, by a military coup de main, saves the works and the heroine. That scene is a genuine surprise. We have had processions without number on the stage; but never before a mob, lit only by the running metal from two immense retorts.

The popular success of the drama was assured at the ending of the third act, which takes place in what is called "the Orange Tunnel," and where the hero is rescued by the Ninety-second Regiment, "one thousand strong, and every man an American workingman."

Mr. Harry Lacy made a pronounced impression by the intense but restrained nervousness of emotion at facial reveal, which was really resented by the congratulations of his friends at the ends of the third act.

Mr. Wheeler, the author of this drama, has gone straight to the most effective points—can and has used every stilt within reach for strengthening the suspense and inviting the sympathy of the observer. It would be very unfair to him to say, however, that he has let the material down to the prevailing style of humor and slush.

The love story is a pretty and heroic one. The characters are strongly contrasted, and the skill of the playwright as a writer comes out in several of the passionate speeches of the hero. There cannot be the slightest doubt of the popular success of the piece. And Mr. Lacy has secured a breadwinner which will last him another five years.

THINGS WELL SAID.

"Courageous, intelligent persistent advertising means the largest possible success in any particular line.

"He who in this world would rise, must either fail or advertise."

"Your advertisement is your representative.

"Newspaper advertising means the annihilation of business as personal influence.

"Circulars in only one case in all, and are then consigned to the waste basket."

"Don't advertise spasmodically—keep at it. Your particular line of goods is may not be wanted to-day: they will be sought to-morrow, or the day after."

"Advertising is an eloquent and effective salesman—distinguished from the verbal salesman in this, that while the latter talks to one customer the advertising salesman is talking to tens, possibly hundreds, of thousands."

AUXILIATOR FOR THE HAIR.

The difficulty which has been found heretofore in the manufacture of an auxiliator for the hair, on account of the impossibility of procuring through ordinary processes of manufacture a product that would remain perfectly fresh and undeteriorable and free from precipitation, induced Mr. Paul Westphal to cause investigations to be made in some of the foremost laboratories, with the purpose in view of procuring a pure article of this kind. He has succeeded, and his preparation has become very popular.

For the preservation and promotion of the beauty and growth and securing the restoration of the hair, keeping the head cool, allaying the itching and fever of the scalp and giving a rich gloss to the hair, it has no equal. It will free the head from all dandruff immediately and is a perfect hair dressing for ladies and gentlemen. It is highly perfumed and free from oil. If your druggist or dealer does not keep Westphal's Auxiliator, write to him for it. Prices 50c. and $1.00 per bottle. Manufactured only by Paul Westphal, 323 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.

STAGE GOSSIP.

"THE POWER OF THE PRESS" will be seen here next week. It is an original drama in six acts and thirteen scenes, by Augustus Pitou and George H. Jessop. It was one of the great successes in New York last spring, being played to large audiences for fifty nights at the Star Theatre. The play illustrates the immense influence wielded by the newspaper Press in this day and country, an influence which, as represented in this drama, is almost invariably exerted on the side of right and justice, and in defense of the weak and helpless. The main incident on which the play is founded actually occurred in New York City and was fully reported by the Press. Incidentally the play illustrates afresh the truth of the text, "Evil communications corrupt good manners," and shows the baneful effects of bad company. "The Power of the Press" is a purely local drama, and every scene and character will be readily recognized by all who are familiar with New York City. We are shown the elegant new home of the Manhattan Athletic Club, and the poor tenement dwelling of the working man. We see a great industry, a shipbuilding yard in full operation—and a wharf on the East River with all the shipping. We are also taken to the handsome apartments of a prima donna in a fashionable uptown hotel, to a banker's sanctum on Wall street, to a sailor's shipping office at the corner of Old Slip and South Street and on board of a vessel lying at anchor off the Battery. In fact, the scenery takes full advantage of the many picturesque contrasts presented by New York. The cast includes many well known people who have been selected to successfully represent the parts with which they have been entrusted.

THINGS WELL SAID.

"Courageous, intelligent persistent advertising means the largest possible success in any particular line."

"He who in the world would rise, must either fail or advertise."

"Your advertisement is your representative."

"Non-advertising means the limitation of business to personal influence."

"Circulars hit only once, if at all, and are then consigned to the waste basket."

"Don't advertise spasmodically—keep at it. Your particular line of goods may not be wanted to-day; they will be sought to-morrow, or the day after."

"Advertising is an eloquent and effective 'salesman'—distinguished from the verbal salesman in this, that while the latter talks to one customer the advertising salesman is talking to tens, possibly hundreds, of thousands."

AUXILIATOR FOR THE HAIR.

The difficulty which has been found heretofore in the manufacture of an auxiliator for the hair, on account of the impossibility of procuring through ordinary processes of manufacture a product that would remain perfectly fresh and unalterable and free from products of decomposition, has induced Mr. Westphal to cause investigations to be made in some of the foremost laboratories, with the purpose in view of procuring a pure article of this kind. He has succeeded, and his preparation has become very popular.

For the preservation and promotion of the beauty and growth and securing the restoration of the hair, keeping the head cool, allaying the itching and fever of the scalp and giving a rich gloss to the hair, it has no equal. It will free the head from all dandruff immediately and is a perfect hair dressing for ladies and gentlemen. It is highly perfumed and free from oil. If your druggist or dealer does not keep Westphal's Auxiliator, write to him for it. Prices are 50c. and $1.00 per bottle. Manufactured only by Paul Westphal, 103 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.
